RESCUE FLYER IN MID-OCEAN

CLEAR SUSPECT IN LINDY CASE; SUICIDE PUZZLE

Girl's Death Adds to Strange Events.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—The Lindbergh kidnaping case took another of its dramatic turns tonight and the two latest characters in the sensational developments of the last two days began to appear as victims of circumstances.

The mystery of the automobile ride taken on the night of the kidnaping by Violet Sharpe, the waitress in the Morrow home, who killed herself with poison rather than face the police for the fourth time, was cleared up.

Taxi Driver Suspect Released.

With the added information supplied by other members of the party police began to express doubts that Miss Sharpe had had any knowledge of the kidnaping or that Ernest Brinkert, the New York taxi driver, who was seized last night in New Rochelle as the companion of Miss Sharpe on the night of March 1, ever had been in New Jersey.

Apparently conceding that Brinkert had been exonerated, police released him from custody tonight, but asked him to remain as a "guest" for the night.

Inspector Harry Walsh of Jersey City made the following statement tonight:

"A chap named Ernie Miller, 22 years old, of Closter, N. J., has just told us that he was the 'Ernie' who went riding with Miss Sharpe the night of March 1. He remembers the ride very well and everything that happened on it, and says he cannot understand why she kept it a secret from us.

Two Give Brinkert Alibi.

"We are still holding Brinkert, however. This is a peculiar turn of events. It is no fault of ours. Here we have not only Miller's story, but the story of Miss Catherine Minners of Palisades Park, who was on the ride that night. She says Brinkert was not in the car."

With the change in the aspect of the case against the dead girl and the taxi man, a growing belief arose that Miss Sharpe may have taken poison because she had grown to have a great fear of meeting the police in their Alpine headquarters again rather than because of any guilty knowledge of the abduction or murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Butler Offers Tip.

In an interview after his statement, Inspector Walsh revealed that Miller was found through information given by Septimus Banks, butler in Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow's Englewood home, where the Sharpe girl killed herself.

Banks heard about the White Plains, N. Y., taxi driver named Brinkert being brought into the case this morning. He at once recalled that the Sharpe girl had known a New Jersey youth named Ernest Miller. Banks went to Walsh with this information.

A detective was sent for Miller who lives only a few miles from the troopers' barracks. He was located and brought to Alpine. Miss Minners came in a few hours later.

Girl Tells of Kidnap Night.

The Minners girl said her companion on the automobile ride was Elmer Johnson of Closter, the inspector said. Miss Minners said she had never seen Violet Sharpe until the night of the ride. Ernie Miller, she said, was a long time acquaintance. She told of visiting the "peanut grill" after the ride and "sitting around until near midnight."

"Brinkert denies he was ever in Jersey," the inspector said, "and he denied flatly that he knew Miss Sharpe or her sister. He said he had never seen them nor heard of them until yesterday. This thing is still pretty much of a puzzle."

Brinkert Waives Immunity.

Brinkert immediately after he was seized insisted he had an alibi, that he was in Bridgeport, Conn., with his wife the night of the kidnaping, but the police were skeptical. They said they had found Brinkert's business cards in Miss Sharpe's room and that she had identified his photograph as the man who went riding with her the night of the kidnaping.

Brinkert, after his story failed to convince the detectives, finally signed a waiver of immunity in New Rochelle police headquarters this morning and voluntarily came to Alpine for questioning. Then Ernest Miller and Miss Minners showed up.

Inspector Walsh, still puzzled over the sudden turn in the case, admitted that the details of the motor ride the

HAUSNER SAVED BY SHIP AFTER FLOATING 8 DAYS

Airman Exhausted, but Uninjured.

LONDON, June 12 [Sunday].—[U. P.]—Stanislaus F. Hausner, Newark, N. J., flyer, who had been given up for dead since last Sunday following his takeoff from New York on June 3 in an attempt to fly nonstop to Warsaw, Poland, was rescued in mid-Atlantic late last night after a week of tossing about on the ocean in his derelict plane.

The young American was picked up exhausted but uninjured by the S. S. Circeshell, a British tanker. He had been forced down about 650 miles due west from the coast of Spain after flying through adverse weather conditions after leaving Newfoundland.

Brief Message Tells Story.

Capt. Wilson, master of the Circeshell, sent the following wireless message to London early today:

"Stanislaus F. Hausner rescued from red Bellanca monoplane, number 7085 [this was the number of Hausner's plane] at 10 p. m. Greenwich time [4 p. m. Chicago daylight saving time] latitude 42.41 north, longitude 20.04 west.

"Monoplane made forced landing at 9 p. m., G. M. T., June 3. Darkness prevented salvage of plane. Airman proceeding with vessel to New Orleans. Due to arrive June 27. Inform Mrs. Hausner, 147 Terhune avenue, Jersey City, N. J. Airman exhausted but uninjured."

The S. S. Leviathan was in communication with the Circeshell and reported that the flyer had sent out a request that the plane be salvaged, if possible.

Wife Is Overjoyed.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Martha Hausner, wife of the trans-Atlantic flyer rescued in mid-ocean tonight, when informed of the rescue at Jersey City jumped up excitedly and exclaimed:

"There, I told you he was too good a pilot to have been killed."

Mrs. Hausner has spent much of her time since the flyer's disappearance praying at a Polish Catholic church. She was at a neighbor's home when news of the rescue reached her. She left a few minutes later without leaving word of where she was going. Her brother, Walter Wages of Jersey City, with whom she has been staying, went out looking for her.

Reports Plane Undamaged.

News of the rescue reached here in a brief wireless message picked up this evening by the Chatham, Mass., station of the Radio Marine Corporation of America. As relayed by the S. S. Leviathan, the message read:

"Airman rescued from derelict red Bellanca monoplane 7085. Monoplane left, with tail up, in position 42:41:18 north, 20:04 west, drifting southeast about one knot. Airman requests any passing vessels endeavor salvage airplane, which is apparently in good condition."

The two dump valves with which gasoline tanks of Hausner's plane were equipped, enabling the pilot to make pontoons of the tanks in the event of a landing on the water, were credited tonight with saving his life by Giuseppe Bellanca, inventor of the type of plane Hausner flew.

"The valves must have worked very well," Mr. Bellanca said. "They are placed on the tanks to enable the pilot to dump his load of gasoline while the plane is in the air. In alighting, however, the valves close, preventing the influx of water and thus forming air pockets to buoy the plane."

Rescue Ship Is Identified.

New Orleans, La., June 11.—[U.P.]—The Circeshell, British tanker which rescued Stanislaus F. Hausner at sea tonight, is bound on her maiden voyage to America, officials of the Dutch Shell company announced here tonight.

The vessel is a new type motor ship, with a crew of 45 men, according to records available here. It carries 100,000 barrels of oil.

Company officials said the Circeshell might make a stop at either the Azores islands, Key West, Fla., New Orleans, or Houston, Tex.

FLEW OLD PLANE.

Stanislaus F. Hausner, 32 year old amateur flyer of Newark, N. J., took off from New York for Warsaw on Friday, June 3. He flew alone in a "second hand" monoplane and swept out over the Atlantic in what was described as the worst flying conditions since Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine took off over the same route five years ago.

After his takeoff a red plane, be-

COLORADO TOWN REJECTS POSTOFFICE UNDER GARNER BILL

Burlington, Colo., June 11.—(AP)—A resolution rejecting the proposal for a $70,000 postoffice building under provision of the Garner relief bill today was forwarded to the Colorado delegation by the Burlington chamber of commerce.

"The citizens of Burlington are far more interested in federal economy than in political log rolling and aggrandizement," said the resolution. "The Garner bill provides for an unnecessary and useless expenditure of funds and is an imposition upon taxpayers."

Rock Springs, Wyo., business men recently passed a similar resolution.

Hoover Asks Further Cuts in U. S. Costs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—President Hoover notified the Republican economy leaders of the senate and house of representatives at a sudden White House conference tonight that another 150 million or 200 million dollars would have to be slashed from the cost of government to balance the budget before congress adjourned.

Members of the conference left the White House with an understanding that the additional amount would have to be obtained through further economies. Some of the conferees declared they did not know where the cuts could be made.

Leaders at Conference.

Present at the White House parley were Senators Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the senate appropriations committee; Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the finance committee; Frederick Hale [Rep., Me.], chairman of the senate naval affairs committee; Representative Will R. Wood [Rep., Ind.], ranking Republican member of the house appropriations committee, and J. Clawson Roop, director of the bureau of the budget.

The President's determination that the budget be balanced before congress adjourns dimmed hopes by some members that all vital legislation could be cleared away by next Saturday or the middle of next week at the latest. As Representative Wood left the White House he expressed the belief that congress would still be in session "on the Fourth of July."

Two definite sources of revenue are at the disposal of congress, the economy bill, which is now tied up in conference between the senate and house, and nine of the eleven regular appropriation bills. Both the economy bill and the appropriation bills were discussed by President Hoover and his congressional conferees.

Naval Cut Possible.

The presence of Senator Hale at the parley, coupled with the fact that the navy department appropriation bill was completed today by the senate naval affairs committee, suggested one source of revenue saving which has been particularly popular with President Hoover throughout his administration.

The other appropriation bills which either have not been taken up by the senate or are locked in difficult conferences are those for the postoffice and treasury departments, department of agriculture, independent offices, second deficiency, war department, and District of Columbia.

Director Roop recommended a number of changes in the economy bill, the nature of which was not announced. The senate economy bill provides for savings aggregating between 126 millions and 128 million dollars, most of which would come from slashes in the pay of government employés through enforced furloughs. As the bill was originally reported to the senate it provided savings amounting to 248 million dollars, but approximately 110 million dollars of this was wiped out by senate amendments.

Deficit Still Mounting.

The prospective government deficit for the fiscal year beginning July 1 has grown steadily since Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills first took the administration's tax bill to congress last winter. The first estimate was for a deficit of one billion 241 millions. Then it was increased to approximately one billion 400 million dollars.

The tax bill which became a law recently provided for $1,118,500,000 of this amount, leaving between $281,500,000 and 300 millions to be made through economies, or slashes in the cost of government.

NAVY DIRIGIBLE AKRON IN DANGER OVER PHOENIX

Phoenix, Ariz., June 12—(AP)—[Sunday.]—The navy dirigible Akron, apparently in difficulty, was circling over Phoenix at 12:45 a. m. Mountain time, today.

The big ship passed over Phoenix at 12:02 a. m., and headed toward Tucson. At Tempe, residents said its motors seemed to be missing and the dirigible headed back toward Phoenix.

Previously, on her return from the west coast to her home hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., she had been speeding along at an 80 mile an hour pace under clear skies and with a tailwind.

'L' Lines Men Vote to Reject 10% Pay Cut

Employés of the Chicago Rapid Transit lines voted last night to reject a proposed 10 per cent wage cut. The proposal was defeated by 124 votes. There was a total of 2,576 votes cast out of a possible 3,500. Against the wage decrease were 1,325 votes. For it were 1,201 votes. Fifty ballots were spoiled.

The vote was held in Car Men's hall, Ashland boulevard and Van Buren street, where, 24 hours earlier, 8,510 employes of the Chicago Surface Lines by a better than 2 to 1 vote approved a 9 per cent slash for themselves, equivalent to 7 cents off their base pay of 77 cents an hour.

Strike Not Expected.

Despite the rejection by the "L" employés, a strike is not looked for. The normal procedure, according to John Bruce, president of the elevated workers' union, will be to notify the rapid transit company and officers of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employés of America at Detroit. The local union, like the street car men's organization, is a member of that association. William Mahon, international president, will probably come to Chicago and try to adjust the disagreement. Should that move fail, arbitration would be the next step, as the last one before a possible strike.

Last night's vote was on the proposal of a one year contract with the right of either party to reopen it at the end of six months on the wage matter only. The proposal provided for the 10 per cent cut, with certain changes in working conditions. At the bottom of each ballot was printed: "To vote against this proposition means that you favor a suspension of work."

All Workers Included.

Motormen, conductors, guards, flagmen, agents, towermen, and others were included in the proposed cut. Motormen receive 79 cents an hour under the old scale, which expired May 31. The scale for the others is: Conductors, 74 cents an hour; guards, 72 cents; agents, $4.77 a day, and flagmen, $4 a day. Towermen receive different rates of pay.

It is possible, observers said, that the surface employés might refuse to accept the 9 per cent cut they voted unless the elevated employés are cut. For years the two services have stood together in wage controversies, having more or less public agreements for united action. There is said to be no such agreement this year.

Chicago Does Its Very Best by the G. O. P.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

"You can't serve this meal right without going back in the kitchen and seeing for yourself that things are right."

So spoke Edward N. Hurley yesterday evening and took his stand in the center of the vast west side Stadium, where the Republican party will open its twentieth national convention at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Mr. Hurley is chairman of the citizens' committee of 140 which last winter secured both the Republican and the Democratic national conventions for Chicago.

"The delegates," the chairman continued as he cast a searching eye over 31,000 square feet of main floor space and aloft to a mezzanine floor and galleries that seat 14,500 persons, "are going to be pleased this time."

Evils of 1920 Are Over.

The emphasis on "this" was a retrospective sideswipe at the outdated, ill ventilated, and unsanitated hall and the extortionate hotel rates which made the Republican convention of 1920—the last convention of a major party which, until now, Chicago had the honor to entertain—an extremely bedraggled feather in this city's cap. Warren Harding, despite the balm of a presidential nomination, went back to Marion so wrung by the extortions that he said, "As long as I am head of the party it will not hold another national convention in Chicago—unless Chicago shows a different spirit."

Twelve years passed without a major party's convention in Chicago. The lesson was not lost upon our city.

A Different Spirit Now.

This year a different spirit prevails. Today the citizens' committee holds the signed agreements, of leading hotels guaranteeing rates ranging from $1.50 to $3 and $4 a day throughout the convention period.

And as to facilities provided by the Stadium Mr. Hurley said:

"This is as satisfactory a structure for convention purposes as there is on this continent.

"Its exits are so numerous that 20,400 persons—which is its convention capacity—can leave it in eight minutes.

"By taxi it can be reached from the downtown hotels in eight minutes, by elevated train in nine minutes, and by motor bus or street car in fifteen minutes."

Hurley Has His Jest.

Looking aloft toward the east end of the hall, Mr. Hurley, who in convictions is a Democrat, but who, as successful go-getter for two national conventions, is for the present a neutral, suddenly burst into laughter. Before his eyes hung a mechanical sign in which illuminated letters move like a railroad train across a dark background. By chance the mechanism, after the last prize fight at the Stadium, had been stopped in the middle of a word and hence on this incomplete sentence:

NEXT FIGHT DATE FOR THE STADI—

Striking a delegate's attitude and addressing an imaginary chairman, Mr. Hurley declaimed:

"Mr. Chairman, I move you that

REPEAL FORCES MAY STAMPEDE IN CONVENTION

Delegates Fighting Back at Hoover.

In the rotogravure picture section of today's Tribune will be found a page of old time convention pictures beginning with the Republican convention in 1860 when Lincoln was nominated and including the conventions of 1884, the last time both major parties met in the same city.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Rumblings of an upheaval on the prohibition question, visions of a stampede of delegates into a declaration for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and signs of revolt against the renomination of Vice President Charles Curtis of Kansas, combined yesterday to contribute the element of suspense to the impending Republican national convention, first act in the great political drama of 1932.

The developments of the day were the curtain raiser to Chicago's big show—the double bill which will present the national conventions of the two major political parties in the same city for the first time since Blaine was nominated by the Republicans and Cleveland by the Democrats in the old Chicago Exposition building back in the torchlight parade days of 1884.

Opens Tuesday Morning.

The Republican convention which will be called to order in the Stadium at 11 a. m. Tuesday will come to its close on Thursday or Friday with the nomination of the ticket. That President Hoover will be nominated is about the only thing that can be said with certainty of the ticket or, in fact, of the entire convention at this time.

Whether the party is to declare for repeal of the prohibition amendment or content itself with adoption of a noncommittal resubmission platform plank will be decided by the convention Wednesday night, according to present plans.

Scarcely will the sounds of the Republican tumult have died away before the Democrats will be meeting in their national convention in the same arena on June 27 to nominate their ticket and write their platform. This will be even bigger big time drama than the Republican show, for it will present the clash of elemental political forces over the choice of the Democratic candidate for President as well as over the expediency of going to the country with a wetter platform than the Republicans.

Stirring Struggle Forecast.

From the moment they assemble the Democrats will be engaged in a stirring struggle which will determine whether Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, who will enter the convention with several times as many delegates as his nearest rival, will be the party nominee for President or will be thrust aside in favor of another.

In the Republican convention the President is to be renominated with the votes of nearly all of the 1,154 delegates and with about as much enthusiasm as there was for the renomination of Benjamin Harrison at Minneapolis in 1892. The President inspires no enthusiasm. He is going to be renominated because his rejection would be a confession of party failure that would be fatal to Republican fortunes in the election.

Too Much Hoover.

Nevertheless, the leaders are restive. They snubbed the administration Friday, when the national committee seated the Tolbert delegation from South Carolina and the Howard delegation from Mississippi, contrary to the express wishes of the President conveyed to them by Postmaster General Walter F. Brown. And yesterday the gossip at the Congress hotel headquarters was that Mr. Hoover would not be allowed to pick the chairman of the new national committee. This new line of attack originated with national committeemen, who complain that the party is suffering from "too many Hoover boy scouts" in the seats of authority.

The day was productive also of a show of fight on the part of the President. He instructed Mr. Brown to carry the administration's war on "Uncle Joe" Tolbert, national committeeman of South Carolina, and Perry Howard, the colored national committeeman of Mississippi, to the credentials committee of the convention and, if necessary, to the floor of the convention itself. Thus the highest tribunal of the party is to be called upon to decide between the President who is trying to drive Tolbert and Howard from their places of leadership on grounds of unfitness and the national committee which decided the Tolbert and Howard delegations entitled to their seats by right of regularity of election.

Revolt Against Curtis.

Leaders of the Republican delegations now pouring into Chicago on every train brought fresh tidings of the widespread revolt in the party against the renomination of 72 year old Vice President Curtis and demand for the choice instead of a younger, livelier, more colorful, and wetter candidate who can go out and whoop it up for the ticket on the hustings, not to mention keeping the party abreast of the headlong popular swing toward repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

First choice of the anti-Curtis Republicans for the vice presidential nomination is "Hell Maria" Charles Gates Dawes, who has just resigned as president of the Reconstruction Finance corporation in Washington and is due back here this week just about the time the convention will be naming the ticket. Their second choice is breezy, affable, sufficiently wet Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, who, hailing from Oklahoma, next door to Kansas, is committed to the renomination of Curtis, but ready to unsheathe the old lightning rod at a moment's notice of the withdrawal of the Vice President.

Anything Can Happen.

Almost anything can happen in this convention, the gathering G. O. P. leaders were saying last night as they envisaged two possible stampedes of the delegates from control by the Hoover high command—one a runaway on the vice presidential nomination and the other a runaway on the party stand on prohibition.

With the Republicans in fully half the 48 states fairly tumbling over each other onto the band wagon for outright and unqualified repeal of the eighteenth amendment, the leaders at the Congress hotel headquarters of the national committee found themselves last night squarely up against a Dame Partington act of sweeping back the sea with a broomstick. They were burning up the wires to Washington imploring President Hoover to come out openly for the proposed noncommittal resubmission plank, in default of which they would not undertake to guarantee that the convention would not take the bit in its teeth and bolt to an unabashed declaration for repeal.

G. O. P. "to Point with Pride."

Philosophically minded delegates were heard to comment on the phenomenon that outside of some desultory talk of farm relief and silver there is absolutely no excitement over what the platform is to declare on economic questions, despite the fact that the country is in the grip of the worst economic depression that living men can remember.

The Republicans are going to point with pride to everything the Hoover administration has done, or tried to do, to alleviate the depression and let it go at that. The party will take its stand with the President on depression relief, indorsing federal loans to states as distinguished from donations to individuals for relief of destitution, and loans on reproductive, income producing public and private construction projects to increase employment, but viewing with alarm the Democratic schemes of vast projects of federal public building and other public works construction, which would tend to unbalance the budget.

Contrast with the Nineties.

How different, almost everybody is saying, from the depression of the nineties which produced its William J. Bryan, "Sockless Jerry" Simpson, and Mary Ellen Lease, the Populist party, and other evidences of deep seated unrest. This time the reaction has been against radicalism.

Brookhart, political progeny of "Sockless Jerry" Simpson, has been beaten in Iowa, cut off in midcareer of his campaign for the redistribution of wealth. The La Follettes have been beaten in Wisconsin and for the first time since 1904 will not appear in a Republican convention to move the nomination of a radical and the adoption of a radical platform. Pinchot has been beaten in Pennsylvania.

Dry Issue Is Paramount.

Thus it falls out that in a convention in which the platform is the principal subject of difference of opinion the prohibition plank is the only party declaration of principle in which there is any widespread interest. Even the question of radical reduction of the cost of government for which popular demand is growing mightily, without profoundly impressing congress up-to-date, however—even the economy question is taking a back seat to the all absorbing theme of what's to be done about prohibition.

Yet, there is plenty of evidence that the demand for prohibition reform is to a large extent a manifestation of the economic distress of the people and of the demand for a return to those days when government cost less and the tax burden was more equitably distributed. The sensational swelling of the tide of repudiation of prohibition in the last fortnight, culminating so far in such incidents as the conversion to repeal of the John D. Rockefellers, pillars of the Baptist church and former angels of the Anti-Saloon league, and the adoption of a repeal platform by the Republicans of that one time banner bone dry state, Indiana, is attributed by the majority of Republican leaders to economic influences.

Revolt of Taxpayers.

A long smoldering revolt of a tax ridden people, it is reasoned, is now breaking into flame against an unenforceable law on the attempted enforcement of which the federal, state and local governments are expending several hundred millions of dollars annually and the existence of which diverts from the federal government alone into the pockets of the bootleggers more than one billion dollars a year of potential tax revenue.

There are all kinds of reactions on the part of the Republican politicians to this upsetting development of the last few weeks. Some of them are booming John D. Rockefeller Jr. for the nomination for Vice President, possibly not without an eye to his liberal contribution of the funds which he intimated he would be prepared to devote to the repeal movement. Some are for a platform declaring for repeal and retention of Vice President Curtis on the ticket as a sop to the drys. Others want a resubmission straddle in the platform and a wet candidate for Vice President as a sop to the wets.

Favor Moses Plank.

In the inner circle of the Republican big shots the sentiment is overwhelmingly for the plank drafted by Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire and privately indorsed in principle by President Hoover, which commits the party merely to a resubmission by congress, enabling the people to decide whether they want the eighteenth amendment retained, modified, or repealed.

That is good, safe doctrine at which neither drys nor wets could justifiably take offense, say the party chieftains who are still proceeding on the theory that it would be politically fatal to adopt a position which would alienate the drys, the vast majority of whom in the Republican north and west are Republicans.

Postmaster General Brown is the most active of the leaders in endeavoring to procure an agreement on the Moses plank representing so large a proportion of the convention as to make the adoption of an outright repeal plank a forlorn hope. In his conferences with incoming leaders yesterday he did not mince matters in warning them of the danger of a stampede to a repeal plank unless a previous general agreement is reached on a noncommittal resubmission plank.

Brown Is Warned.

Likewise, Mr. Brown was liberally warned that unless he succeeds in getting the President out in the open for a submission plank by Tuesday, at the latest, it is likely to be too late to check the repeal epidemic.

The dry leaders were scouting around headquarters during the day, but in a chastened mood compared with the militant demeanor they were once accustomed to display in Republican councils. They realize they are beaten before the fighting begins, for they are opposed to even a resubmission plank which, it is now generally recognized, is the mildest plank that stands any chance of approval.

Ernest H. Cherrington, president of the World Conference Against Alcohol, who once cracked the whip for the Anti-Saloon League, and the Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, head of the war council of the amalgamated dry organizations, slipped in to see their equally dry friend, Senator Simeon D. Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee. Emerging shortly afterward Dr. Dinwiddie said the prohibition plank was not mentioned while Dr. Cherrington sidestepped an answer. Dr. Fess a little later said that prohibition was about all they did discuss.

What About Dry Plank.

The dry leaders wanted Dr. Fess to tell them what sort of plank was going to be adopted. Dr. Fess was sorry to say he didn't know what was going to happen, the way things were going. He didn't even know what sort of plank the President wanted. Dr. Fess didn't know why the President had not seen fit to confide in the chairman of the national committee on so important a matter. Possibly it was because the President knew Dr. Fess to be as dry as the Anti-Saloon League.

The two dry leaders went away without encouragement as to the plank and without finding a spokesman to carry a minority report for a dry plank from the resolutions committee to the floor of the convention.

"We will oppose any resubmission plank," said Dr. Cherrington.

From Michigan came reports of the working of the yeast of the repeal. The Republican delegation from that state is to arrive tomorrow and to caucus tomorrow night on the burning question. Former Gov. Fred Green, formerly a dry, is reported to be out for repeal and seeking choice by the delegation as Michigan member of the resolutions committee. Charles B. Warren, who sounded Mr. Hoover's views in Washington last week, is a candidate for the assignment as an advocate of resubmission.

A Political Blunder.

Among committeemen yesterday the view was generally expressed that Postmaster General Brown had committed a political blunder by invoking the name of the President in his appeal before the national committee for recognition of the anti-Tolbert and anti-Howard delegations.

Both Tolbert and Howard had been accused of trafficking in federal patronage and the President had sought to unset them from leadership in their states. They are identified with the "black and tan" type of organization traditional in the Republican party in the south, and the administration sought replacement on a "lily white basis."

The contests to be taken before the credentials committee will, as party leaders view it, indicate the measure of control President Hoover has over the convention.

REPEAL LEADER ARRIVES; GIVES G. O. P. WARNING

Go Wet or Lose in Fall, Pitcairn Tells Party.

Raymond Pitcairn, secretary of the United Repeal council and organizer of the Republican citizens' committee, arrived in Chicago yesterday to renew his fight against contributions to the Republican party unless it adopts a repeal plank.

The citizens' committee, organized two months ago in Chicago, has been soliciting the 1928 contributors to the party to withhold contributions this year. In addition to overseeing this campaign Mr. Pitcairn, a lawyer and architect of Philadelphia, is here to cooperate with other wet leaders affiliated with the United Repeal council.

2,500,000 Voters Represented.

"The United Repeal council," said Mr. Pitcairn upon his arrival, "represents more than 2,500,000 voters affiliated with the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the Crusaders, the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, the Volunteer Committee of Lawyers, the American Hotel association, and other newly formed wet groups.

"If the Republican party doesn't adopt a satisfactory wet plank, calling for submission of the question of outright repeal to the states, the Democratic party will. Then these 2,500,000 voters will go out and tell the nation which party is right."

Campaign Hits G. O. P. Purse.

Mr. Pitcairn said the results of the Republican citizens' committee's campaign against contributions to the party until it agreed to adopt an appeal plank had been recognized by J. R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee.

"Mr. Nutt has stated that the contributions have fallen off appallingly because of the committee's activities," said Mr. Pitcairn.

During the day Mr. Pitcairn conferred with Col. Ira L. Reeves, director of the Crusaders in Chicago; Fred G. Clark, national head of the Crusaders, and Henry H. Curran, national president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

After the conferences he announced that the consolidated wets were confident of victory in the Republican convention.

Sees Ruin in a Straddle.

"It would be the ruination of the Republican party to straddle on the prohibition question this time," Mr. Pitcairn said. "The people of the nation are three to one for repeal, and state delegations from Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Montana will be here with repeal planks."

Mr. Pitcairn sent a telegram to Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, delegate from New York, challenging him to urge the convention to adopt a repeal plank.

"Republican congressmen and senators have just voted burdensome taxes on the people which will inevitably prolong the depression," said the telegram. "You have disapproved many of these taxes. The record of many of these legislators proves that they would rather saddle the people with grievous taxes than collect from the liquor traffic a billion dollars in annual revenue. Will you not urge the Republican convention to declare for outright repeal for your country's sake and also to prevent the inevitable defeat of the Republican party?"

ROOMING HOUSE ROBBED.

Three armed men entered the rooming house of Miss Marcella Hough, 5219 Winthrop avenue, last night and after terrorizing the owner and four guests escaped with $225 and jewelry valued at about $300.

'Dripping Wet' Plank Ready for Republicans; Backers May Force Fight to Convention Floor

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A "dripping wet" plank for presentation to the Republican platform committee was brought to Chicago yesterday, laying down the lines on which the battle over prohibition is likely to be fought in the national convention which opens Tuesday.

The plank was written by Samuel Harden Church of Pittsburgh, president of Carnegie institute, after conferences with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, and Pierre S. du Pont of Wilmington, Del., chairman of the United Repeal council, a consolidation of wet groups. It is to be presented in the caucus of the Pennsylvania delegation Monday night, which is overwhelmingly wet, and is to be placed before the resolutions committee as the plank on which the anti-prohibitionists are united.

Will Take Fight to Floor.

If it is rejected by the committee, in favor of a straddling or neutral utterance, it is planned to take it directly to the floor in a minority report, and give the delegate body of the G. O. P. a chance to render its verdict.

The Church-Butler plank denounces prohibition as a failure after twelve years of trial. It says the "noble experiment has been followed by a wave of drunkenness, corruption, and crime, that it was based on the theory that the American workingman is "potentially a drunkard," and that prohibition has proved a foe of temperance and sobriety.

It calls on congress to submit repeal of the 18th amendment to the states in conventions, liquor control to be returned to the states. Immediate action is urged with a view of getting action started in the states next year.

Text of Wet Plank.

The plank reads as follows:

"The eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States was adopted at a time when our people were deeply moved by the emotions of the world war; and while there was a moral purpose back of it, the controlling motive in its favor was the argument that it would permit the grain supplies of the country to be used exclusively for food purposes while that conflict was raging. The form in which the amendment was drawn, instead of granting discretionary power to congress in the usual way, carried an unenforceable statute in its heart, and was itself destrictive of popular government, constituting a grave political error which can be corrected only with vexatious difficulty.

"No opportunity of voting on this question was ever given to the nation, and the amendment was adopted by the votes of less than 6,000 men in congress and in state legislatures, without a mandate from the people. It was vetoed by the President, but passed over his veto. Since its adoption, whenever it has been voted on by states in elections representing more than one-half of our total population, the people have resolutely expressed their disapproval of the control of the matter by the federal government, against the inherent right of the states to regulate their own customs.

Progressively Ineffectual.

"After twelve years of trial, prohibition has been found to be progressively ineffectual, with drunkenness, corruption, and crime following in its wake to a degree which was unknown in the former days.

"The theory of prohibition is built upon the cruel and preposterous fallacy that the American workingman is potentially a drunkard, and that the abolishment of the existing laws would open the door to his destruction. On the contrary, the American workingman has shown in all the days of the open saloon that he is a sober, home loving, church going family man, temperate with liquor as with all other things.

"Before the adoption of prohibition this country was making rapid and effective strides toward the achievement of becoming a temperate nation. The demand for sobriety in business and industrial life had practically abolished the use of liquor among the total body of people who work for a living. On the railroads, in banks and shops, and in the great industrial establishments drinking was forbidden as a condition of employment. Gradually it had become prejudicial to social opinion to drink liquor, and its use was generally discontinued at public banquets, while individuals who used it to excess made themselves objects of reproach and scorn. All this came about by the force of precept and example in the home, the school, and the church.

Dry Law Kills Sobriety.

"But when these influences, so tremendously effective, were made to give way to prohibitory laws, the whole national structure of sobriety fell to the ground; and we now see the saloon flourishing in greater strength than ever before; we see some 1,200 men and women sent to prison every week for liquor violation; the arrests for drunkenness increased by more than 100 per cent; a new generation looking upon liquor with the attention which is attracted by forbidden fruit; and the federal attorneys in the income tax cases charging that the profits of one illicit liquor ring amounted in five years to $700,000,000.

"To attempt to propose an alternate plan to the existing system at this moment would simply complicate the prevailing confusion with further untried experiments. With the day of repeal before us we must confide in the people of the various states to act quickly on this problem with intelligence and good faith, to the end that there shall be the least possible delay in adjusting this paramount question in American life.

Upholds Citizens' Rights.

"With these considerations before us, and cherishing the belief that no good citizen will deny the right of our people to change their laws, it is

"Resolved, That we urge congress to submit promptly to the several states for ratification in state conventions, to be called for that sole purpose, and in accordance with article 5 of the constitution, a resolution for the immediate repeal of the eighteenth amendment; the entire question of liquor control to be returned to the states, where it can be regulated in each state, county, city, or village by local option or otherwise, or prohibited in accordance with the desires, wisdom, and good conscience of the people therein."

Speculate on Garfield Plans.

Among incoming delegates there was much speculation over the platform proposals James R. Garfield of Ohio, chairman designate of the resolutions committee, may be bringing from Washington. A conjecture was in wide circulation that he may have two proposals in his pocket—one the Garfield-Moses idea of action to determine whether the 18th should be "retained, repealed or modified," a proposal which bone dry Indiana itself has kicked out as a straddle; and, second, submission of the question of repeal.

Of the leaders who expect to sit in the resolutions committee, nobody seems to know precisely what President Hoover wants. One prospective platform maker, who was at the White House a day or two ago, reported yesterday that Hoover remarked, "I'm just as I always was," and delegates yesterday were reading anything they saw fit into this cryptic utterance.

Indiana Sways Dry Leaders.

Since Indiana's action a marked change has stolen over the leaders who are busy on the platform. The drys, including Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, national chairman, now are saying that a resubmission plank—meaning submission of repeal—will be the extent of the plank. Heretofore they have not gone that far. The wets, on the other hand, hold the prospects are growing of a possible stampede among the delegates for a real wet declaration.

Farm organizations are preparing planks and arguments for submission to the resolutions committee when it meets, probably Tuesday afternoon or evening, and several planks against high cost of government are in preparation by various organizations.

Manufacturers' associations in ten midwest states have united in a committee which is drafting a proposed plank calling for a reduction of governmental enterprise and activities in business, in a degree at least commensurate with the reduction in national income.

New York state's delegation is due in Chicago early this afternoon on a special train. The majority wants a straight repeal plank, but W. Kingsland Macy, the Republican state chairman, indicated in an interview just before the train left New York that he sees little difference between "resubmission" and "repeal" planks.

EARLY START ON PLATFORM PLAN OF DEMOCRATS

Washington, D. C., June 11—(AP)—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, announced today an informal meeting of the party's platform and resolutions committee would begin four days before the national convention to draft a tentative platform.

More than a majority of the committee members have been designated and have accepted the suggestion made by former Governor Byrd of Virginia to meet June 23 and thresh out the less controversial issues of the platform with an idea of speeding up the convention's work.

"It is highly desirable that the work of the convention shall be expedited to the fullest extent and that the usual delays in the formulation of a declaration of party principles by the committee on platform and resolutions may be minimized," Shouse said in a statement accompanying the announcement.

"By this method, it is believed that most of the subjects of the platform that are not highly controversial can be formulated in a satisfactory manner prior to the formal and official designation of the platform committee by the convention."

Another Dry Congressman Now Favors Referendum

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—Representative H. C. Canfield [Dem., Ind.] today proposed a constitutional amendment to permit a popular referendum on prohibition. In a statement Canfield said that if the 18th amendment should be repealed in such a referendum he would favor a government dispensary system of liquor control. Canfield, a prohibitionist during his ten years in the house, recently was defeated in the primaries for renomination.

STATION GUARDS AS G. O. P. TICKETS ARE DISTRIBUTED

It wasn't gold bullion nor United States treasury certificates that caused a heavy guard to be stationed in the Florentine room of the Congress yesterday—but tickets to the Republican convention. Distribution of the precious pasteboards was a ceremonious and intricate affair. Douglas Whitlock of Washington was the large and unsmiling guardian of the one portal where admittance was possible, and no one got past him who hadn't the necessary credentials.

On identification, each pair of committeemen was granted admission. They marched in to confront a battery of tellers seated at a long table, comprising some of the party leaders. Names were given and credentials checked and rechecked four times. A number was assigned to each pair.

Then came a wait while the quota of tickets, wrapped and sealed like banknotes, was procured. When the number was called, the couple representing each state stepped forward and received the packet, invariably clutching it tenaciously. They were ushered out of the room by another door.

Usually a delegation from their state was waiting to help escort the bearer of the packet to a place of safety and seclusion, where their real troubles started as they began assigning the tickets to the home folks.

PIE COMPANY HELD UP.

Two armed men entered the offices of the Colonial Pie company, 2623 Washington boulevard, last evening. They menaced Peter Vasileou, 1261 Washington boulevard, the owner, four drivers and his secretary, and stole $344.

DRY LAW FOES RALLY TODAY AT AIR, WATER FETE

'Old Man Prohibition' Due for a Ducking.

Air and water will be utilized today in a two pronged jab at prohibition, staged by the Crusaders to interest and instruct visiting convention delegates and to rally all the anti-prohibition forces for a mass attack. The boat and airplane parades today, with numerous side show thrills, will be followed by an automobile parade tomorrow that is intended to convey a message in no uncertain terms.

The public is promised a good show by the Crusaders, who have announced that the time is ripe to throw off the yoke of prohibition tyranny. In fact "Old Man Prohibition" is to be thrown out of an airplane into "wet" Lake Michigan. The two day program is designed to prevent the Republican convention from straddling the liquor question.

Yachts Parade Today.

The first broadside will be fired at 2:30 p. m. today in Lake Michigan, off Navy pier. The public is invited by the Crusaders and by Mayor Cermak to witness the exhibition today, to take part in the motorcade tomorrow and to assemble in the Coliseum tomorrow evening to listen to the addresses of nationally prominent speakers.

More than 300 sailing and motor craft attached to the six leading yachting organizations of the city have been entered. Commander Eugene McDonald, noted as a polar explorer, has been designated by Capt. Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders, as grand marshal. He has obtained the hearty support of his brother yachtsmen and has appointed assistant marshals as follows: Joseph H. Nicholai, Chicago Motor club; I. J. Atwood, Columbia Yacht club; C. J. Peterson, Chicago Yacht club; T. M. Dunlap, Jackson Park Yacht club; Sam G. Goss, Sheridan Shore Yacht club, and George Schaefer, South Shore Power Boat club.

Boats Parade an Hour.

The yachts and power craft will assemble in the harbor north of Navy pier at 2 o'clock and at 2:30 the starting gun will be fired from the Mizpah, Commander McDonald's yacht. The boats will move out, single file, through the northeast gap of the breakwater and will journey north for a short distance, then turning and going south past the Century of Progress grounds, returning through the Van Buren street gap and back to the pier where the air pageant will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

Maj. R. W. "Shorty" Schroeder, "air commander" of the Crusaders, will act as grand marshal with 150 planes under his direction. He has appointed the following assistant marshals in charge of divisions of ships: George Fisher, Sky Harbor; Duncan Hodges, Palwaukee; George Donahue, Curtis-Reynolds; L. R. Burris, Waukegan; Roy C. Wilson, Wilson; William Strine, Stinson; Charlie Strong, Harlem, and Maj. Herman Woeltjen, Municipal.

Fly Twenty Seconds Apart.

The planes will take off from their ports at twenty second intervals, heading for the loop. Maj. Woeltjen will be air marshal in command of the south side division, represented by Stinson, Harlem, and Municipal airports. Fisher will be marshal of the north division, representing Sky Harbor, Palwaukee, Curtis-Reynolds, Waukegan, and Wilson airports. They will assemble their units in the air. Grand Marshal Schroeder will embark from Sky Harbor and the leaders will move in over Navy Pier after contacting in the loops.

Following the parade past the pier, the spectators will witness thrilling spectacles featuring dog fights and other air stunts. Duncan Hodges will operate his autogyro through a series of thrillers, while Dick Powell and Verne Stewart, two of the most famous parachute jumpers in the flying realm, will execute wet dives into Lake Michigan.

"Old Man's" Fate in Doubt.

This pair of leapers will go through the motions of rescuing "Old Man Prohibition," who will be cast overboard from another plane. Whether they intend to rescue him or merely pretend to try and allow themselves to fail is not announced in the program. The Crusaders say, however, that he will ascertain if Lake Michigan is as wet as most of the delegates hope to find Chicago during the convention.

During the naval and air parades two autogyros will float a banner 600 feet long calling for repeal of the 18th amendment. At the close of the air show the public is invited to the ballroom.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, will head the speakers for repeal.

The parade tomorrow will start at 6 p. m. at Michigan avenue and Ohio streets, under the leadership of Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin as grand marshal. Mayor Cermak, United States Senators James Hamilton Lewis, and Otis F. Glenn, and other notables will take part.

PREPARE FOR CONVENTION BATTLE ON DRY LAW

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, head of Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform; Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, and Mrs. Archie Roosevelt, as they arrived at the La Salle street station yesterday to take part in fight against prohibition.

'DIOGENES' TOURISTS HUNT TOPER WHOM DRY LAW REFORMED

The motorbus Diogenes, which is on a national tour in search of a drunkard who has been reformed by the 18th amendment, arrived in Chicago last night. Paul Morris, director of the Prohibition Research committee of New York; Robert Nicholson, assistant director; Russel G. Salmon, chief investigator, and Stephen Duggan, assistant investigator, are making the tour.

During their three days in Chicago the searchers will interview officials of the W. C. T. U., the Anti-Saloon league, and the Salvation army, Jane Addams of Hull House, members of police and health departments and setlement woakers, challenging them to find a man who formerly drank to excess and now obstains because of prohibition. If such a man is found he will be presented to the Republican national convention by the Crusaders and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform as "the 24 billion dollar beneficiary of prohibition."

Maj. Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment; Fred G. Clark, national head of the Crusaders, and Miss Elizabeth Roe, who organized the women's wet organization at the University of Chicago, greeted the tourists.

JOHN FREDRICK OF INDIANA ASKS DRY LAW REPEAL

Indianapolis, Ind., June 11.—[Special.]—John E. Fredrick of Kokomo, president of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce and candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in the party's state convention June 21, today joined the ranks of those advocating government control of liquor.

Fredrick said he had hitherto always been an advocate of prohibition and believes total abstinence is best for every one.

"But the failure to enforce prohibition has brought about conditions that threaten the foundation of government, if not the social order itself," he said. "If we cannot enforce the eighteenth amendment—and we have not—we ought to repeal it and substitute some form of government control and method of distribution, thereby letting the government have the profit instead of the underworld.

"If we cannot stop the sale and consumption of liquor—and we have not—we can take the enormous profit of its sale and thereby destroy the underworld's chief source of revenue, rendering it powerless to further injure us."

FESS IS HOST AT DINNER FOR G. O. P. COMMITTEE

Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee, was host at a dinner given last evening at the South Shore Country club to the other members of the committee.

Senator Fess recited the history of Republican conventions in Chicago and referred to the high caliber of presidential candidates chosen. Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Blaine, and Benjamin Harrison were the earlier choices, and Roosevelt, Taft, Hughes, and Harding the later ones picked at conventions here.

"We are here in 1932," the senator said, "to renominate President Herbert Hoover, the equal in all respects to any one of those great Americans and great Republicans."

Wadsworth Here

Former Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr. of New York, a member of the executive committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, arrived yesterday to aid the wets in their fight for a repeal plank. He is the guest of Attorney Ralph M. Shaw, head of the Illinois division of the association.

Loeb Is 27; Passes Day in Prison Greenhouse

Richard Loeb, who is serving 99 years for the murder of Robert Franks, yesterday observed his 27th birthday by working as usual in the Stateville penitentiary green house. He had no visitors during the day. Nathan Leopold, who was sentenced with Loeb for the murder, is privileged to see Loeb each day.

MRS. SABIN HERE TO LEAD WOMEN IN REPEAL FIGHT

Jumps from Train Into Middle of the Fray.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Just standing and talking about what has been done and is going to be done to rid this country of the eighteenth amendment isn't Mrs. Charles H. Sabin's idea of promoting sentiment for prohibition repeal. Streaking off the Commodore Vanderbilt yesterday at the La Salle street station, the founder resident of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform was fairly champing to get away from the detaining press delegation, and into the fray for a dripping wet plank in the Republican platform.

"It's really too early now to tell you anything exciting," she pleaded. "But if you call me back tonight perhaps I can. Mr. Rockefeller's change of heart? O, that's practically an old story now. I can say that he is our greatest recruit to date. An invitation was extended yesterday to Mrs. Rockefeller to join our group of women, but we have heard nothing from it as yet.

Speeds Up the Fight.

"We're going to open our headquarters in the Blackstone hotel tomorrow," Mrs. Sabin announced, turning to Miss Mary Platt, secretary of the Illinois branch, who looked startled but pleased. "We'd planned on Monday, Mrs. Sabin, but tomorrow will be fine," said Miss Platt.

"We're going right to work on the women among the delegates to the convention," continued the energetic Mrs. Sabin. "Mrs. Nicoll will represent our organization when the joint committee from the united repeal groups goes before the resolutions committee to demand a wet plank in the platform."

She indicated Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, youthful and attractive, standing beside her in a tailored costume of navy, piped with crimson, and a tiny black hat.

Other Aid Is Mrs. Roosevelt.

On her other hand stood Mrs. Archie Roosevelt of New York, also in the front ranks of eastern women pledged to support the repeal cause. Like Mrs. Nicoll, she is youthful and slim, and wore a chartreuse print frock with a matching small turban.

Mrs. Sabin, whose vitality and enthusiasm are reflected in the prenomenal growth of her forces, will be one of the speakers at the anti-prohibition massmeeting tomorrow night at the Coliseum. She was garbed yesterday in a trim light print of navy tracery on a white background, with a modish Panama hat.

She will remain for the convention and then return to New York.

BOY, 13, FOUND IN CANAL, VICTIM OF GUN WOUND

It was found yesterday that Stanley Bladis, 13 years old, of 3214 West 38th street, whose body was recovered from the drainage canal at Lockport Friday, was killed by a bullet through his head instead of drowning. Stephen Ciesla, 15, of 3732 South Kedzie avenue, told the Brighton Park police that two weeks before his disappearance Stanley had found a revolver. On May 30 he and several playmates had witnessed a western movie, he said. The boy disappeared on May 31. Mrs. Rose Bladis, widowed mother of Stanley, said that he was a home boy and had planned to join the Boy Scouts. Police said it was possible that a playmate had accidentally shot him.

ALFRED SLOAN, FORMER DRY, FAVORS REPEAL

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors corporation and one of the country's leading industrialists, announced today his conversion to the belief that the best road toward temperance lies through repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Mr. Sloan, with Henry Ford, had been frequently cited by the drys as an outstanding business leader who felt that the country's industrial efficiency had been increased by prohibition. In his statement today he declared that lawlessness, developed as a result of prohibition, "has created a general condition far more damaging to the present and future stability of the country than any possible benefits that would otherwise be enjoyed."

It has become perfectly evident, Mr. Sloan declared, "that the experiment, however justifiable it may have been from an economic or social standpoint, has resulted in failure."

He advocated as a substitute strict control of the liquor traffic so that "lawlessness will no longer be subsidized and industry will be released from a part of the present heavy burden of taxation."

Autori of Chicago Civic Opera Hurt by Bomb

Dallas, Tex., June 11.—(AP)—Nine persons, including Franco Autori, assistant conductor of the Chicago Civic opera, were injured slightly by explosion of a sulphur bomb in the audience at the Palace theater here tonight. Autori, to be guest conductor for ten symphony programs here, was treated at a hospital.

GARNER STRICKEN WITH GRIP AND IS ORDERED TO BED

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Speaker of the House John N. Garner was confined to his bed today by a severe attack of the grip.

He had been suffering with a cold for several days, but arrived at the capitol as usual about 7 o'clock this morning. By 9 his cold had become considerably worse and he had developed a temperature. He was ordered home and to bed by Dr. George Calver, the house physician, who described Mr. Garner's condition as one of excessive temperature and severe chest congestion.

Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], the majority leader, who acted as speaker pro tem in Mr. Garner's absence, advised the house that "there is nothing serious in the speaker's condition," although Dr. Calver has issued instructions that Mr. Garner is to see no one.

252,000 ASK DRY REFERENDUM IN MICHIGAN

Lansing, Mich., June 11.—[Special.]—Representatives of three anti-prohibition organizations, the Crusaders, Michigan Moderation league, and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, today filed petitions bearing 50,000 additional signatures asking for submission of a proposal to repeal the bone dry provision in the state constitution.

J. S. Folz, Kalamazoo, made the presentation to Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, in behalf of the Kalamazoo Crusaders battalion. Several prominent Lansing clubwomen were included in the delegation which visited the capitol. The additional names brought the total on file to 252,000 and it was announced that still more signatures are already available and will be filed later.

Only 87,000 signatures are necessary to obtain submission of the proposal at the fall election.

MOVE TO DIVERT EMMERSON FROM COMMITTEE RACE

Governor Silent on Offer from Rival Camp.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has been offered the chairmanship of the Illinois delegation to the Republican national convention. He arrived in Chicago yesterday but refused to be interviewed on the subject.

The offer is said to have come from the forces led by Len Small and William Lorimer, which are backing Frank L. Smith of Dwight for Republican national committeeman from Illinois. That is the way they propose to break the deadlock that so far has prevented any one from getting a majority of the 61 votes of the Illinois delegation to the convention, which elects the national committeeman.

Gov. Emmerson is a candidate for the committee post, as is also Roy O. West, the present committeeman.

Combination Seems Doubtful.

If there should be a combination of the Smith-Emmerson candidacies their combined forces could put the program through, but there had been no alliance completed last night. And there was considerable question whether such a hookup would be possible before the delegation holds its official caucus tomorrow night, at which the national committeeman and committeewoman will be elected.

The supporters of West, who has served as national committeeman for twelve years, as secretary of the committee and as secretary of the interior under President Coolidge, are among those who doubt that there can be a real agreement between the elements that supported Omer N. Custer, Emmerson candidate in the April primary, and those who backed Len Small. They contend that West is still very much in the picture and that the Emmerson people will support him in preference to Smith.

Emmerson Dry Record Cited.

In reference to the possibility of Emmerson's being slated for the delegation chairmanship there is the same objection raised as has been brought up in opposition to his election as committeeman.

The state convention adopted a prohibition repeal platform. Emmerson vetoed the bill to repeal the state prohibition act, although the previous state convention, when he was governorship nominee, staked the party's stand on this question on the result of a referendum. And that result was decidedly wet.

The situation in the state delegation apparently will remain in status quo until tomorrow, since few of the downstate delegates have appeared here so far. Such of the downstaters and Chicagoans as were around the Congress hotel yesterday said they had not been approached by the candidates.

Forecasts Made "on Form."

Seemingly the candidates and their friends have simply counted noses "on form"—that is, have calculated on the basis of past performance just how the 72 Illinois delegates will line up in this contest. There are 50 district delegates and 22 delegates at large. Each of the delegates at large has only one-half vote.

On this basis a symposium of the various forecasts indicates that Smith might get as many as 29 votes—two short of the majority of 31 required—and that Emmerson might reach a total of 24. Whether each could attain the mark mentioned for him, or pass it, will not be settled until the delegates start appearing at the state headquarters which open in the Stevens tomorrow. They will show up there during the day to claim their credentials and tickets.

Except that there is no announced candidate against Mrs. Bertha Baur for national committeewoman, the preliminary discussions have not gone beyond the question of who the man member of the national committee will be.

While some have concluded it would be a natural thing for the Small-Smith forces to want Attorney Werner Schroeder, a Small protégé, as the Illinois member of the convention resolutions committee, it is said this subject has not even been taken up in the Small camp.

What is wanted by the delegates now here is a man on the resolutions committee who will work to have the national platform in harmony with the state platform, one including an outright declaration for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Wife Gets Writ to Prevent Sale of $150,000 Patent

Superior Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday granted Mrs. Ernestine Teitel, 3026 Edgewood avenue, an injunction restraining her husband from disposing of his interest in a movie film renovator, an hour after her divorce bill charging cruelty and adultery was filed by Attorney Harry X. Cole. Mrs. Teitel charged that her husband, Abraham Teitel, had threatened to dispose of the patent rights which the bill described as worth $150,000, if she sought the divorce. She informed the court that she had aided in financing the patent.

CONVENTION NOTES

State street went "wet" yesterday—in so far as the paint signs guarding the new decorations were concerned. More loop buildings appeared in the convention colors during the day—the Straus building, the Auditorium hotel, and the interior of the federal building, among others. The government use only a picture of George Washington among the bunting and flags in the federal building lobby.

Chef Lucien Raymond of the Congress hotel is being called upon to practice the entire culinary art of the nation as sectional delegations arrive. New Englanders are demanding breakfast salads; hot, spicy dishes are the call from the southern delegates; the westerners lean toward flapjacks, and the committeemen and delegates from the Scandinavian districts in the northwest order "lefsa," Norwegian bread, with their heavy meals.

As a warning against pickpockets who may try to operate during the conventions, Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green imposed sizable sentences and fines on five members of this underworld craft brought before him yesterday.

Leaders of the Iowa delegation, headed by Chairman H. E. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, arrived at the Morrison hotel yesterday. Among those with him were O. H. Michaels of Ottumwa, sergeant at arms; Mayor Edward Manning of Ottumwa, a delegate, and J. J. Brus, vice president of the Davenport Trust and Savings bank, another delegate.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, was appointed yesterday as head of the special transportation committee by Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the convention citizens' committee. Mr. Hayes' group will facilitate the movement of the delegates to and from the Stadium.

The Hamilton club chorus of 90 male voices will sing at the Stadium each morning of the convention.

Women members of the Republican national committee will be guests at a tea to be given in the Drake Towers from 4 to 7 p. m., today by Mrs. Bina West Miller, committeewoman from Michigan. Mrs. Miller, who is national president of the Women's Benefit association, will give a tea tomorrow for the entire Michigan delegation at her apartment.

Mrs. George Bass of Georgia, a close friend of Gov. and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt and high in the Democratic councils, frequently bobs in and out of the Republican women's division at the Congress, greeting legislators and old friends among the feminine leaders.

Mrs. Walter F. Brown, wife of the postmaster general, is in much demand socially. She was a luncheon gest yesterday of Mrs. Bertha Baur. Mrs. Townsend McKeever captured her for tea, and other Chicago friends are keeping her engagement book well filled.

In the list of celebrities arriving yesterday was Mrs. Worthington Scranton of Scranton, Pa. A veteran worker for woman's suffrage and a member of two old eastern families, she has been a national committeewoman since 1928. Before that she was state committeewoman from her district.

Equipment for the emergency hospital at the Stadium was put in place yesterday. Sixteen physicians will be in constant service during the convention sessions under the direction of Dr. A. M. Harvey. The sixteen will be rotated from a staff of fifty. First aid stations and an operating room have been supplied and nurses will be loaned by various hospitals. Miss Irene McMurrough will be supervisor of the nurses.

National committeemen received their allotment of tickets in the Florentine room at the Congress yesterday. Some left clutching handfuls of the tickets and surrounded by bodyguards.

Gridley Adams of New Rochelle, N. Y., chairman of the national flag code committee, wrote the convention management yesterday congratulating it upon the manner in which the national emblem has been used in decorating the Stadium. He noted with gratification, he said, that the flag whenever used is hanging flat, "instead of being tied in knots, drapes and festoons to the very limit of desecration" as in other conventions.

FEWER WOMEN DELEGATES NOW THAN IN 1924

Reports which reached women's headquarters yesterday revealed that there will be 27 fewer women delegates at this Republican convention than there were at the Cleveland convention of the party in 1924. The accredited women delegates this year total 93, whereas there were 120 in Cleveland. In Kansas City four years ago, 70 women had votes.

The total of women delegates and alternates this time will be seven short of the Cleveland record, which reached 397. Only 390 women will be numbered this year among the delegates and alternates.

CHICAGO YOUTH WEDS PRINCESS FROM HAWAII

George Dallas McCauley, 23 year old son of W. S. McCauley, an official of Swift & Co., and Beatrice Campbell Beckley, 20 year old Hawaiian princess, were married last evening at Detroit.

Following the ceremony the couple left Detroit in an airplane for Chicago. Plans to elude crowds of well wishing friends went partly awry, however, and the bride's trousseau was left behind. It was explained that Mr. McCauley had instructed friends to take the luggage of his bride to the airport and that the trusted friends were arrested for speeding and missed the plane.

Mrs. McCauley is a descendant of Kamehameha, once king of the Hawaiian islands. She met the bridegroom in the islands and it was said they plan to return there to live.

ECONOMY PLANKS BIGGEST PROBLEM OF CONVENTIONS

Both Parties Will Bid for Public Confidence.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

One of the most difficult tasks of the Republican national convention will be the writing of a plank on economy that will appeal to a majority of the voters, leaders admitted yesterday. Perhaps the fight on prohibition or the selection of a vice presidential candidate will momentarily be more interesting, but many feel the plank of governmental costs will be more important. They feel that the tide of votes in November probably will turn on whether the public believes what the party has promised on economy.

So far as the Republican and Democratic platforms are concerned, economy will not be an issue. Both will make earnest pledges.

Economy First Essential.

"There must be more economy," said Patrick Sullivan, committeeman from Wyoming, yesterday, "or the country will blow up. There can't be any difference of opinion on that. Both parties must pledge economy."

Others expressed like views, but one sentence from Richard W. Condon of Washington contains some sound advice. It follows:

"The state of Washington does not spend the money until it gets it, and we have no state debts and the finest road system in the country."

But what will the platform of the Republican party say on thrift and economy in government? The committeemen in town hesitate to make a prediction, other than it will be sincere promises which the people can rely upon.

It may be embarrassing "to point with pride" to the financial accomplishments of the present administration in view of the fact that the deficit for the first 11 months of this fiscal year is two billion 600 million dollars.

Table "Short but Sad."

The income, expense and deficit period of the preceding fiscal year, are shown in the following short and sad table:

Items—	Year of 1932.	Year of 1931.
Expenditures	$4,455,219,844	$3,729,348,486
Income	1,770,269,398	2,684,438,387
Deficits ...	$2,684,950,446	$1,044,910,099

That will not be much to brag about in a platform, but, of course, the party chieftains can tell the great American people how they will do better for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933. For that twelve months it is claimed they have a balanced budget, by the enactment of new taxes by which it is forecast (in Washington) that 1 billion and 118 million dollars of added revenue will be obtained.

Recalls 1928 Platform.

But the effort will be to write a declaration on economy that will appeal to the electorate. Many times before a plank has been written on economy, but not in forty years has that plank been so vital to a party platform. But not very much from previous platforms can be copied.

However, there were some declarations in the 1928 platform which the writers of the 1932 document might appropriatetly copy: One of them reads: "The citizen and the taxpayer has a natural right to be protected from unnecessary and wasteful expenditures."

PILOT LANDS PLANE SAFELY ON ONE WHEEL

When Joseph Bogan Jr. of 6030 South Keating avenue, a flying instructor, took off in his plane yesterday from the Chicago airport with T. K. Jdant, a Chinese student, as a passenger, the left wheel of his landing gear dropped off.

Bogan continued upward, unaware of his peril. The loss of the wheel was noticed by observers and one of them, Ray Colton, a pilot for the J. & L. Flying Service, took off in his plane. He followed Bogan aloft and by means of signals informed him that his plane was crippled.

Bogan, by skillful maneuvering, landed on his right wheel. He held the wheelless left axle off the ground until his ship's speed decreased and then swung it to the left to a sudden halt. The plane was a Moth biplane powered by a Gypsy motor.

DOCTOR RUSHES TO MRS. HUTTON, THE EVANGELIST

Los Angeles, Cal., June 11.—(AP)—A hurried call for a physician at the mountain resort where Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton has gone into retreat created the belief at Angelus temple today that her condition had taken a turn for the worse.

Such complete secrecy had surrounded the movement of the evangelist and her husband, David Hutton, that the physician did not know where they were until he was summoned.

Hutton said his wife's condition, a nervous disturbance aggravated by tropical fever contracted on a recent trip to Guatemala, had been rendered worse by excitement attending the approaching trial of a $200,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Myrtle St. Pierre, a nurse. The trial is to start next Wednesday.

Hoover to Keep Ear at Phone During Debate on Wet Plank

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Through the medium of the long distance telephone, the telegraph, seven members of his cabinet and Walter Newton, his political secretary, President Hoover intends to keep his fingers constantly on the pulse of the Republican convention at Chicago.

Notwithstanding the impression given out at the White House that Mr. Hoover will adopt a hands off policy during the convention proceedings, there were the strongest indications today that the President expects to use every effort to guide the activities of the convention on prohibition as well as on other planks to be incorporated in the party platform.

Administration officials now in Chicago or on the way have tentative drafts of planks on prohibition, national defense, war debts and reparations, economy, and other domestic and international problems, all of which have been approved by cabinet members or the President himself. The greatest administration pressure is to be exerted in framing the prohibition and war debts planks.

Hint He Would Accept Repeal.

From the beginning of the negotiations for a moist plank on prohibition, President Hoover has exerted every effort to hold the party to a campaign pledge for resubmission of the 18th amendment to a vote of the people and to prevent adoption of an out and out repeal plank. It became known today that Mr. Hoover was in long distance communication with administration spokesmen at Chicago this morning. Later it was said that party leaders at Chicago had advised the President that prospects were bright for settling the prohibition fight in the resolutions committee and thus keeping the wet and dry question from reaching the floor.

Notwithstanding these reports, White House and administration officials supporting his program continued apprehensive today over the possibility that the wringing wets would assemble enough strength to push through a straight repeal plank. It has been whispered about, although confirmation is lacking, that President Hoover would not repudiate a repeal plank if it were written into the platform by a majority of the party.

Cabinet Men Talk Submission.

The fact that so many of the straddle and dry candidates have been defeated in the spring and summer primaries has had its effect in administration circles, but thus far has not, according to all reports, persuaded the President that he should throw in his hat with the half of his cabinet which is for out and out repeal. The fact that many of the cabinet repealers are now talking simply resubmission has been interpreted as the best proof that the President intends to hold the convention in line.

Following a conference with Mr. Hoover, Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills left for Chicago at 4 o'clock, where he will be a member of the resolutions committee, a post which will give him opportunity to impress the administration views on prohibition as well as other subjects. Mr. Mills declined flatly to discuss prohibition or other phases of the convention prior to his departure. Secretary of War Hurley and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde also conferred with the President during the day.

Lamont Starts for Chicago.

Secretary of Commerce Lamont and Secretary of the Interior Wilbur also left today for Chicago. Secretary Hurley hopes to get away tomorrow or Monday, while Secretary of Labor Doak and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde will go tomorrow.

If administration leaders have their way, according to a high authority, the platform adopted by the Republican convention will contain either no declaration on the subject of war debts or a very vague reference, notwithstanding the joint resolution of congress on Dec. 23, opposing any cancellation or reduction of these obligations. Secretary Stimson, it is said, will go to the convention tomorrow primed to explain why the party should remain noncommittal on this subject.

Although the capital refused to take the talk of not renominating Vice President Curtis yesterday seriously, there was a noticeable change of view today. If Charles G. Dawes could be induced to accept the vice presidency nomination it was thought in many quarters today that the convention would bolt in his favor. Mr. Dawes, however, has remained silent.

She Had Money to Burn, but That Problem's Solved

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Anita Castaldi of North Bergen, N. J., has money to burn—or rather she did have. She burned almost $3,000 today. Mrs. Castaldi kept her money in a shoe box. This afternoon she cleaned house and the bills—$3,250 in all—found their way into a back yard trash pile, which was ignited. Small boys, attracted by the burning pile, were delighted to find $5 and $10 bills blowing about the heap. Older persons arrived. Eventually the police came. Mrs. Castaldi recovered $350.

WHEN THE CHAMP BATTLES SHADOW THAT'S POLITICS

Pegler Finds It's All Fixed for Hoover to Win.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

The Republican national convention, called to renominate Mr. Hoover for the presidency, seems to have much in common with a heavyweight championship wrestling match, which represents a maximum of bother and expense for a minimum of benefit. It never matters who wins the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world and there are those who hold to the belief that nothing will matter any more, either, if Mr. Hoover should be reëlected.

Mr. Hoover does not appear to be a popular champion. This type will be familiar to all patrons of both wrestling and prize fighting and, in the present production, he is meeting a setup, which I am sure all patrons of wrestling and prize fighting will recognize as a familiar condition also. In fact, it is not apparent to the naked eye that Mr. Hoover is meeting any opposition at all. On the contrary, I am given to understand by the political experts that he is about to engage merely in a shadow wrestling bout and also that the shadow wrestling bout is fixed. That is to say, that Mr. Hoover, through his control of all the jobs for deserving Republicans, has eliminated all contention and will go before the delegates to clamp holds on his shadow and toss it for a series of loops.

The Eye Has Its Limitations.

This is the first contest that I have ever heard of in a rather varied experience in the sport business in which a champion thought it necessary to fix a bout with his own shadow, but then the rules are not the same in politics. Still it may not be quite fair to assume that Mr. Hoover is wrestling with his own shadow in this fixed contest merely because his opposition is not visible to the naked eye. The naked eye has its limitations.

It is rather surprising to note the certainty with which the political experts predict the outcome of the impending convention. On the sport side, if an expert has positive information that a contest is in the bag he usually denounces the production as a fake and calls upon the prize fight commission to investigate the matter. This the commission does, after the bout, and many a fixed contest has been denounced in no uncertain terms by the boxing commission of the various states afterward. But in the case of the Republican convention it is frankly conceded that the thing is in the bag for Mr. Hoover, and yet nobody seems to regard this as a deplorable state of affairs. Neither does this knowledge, which is shared by the customers, appear to be harming the show at the box office, where the seats are selling for $8.

Same Old Ballyhoo.

The ballyhoo is proceeding in much the same way as the ballyhoo for a battle of the century, with the photographers snapping the distinguished visitors as they arrive to attend the gruelling fixed shadow wrestling contest, but there is plainly a feeling among some of the Republicans that their convention is worth traveling miles to see and hear, even if the result is to be only Hoover.

The convention is to be held in the Chicago Stadium which is said to contain the most elaborate and expensive set of acoustics in the United States and there is only one distinct difference that I have heard thus far between the solemn conclave of the Republicans and almost any of Mr. Jack Curley's wrestling productions in New York. Mr. Curley discovered within the last few years that the patrons were exceedingly fond of bird calls and jungle sounds and many a noted wrestler has got by in his herd on nothing more than an agonized bellow. But up to this time, there has never been a successful drawing card who went before the customers with a whine for his battle cry and a hair shirt for his costume.

Mr. Nate Lewis Worried.

I do not know what Mr. Nate Lewis will think of this thing of letting them nominate Hoover again in the hall where he holds his prize fights. Up to now the customers have been very kind to Mr. Lewis, patronizing his shows with great liberality and he has tried at all times to avoid any move that would give them offense and drive them away from his place. There have been a few prizefights that were not altogether satisfactory but the patrons seemed to realize that Mr. Lewis was trying and they held nothing against him for little accidental half failures. But the customers can be pressed just so far and it is hard to see how Mr. Lewis will be able to square himself when this convention is over.

Just Another Wet Ruse.

It is possible to state now that the reported move to close up the Chicago speakeasies and suspend the bootleggers' licenses for the duration of the convention was a dastardly plot on the part of the liquor interests themselves to profiteer on the necessity of the visiting delegates. This is a familiar ruse, annually resorted to in Saratoga Springs, Miami and other centers of pleasure. The alarm, once spread, creates an impression among the visitors that refreshments are scarce and therefore more expensive and the government agents often have been the innocent tools of the liquor interests in this respect.

In the present instance there has been no molestation of the purveyors, however, beyond the usual, orderly collections and disciplinary arrests for neglect to meet just obligations and the supply is now slightly larger, if anything. Any attempts to raise the prices beyond the standard prices should be reported to the federal authorities who, being Republicans, will take action to protect the Republican delegates gathered to renominate Mr. Hoover, from the greed of unethical dealers.

Nothing has been heard from Mr. Hoover yet as to the prohibition matter but his silence has lasted only four years and there was a political fanatic from India, who happened through here recently, claiming not to have spoken a word in seven years.

Oak Park Woman Falls 60 Feet from Roof of Building

Mrs. Lou Perkinson, 37 years old, 212 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, was probably fatally injured yesterday when she fell 60 feet from the roof of the apartment building in which she lived. She had been seriously ill for more than a week. Neighbors found her lying in the alleyway, clad in night dress and bathrobe. She was taken to the Oak Park hospital, where she told police that she did not know what had happened.

DRYS PROPOSE PRAYER TO KEEP HOOVER IN LINE

'Loyalty' Convention Rips Into John D. Jr.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

Prayers were implored for President Hoover yesterday, ridicule was heaped on John D. Rockefeller Jr., and bigotry was charged against Chicago society women who oppose prohibition, as the W. C. T. U. wing of the ultra dry phalanx took command of the "loyalty" convention staged here by organizations supporting the 18th amendment. The whole was a prelude to the Republican national convention.

The 138 faithful who were sprinkled through the pews of the Third Presbyterian church, Ashland and Ogden avenues, when the "loyalty" convention was opened Friday night by Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, had dwindled to fewer than 100 yesterday. But the convention was kept chummy when the conferees deserted the nave of the big edifice for closer quarters in a Sunday school room in the basement.

Mrs. Peabody Speaks Out.

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, member of an old Boston family, organizer of the Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement, took the first healthy crack that the drys have made at Rockefeller since he declared his renunciation of the dry cause last week. Mrs. Peabody was an old friend of the Rockefeller family.

"I loved his mother dearly and I have known John since he was a little boy," she said. "I can't think that he is in his proper place with that gang—the upper crust on one side and the underworld on the other. We must now think of him as lined up with the outlawed brewers and distillers. He also receives the hearty approval of the underworld, machine politicians, and the fringe of fashionable society.

"Men and boys are apt to join in group thinking. John Rockefeller gave it all away when he accepted the erratic thinking of Nicholas Murray Butler on personal liberty. When Dr. Butler gave an honorary degree to 'Alice in Wonderland' we caught a vision of his intellectual leadership which has produced an alcoholic mentality among New Yorkers."

Asks Prayer for Hoover.

Having disposed of Rockefeller, Mrs. Peabody called on the assembled women to join in a prayer service for President Hoover and the dry cause at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the First Congregational church.

"Let us pray for Mr. Hoover that he does not listen to the counsels of those evil men," she exclaimed. "He is facing a day of great temptation. Let us pray that our President, who has been so fine, will remove the evil counselors from their high places."

Mrs. Ella A. Boole of Brooklyn, world president of the W. C. T. U., assailed Mayor Walker of New York for his recent beer parade. Mrs. Boole was irked, she said, to find a crowd of urchins peddling signs announcing, "We Want Beer."

"I didn't attend the parade," Mrs. Boole said, "but I read that 500,000 were expected to be in line. The New York Times announced that 20,000 participated and a war veteran who gave me an account of the spectacle said there were 100 empty taxis and trucks in line."

Society Women Assailed.

North shore society women came in for a roasting in the speech of Mrs. William Gourley of Lake Forest, chairman of the law observance committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Gourley last attracted notice by bolting a Lake Forest Kiwanis club party when she sipped some suspicious punch.

"They talk about narrow-minded fanatics and blue-nosed bigots," she exclaimed. "When they hold their meetings over half the audience are drys. Why don't they come out and hear our side once in a while? Why, one of my neighbors told me not long ago that the wets up in Lake Bluff had persecuted her with invitations, teas, and so on until she signed one of their cards."

36 DRY AGENTS STAGE 9 RAIDS AT HIGHWOOD

Federal dry agents, aided by Lake county officers, raided nine alleged wet spots in Highwood yesterday and seized twelve prisoners. Highwood is just to the south of Fort Sheridan and the raids were said to have been prompted by Brig. Gen. Frank Bolles, the commandant. Thirty-six agents, led by A. E. Aman and A. E. Hamilton, made the cleanup after three weeks of investigation.

Six men who were arrested in dry raids last week in Wheaton and Winfield, in Du Page county, will be arraigned Wednesday before Magistrate Frank E. Herrick in Wheaton. The places raided were a poolroom, a gambling hall, a roadhouse, and a saloon. The raids were inspired by complaints to Police Chief Lyle Grange of Wheaton that high school students were obtaining liquor.

"LIFE FOR A PINT" PROSECUTOR NOW CRUSADER CHIEF

Lansing, Mich., June 11.—[Special.]—Barnard Pierce, former Ingham county prosecutor, was announced today as commander of the newly organized Lansing battalion of the Crusaders, national anti-prohibition organization.

Pierce prosecuted two prohibition cases which gained world-wide renown, those of Fred Palm, first victim of Michigan's former "life for a pint" law, and Mrs. Etta Mae Miller, local housewife, who was the first woman to be sent to prison for life for prohibition violations under the state habitual criminal act. Palm's sentence has since been commuted to 7½ to 15 years. Mrs. Miller was released after serving about a year in the Detroit house of correction when the state Supreme court upset her conviction.

WOMAN SHOT; ACCUSES HUSBAND.

Mrs. Emily Sharver, 36 years old, was shot in the chest in front of 1053 Madison street last night. At the county hospital she told police her husband, Rudolph, also 36, of 1139 Washington boulevard, was her assailant.

CHICAGO GIVES G. O. P. ITS BEST FOR CONVENTION

Hurley Inspects Stadium and Finds It Ready.

the missing date be made to read June 27."

June 27 is the date on which the Democratic national convention will assemble in the Stadium.

So Neutral It Hurts.

Resuming neutrality, the go-getter said:

"I'm being so neutral that it hurts. But I have to bear the pain in order to keep peace between the committees on arrangements of the opposition political families. Behold the decorations of this hall—the thousands of yards of red, white and blue draperies that adorn the balcony railings, the hundreds of American flags hanging from the roof, and the 48 coats of arms of the states. Well, all those decorations are paid for out of the $150,000 which 850 banks and hotels and public spirited citizens gave the Republican national committee to pay the expenses of its impending national convention, an equal sum being contributed by our fellow citizens to the Democratic national committee for their convention.

President Fights Back.

"The Democrats expect the Republicans to leave the adornments, which they have paid for, to brighten up this hall for the Democratic convention. Seems as if it would be the pleasant, comradely thing to do.

"But you'd be surprised—you would be surprised! Surprised at how men in their sixties can act like children. Of course, most of the Republican committeemen are showing the right spirit about leaving the decorations, but a few of the brethren had tantrums and said, 'No, we will tear them down first.'

"So I have to stay neutral and keep peace in the two families. My gracious, I've had more trouble about those decorations than I had raising my four children!"

Supplementing the streamers and the flags in the scheme of decoration for this week will be a huge portrait of George Washington at one end of the hall and another of Lincoln at the other end.

"And how about one of President Hoover?" I asked.

"Ah, his will be suddenly revealed to the delegates after he has been nominated," replied Sidney Strotz, president of the Stadium company.

Stadium Will Seat 20,400.

The Stadium, which covers two-thirds of the block bounded on the north by Warren avenue, on the south by Madison street, on the east by Wood street, and on the west by Lincoln street, will seat 7,785 paying guests of the convention on its mezzanine floor, 3,178 in its first balcony, and 3,518 in its second balcony, thus leaving 5,919 seats on the main floor for the 2,254 delegates and alternates, the 726 newspaper correspondents, and nearly 3,000 distinguished guests.

And so, if and when the oratory rouses delegates and spectators to unanimous acclaim, a total of 20,400 voices will be lifted in the cheering—granting that the 726 newspaper correspondents join in, which they never have done since the unforgettable afternoon of 1896 in the old Coliseum on Wabash avenue, when the climax of Bryan's cross of gold speech made them lose their heads for thirty seconds. Recovering sense, they were ashamed, and their only excuse was that it was a moment of great drama fraught with melody. The melody, not the economics, carried their voices into the maelstrom of madly cheering delegates.

Price of the Tickets.

Tickets admitting a paying guest to an all day session of the convention will cost him $3.40, $4.40, or $8.00, depending on location of the seat. Tickets admitting one to all the sessions of the convention, however long it lasts, will cost $17, $22, or $40, also depending on location. As yet the sale is small.

Every contributor to the funds which bring the conventions to Chicago receives one mezzanine seat for all the sessions of each convention.

"I believe," said Mr. Hurley, "that the financing of national conventions of the future will depend less and less on contributions by the citizens of the community in which the convention is held and more and more on the number of tickets which the national committee of a party assigns to the local committee to sell. I believe this because the American people are becoming more and more practical. Our partisan enthusiasms are not so easily pumped up as formerly and hence contributions for partisan causes will not be so easily obtained. People will pay to go into the convention hall as spectators, but they will not pay so lavishly as in the past to have a national convention brought to their city.

A Lesson in Government.

"The change will be a good thing. A national convention is not only a great spectacle, but it is also educational—a lesson in government. Every American ought to study at least one in his life—study it carefully. But the trouble in the past has been that about seventy-five per cent of the audience at a national convention had attended one or more before. Party workers, ward committeemen in large cities who received tickets in batches, and such like partisans who came not to study but to clamor for a candidate made up the majority of the audience. But by the sale of tickets we shall get different audiences and hence the people's knowledge of government by party will become more intimate."

Republican managers are counting on a four day convention—five days at the outside. Asked as to the probable duration of the Democratic convention, Mr. Hurley smiled broadly and replied, "Indefinite."

Cost Is $15,000 a Day.

Estimates are that, counting in such preliminary expenses as carpentry and decorations the cost of the twentieth Republican national convention will amount to from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars a day. The carpenters' bill for installing speakers' platforms, press seats, and press rooms at the Stadium will be $12,000. Decorations cost $5,000. Band music will come to $500 a day and ushers the same sum. The rent of the hall is $2,000 a day. A large item will be the hotel bills of 25 of the party's 96 national committeemen who make up the committee on arrangements for the convention and whose expenses to and in Chicago are paid out of the $150,000 given by our fellow citizens.

Conservative members of our citizens' committee find that many of the national committeemen are shockingly extravagant in spending the party's funds and that, for example, the bills for long distance telephone calls are such as would be tolerated by no well conducted business house. "Long distance calls," said one citizen, "which are made by some pompous party manager merely to convince us that he is important. But he doesn't convince us. He only makes us tired."

Most of Guarantees Paid.

Already the Republicans have received $110,000 of the $150,000 pledged to them by Chicago and the Democrats $125,000 of the $150,000 pledged to them, although the Democratic convention does not open until two weeks from tomorrow.

In addition to the party expenditures at the Stadium the telegraph companies are spending $45,000 on the installation of wires and generators.

In the basement of the Stadium forty-six press rooms have been built for the leading newspapers of the country. William J. Collins, superintendent of the press gallery of the United States senate, and William J. Donaldson, superintendent of the press gallery of the house of representatives, have arrived from Washington to give their valuable counsel in the perfecting of the arrangements for the press. To them fell the trying task of allotting the 726 press seats, all of which have now been assigned.

Amplifiers for Street Throngs.

Amplification at the Stadium will be more extensive than at any previous national convention. In addition to the usual amplifiers above the speakers' platform amplifiers have been placed in the roof of the building, 117 feet aloft, so as to carry the proceedings to throngs in adjoining streets.

Mr. Hurley estimates that this week's convention will draw 100,000 visitors to Chicago.

Sixty and a half per cent of all the delegates will come from points within a night's ride of this city, a fact which had a great deal to do with the decision of the national committees of both parties to choose Chicago as the convention city for 1932.

6 Trapped in Mine Cave-In Rescued After 30 Hours

SOCIALIST CHILE LAUNCHES WAR ON COMMUNISM

Stop Spreading Propaganda, Reds Warned.

BY JOHN LIVINGSTONE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 11.—Col. Marmduke Grove, minister of defense and "strong man" of Chile's Socialist junta, today opened a drive against communism, warning the Reds to drop their subversive activties.

"Certain publications have hinted that the junta has not taken the necessary steps to control Red activities," he said. "No drastic measures will be taken. The situation is not serious enough, but this does not mean that we will not keep a watchful eye."

Demands Propaganda Cease.

Col. Grove demanded that all Red propaganda cease at once, declaring that he is ready to check "with an iron hand" any movement to put obstacles in the way of government.

"This is no threat, but an admonition," the minister of defense continued. "The people must be kept serene. They must be prevented from being swayed by Red propaganda. No one will swerve me in the line of conduct I pledged to maintain when the revolutionary movement was started."

The revolutionary junta this morning created a Nationalist-Socialist economic council. Workers are among the members of the organization which will assist the government in the formation of its economic policies. The council will hold daily sessions. Its suggestions will be advisory only.

Socialist leaders of Colombia, Ecuador, and Peru joined Chilean workers and other supporters of the new Socialist state in the celebration of its successful revolution at two mass meetings today. Thousands cheered the new junta and applauded a host of orators.

Continue Gold Raids.

Detectives today continued their raids on jewelry stores, seizing gold and arresting the owners for melting the precious metal and selling it outside of the country. About $120,000 in gold was confiscated.

All foreign exchange shops were ordered closed. The raiders descended on 55 foreign exchange shops, breaking the signs of "Se compra oro" [we buy gold] over their doors.

Quits Honduran Race.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, June 11—(AP)—While government troops pursued a rebel group today in the northern mountain fastness, an unwilling candidate withdrew from the Honduran presidential campaign which precipitated the uprising this week.

Rafael Diaz Chavez, vice president of the republic, who recently was nominated for the presidency by a group of dissident liberals, issued a manifesto in which he stepped out of the race.

The regular Liberal ticket for the election Oct. 30 is headed by Dr. Angel Zunita Huete. The rival candidate is Gen. Tiburcio Carias Andino, Nationalist. The revolutionary faction with which government forces have clashed is headed by Filiberto Diaz Zelaya, leader of the Nationalist party, dispatches said.

HEAD OF ARGENTINA WARNED OF FASCIST DICTATORSHIP PLOT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, June 11.—The visit of Senator Alfredo Palacios of the Socialist party to the private residence of President Augustin P. Justo last night revived demands of right wing partisans that he cease his "straddling" attitude. The Socialist party provided President Justo with his principal opposition in the elections last November which restored a constitutional government to Argentina.

The Socialist party tonight revealed that President Justo consulted with Palacios concerning rumors that the right wing was agitating in favor of Fascist dictatorship. Senator Palacios said that the rumors were important and advised strong government action. Minister of the Interior Leopoldo Melo later said that he is prepared to deal with any emergency.

The right wingers are disgruntled over the government's failure to take strong action against extremists, particularly against vandalism and sabotage. They charged that Justo is tacitly allowing the independent Socialists and their allies to further the interests of the soviets.

WAR VETERAN, 82, THROWS KNIFE, ROUTS ROBBERS

William Wade, 82 year veteran of the Spanish-American war, was reading last night in his home at 3708 Ellis avenue when two armed Negroes entered the kitchen. Mr. Wade retreated slowly to a table, where he grasped a large butcher knife. With a quick motion he hurled this at one of the Negroes, striking him. He went forward to retrieve the weapon and the second man fired, his bullet grazing Mr. Wade's right shoulder. Then both men fled. Mr. Wade went to the Lakeside hospital, where he was given treatment and then returned home to his reading. He explained that he had learned how to throw butcher knives while he was soldiering.

Mrs. Riedel of Winnetka Files Suit for Divorce

Mrs. Miriam Riedel, 1097 Merrill avenue, Winnetka, yesterday filed suit for divorce from Gordon D. Riedel, western manager of the Maine Steel Products company, charging cruelty and adultery. Her attorney, Arthur U. Forman said a property settlement has been agreed upon. The case will be heard by Judge Daniel P. Trude this week.

Capture Chicago Convict Escaping from Joliet

Edward Rabalais, 25 years old, who escaped from the Stateville penitentiary honor farm Friday night, was captured yesterday five miles west of the prison. He was found by prison guards, hiding in hedge along a country road. Rabalais was sentenced in Chicago in 1927 to serve one to 10 years for larceny.

Negro Is Found Guilty in Mine Murder Case

Harlan, Ky., June 11.—(AP)—Big Cigar Phillips, Negro, was convicted tonight of the murder of Deputy Sheriff James Daniels in the battle of Evarts and sentenced to life imprisonment. The jury deliberated four hours and 50 minutes.

In closing arguments the defense sought acquittal on the ground Phillips took no part in the fight last year in which two deputy sheriffs, a commissary clerk and a miner were slain, and the prosecution asked for the death penalty.

The trial started May 30 when a special term of court was called for the murder trials of 27 men indicted as a result of the Evarts battle.

COURT MAY HOLD BUDGET ILLEGAL IF PAY IS CUT

Issue Warning in Reply to Mayor.

The Municipal court judges announced yesterday that the legality of the city's budget, scheduled for passage tomorrow, will be endangered unless an appropriation for their full salaries for 1932 is included.

The judges have insisted that it was an imposition upon the judicial dignity for the mayor to demand that they each accept a 48 day pay cut and save the city $50,000 a year. On Friday afternoon when they met to vote upon the question they talked for three hours, voted 18 to 8 to accept the cut, and then decided not to take it after all.

Threaten Validity of Budget.

When he learned of the judges' action Mayor Cermak said:

"We'll appropriate on a basis of the 48 days' pay cut anyway. Let them sue for their full salaries if they want them."

Yesterday, after all the judges had learned of the mayor's attitude, Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby announced on behalf of the others:

"The mayor and the council cannot take from the judges the salary given them by the statutes. If the budget appropriation is made for 48 days less than a full year's salary for each judge the budget will be in jeopardy."

Judges Object to Dictation.

"The executive departments of the city cannot dictate to the judicial. Some of our judges have charged this when they say that the mayor has brought pressure to bear upon the court. If this thing is done there will be grave legal doubt as to the validity of the budget."

Judge Sonsteby explained that each judge would be forced to mandamus the city individually to force the payment of his full salary. If such suits were brought, he said, the courts might find that the whole city budget was faulty because it failed to appropriate the judges' salaries as fixed by the statutes creating the Municipal court.

At Friday's meeting the judges agreed without a vote to make a "voluntary contribution," of their salaries to the city. Each judge will determine for himself just how much he is willing to be cut from his monthly pay check. John W. Miller, assistant to the chief justice, who prepares the court pay rolls, said yesterday that none of the judges had informed him that they would take any cuts.

Agree to Save $6,000.

Judge Sonsteby said that 25 of the court's 38 judges have signed an agreement to give 15 days' pay to the city, thus saving approximately $6,000. The political division of these judges is nearly equal, 13 Democratic and 12 Republican judges having signed.

These judges are: Chief Justice Sonsteby, and judges, Jonas, Helander, Casey, McMillan, Holmes, Allegretti, Hayes, Trude, Harold P. O'Connell, Schulman, Lupe, McCarthy, Padden, Scheffler, Graber, Rooney, Lyle, Eberhardt, Brooks, Edelman, Fardy, Sbarbaro, Erickson, and McKinley.

HORNER CALLS FOR PATRIOTISM AT WIGWAM FETE

Dedicates Replica of '60 Nomination Hall.

A hope that both Republican and Democratic political conventions will be actuated by the same unselfish motives as the convention of 1860 which nominated Lincoln for President was voiced yesterday by Probate Judge Henry Horner in the address of dedication of the replica of the Wigwam hall at the World's Fair grounds. Lincoln was nominated in the Wigwam which stood at Lake and Market streets.

"Let us hope that each of the conventions will offer a man who is worthy to follow in the footsteps of Abraham Lincoln," said Judge Horner, who is one of the leading authorities in America on Lincolnia.

Group Open to Public.

A large crowd attended the dedication services which formally opened the entire Abraham Lincoln exhibit group to the public. The group included replicas of the log cabin in which Lincoln was born, of the Indiana home where he spent his boyhood, of the Lincoln-Berry store which represented Lincoln's first venture into business, and of the Rutledge tavern as well as the Wigwam.

Judge Horner, who is the Democratic candidate for governor of Illinois, recalled briefly the scene of the convention which nominated Lincoln.

"There was first the usual debate over the platform and when, on the third day, nominations were in order, Norman P. Judd of Chicago offered the name of Lincoln the rail splitter," he said. "Lincoln was nominated for President on the third ballot and soon thereafter Hannibal Hamlin of Maine, whose son later lived and practiced law and died in Chicago, was nominated as Vice President.

Cannon Shakes Wigwam.

"The enthusiasm that followed the selection of Lincoln is beyond my power of description. A man who had been stationed on the roof of the Wigwam, and watched through a skylight over the stage of the convention for the signal of Lincoln's nomination, yelled: 'Abe Lincoln is nominated,' and according to prearrangement fired a cannon from the roof which made the whole Wigwam rattle.

"Whenever there is erected a memorial to remind the youth as well as the grownups of the theme of Lincoln, there is a beacon and monitor for our people. A beacon to give to us a better understanding of the duties of citizenship and to warn us from the rocks of dispair. A monitor to admonish and caution us that the nation which he so courageously preserved needs our unselfish and unswerving devotion

"Who among us will gainsay that our country now needs from its citizenship that sacrifice and unconquerable courage in the solution of its current problems that Lincoln exhibited in the gigantic problems of his day?"

Flag Day Fete Today.

Judge Horner also will be the principal speaker today at the Flag day patriotic demonstration to be staged by the Elks in Grant park. The program starts with a parade at 2 p. m., which will wind through the loop and down Michigan boulevard to 11th street and Grant park.

In the line of march will be the Chicago Lodge of Elks with marching units from other Elk lodges in the Chicago area, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other patriotic organizations. The program, in addition to speeches, will consist of a presidential salute of 21 guns, drill demonstrations, and ritual services by the Elks.

PEOPLE'S TRUST AUDITOR HUNTED; $32,040 MISSING

Flees After Learning Bank Is to Close.

Charles L. Pennell, auditor and assistant cashier of the People's Trust and Savings bank, 32 North Michigan avenue, was a fugitive yesterday after embezzlements of $32,040 were discovered. Pennell, who is 42 years old and lived with his wife and three children at 6621 North Ashland avenue, had been employed by the bank for 15 years at a salary of $6,800 per year.

Earle H. Reynolds, president, who is a son of George Reynolds, another prominent banker, notified depositors of the bank on Thursday that the bank would pay its accounts in full and close. When Pennell was informed of the impending liquidation, which would throw him out of work, he remarked to a fellow employé:

"When a bank goes out of business all there is left for a bank official to do is to shoot himself."

Takes Revolver with Him.

Then he put a revolver belonging to the bank into his pocket and took it with him when he left that night. Mr. Reynolds early yesterday morning denied emphatically that there was any truth in the report of the embezzlement, but later in the day admitted that Pennell had taken the money, adding that he had been an employé with a good record. Mr. Reynolds revealed that the embezzlements were committed on Thursday, after the closing notice was given.

"We all worked Thursday evening and up to 5 o'clock Friday morning," President Reynolds said yesterday. "We were getting ready to pay off the depositors. Pennell, however, went to supper, returned, and then left again a few minutes later without saying anything to any one. We learned he went home that evening and told his wife he wasn't feeling well. He left home at 10 o'clock Friday morning and we haven't heard from him since.

Approves Debit Slips.

"The embezzlements were discovered when a customer came in to withdraw his deposits. There was a shortage of $2,000 in his account and it was quickly discovered that Pennell had approved a debit slip against that account Thursday afternoon. Then we found that he had done the same with seven other accounts. It was his duty to approve these debit slips and there was nothing irregular about it except that the depositors had not requested them. Pennell obtained the money on each debit slip and took the bills to his own cage where he concealed them on his person."

Pay Off 3,000 Depositors.

The bank had a normal amount of cash on hand that day, Mr. Reynolds said—about $600,000 or $700,000. Pennell, however, couldn't get at the bulk of it, Reynolds said. On Friday the bank paid out $1,350,000 to about 3,000 depositors.

The loss is fully covered by insurance, Mr. Reynolds said. Evidently the theft was known on Friday, despite denials. The bonding company started a search for Pennell and all day Friday detectives listened in on the Pennell telephone, but the fugitive did not communicate with his wife. The detectives said he gave her no intimation he was about to disappear. The wife does not believe he intended to kill himself, they said.

Wife's Suit Says Husband Chases Her with Bayonet

SEIZE SUSPECT IN ROBBERY OF STREATOR BANK

Streator, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Dispatches from Boston, Mass., said that Sheriff Edmund Walters of Ottawa today arrested Jacob Pearson, 28 years old, in Boston, as one of the bandit gang that looted the Union National bank of Streator of $52,000 on May 16. Search of Pearson's apartment netted $2,000 in $10 and $20 bills, believed to have been taken in the bank robbery.

Assistant Chief of Police Clarence Goss and Patrolman George Kmetz of Streator have confessed to plotting with the bandits to rob the bank and are being held to the grand jury in bonds of $100,000 each. Four other men also were arrested as members of the bandit gang and held to the grand jury.

Gunmen entered the home of Earl McNamara, cashier of the bank, on the night of the robbery and after holding him prisoner all night forced him to open the bank vault.

PHYSICIAN FAILS TO PAY $10,000 CLAIM; JAILED

Dr. Alexander B. Magnus, head of a sanitarium for mental patients at 2028 Prairie avenue, was in the county jail last evening for failure to pay a $10,000 judgment to Mrs. Mary Connor, 2208 Prairie avenue. In May, 1930, she was awarded the sum because the physician had her arrested and held in the psychopathic hospital for a sanity hearing at which she was declared sane.

Yesterday Dr. Magnus filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the Circuit court, but Judge Thomas J. Lynch refused to hear any evidence, holding that since the case had been decided by the Apellate court he had no jurisdiction.

The doctor then filed a petition as as an insolvent debtor in the County court. Because he was unable to post an $11,000 bond he was sent to jail.

We congratulate ourselves too, because we know that ever so many of you are going to follow in your mothers' and grandmothers' foot-steps and buy your groceries from A & P.

We can serve you a great deal better than we did your mother at your age, and at least 100% better than we did your grandmother. Because we have been, and are, everlastingly on the watch for ways and means to improve our business of getting food from its sources to you.

Your mothers and grandmothers liked us because we gave them the kind of food they wanted. We don't expect your tastes to be the same as theirs, and we'll make it our business to stock our stores with whatever foods you prefer.

DEAD WAITRESS' FRIENDS CLEAR LINDY SUSPECT

New "Ernie" Admits Ride on Kidnap Night.

night of March 1, as given by Miller, checked with the account given by Miss Sharpe. He also admitted that Miss Minners' account checked with Miller's.

"I cannot understand why Miss Sharpe killed herself," said Inspector Walsh. "If she had nothing to do with the kidnaping why did she prefer to die rather than divulge Miller's name? Why did she identify a picture of Brinkert as the man she was out with? I can't understand it at all."

Young Miller also appeared puzzled. He insisted there was nothing about the automobile ride that needed to be kept secret. He was frank about the entire story and could give no reason for the girl trying to keep his name a secret.

Inspector Walsh pointed out the fact that Emily Sharpe, the dead girl's sister, had applied for a visa on March 1, the date of the kidnaping, to return to England, and that she sailed four days after Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon had turned over $50,000 to the kidnapers. Walsh also expressed puzzlement over the girl's room. She had Brinkert's business card in her room.

Trace Ladder Again.

Before Inspector Walsh's announcement was made the police seemed to be convinced Brinkert was connected with the case. They had men in Larchmont, N. Y., trying to find out whether a certain ladder that disappeared from a Mamaroneck estate the same day that Brinkert quit a butler's job there was similar to the ladder used by the kidnapers to climb to the Lindbergh baby's bedroom at Hopewell.

They were also checking Brinkert's alibi. He was reported to have told the police that he spent the night of March 1 with Frank Page, a Negro who worked with him on the Larchmont estate. Page recalled that Brinkert had come to his home with his wife, but was unable to fix the date. At first he identified the Brinkerts' arrival with a Lindbergh radio broadcast which would fix the date as March 2, but later said it was the first broadcast late in the evening of March 1.

Release Girl's Statements.

In a further effort to disprove the belief that Miss Sharpe had been driven to suicide, the police released the text of all statements she had made to them. In her first statement the girl told about having gone to a motion picture show on the night of March 1. In subsequent statements she admitted she had visited a road house instead. In other statements she added new details, but never could recall the last name of her companion on the night of the automobile ride, nor the identity of any of the other three in the car.

Mrs. Morrow could not be reached tonight but a friend of the family said that Miss Sharpe's employer had expressed the conviction, time after time, despite the suspicions of the police, that the girl was innocent.

Sister Defends Dead Girl.

STOURBRIDGE, England, June 11.—[U.P.]—Emily Sharpe, sister of Violet Sharpe, who committed suicide yesterday in New Jersey, said today that her sister "swore to me that she knew nothing about the disappearance of the Lindbergh child." Emily returned from the United States, where she worked at a home near the Morrows, about a month ago and has been visiting a sister here.

Miss Sharpe, visiting a married sister here, told reporters Violet admitted she was suspected of complicity in the kidnaping because she had been out the night of the crime with two boys whose names she didn't know.

"After the baby was stolen," Emily said, "Violet wrote me and I went to Englewood to see her. She was terribly distressed and said the police had been questioning her for hours."

"Ever since the baby disappeared," Emily said, "she had been badgered and questioned by the police until she didn't know what she was saying or doing.

"The New Jersey police," Emily declared, "drove Violet mad because they doubted her statement that she knew nothing of the case. But they never believe anything you tell them in America."

LINDBERGH SUSPECT CLEARED

Ernest Brinkert (second from the left), friend of Violet Sharpe, the English waitress in the Morrow home who committed suicide, is shown in the custody of New Jersey detectives leaving the police station in New Rochelle, N. Y., for his return to New Jersey, where he was questioned in connection with Lindbergh kidnaping, and cleared of suspicion.

BROTHER AND SISTER KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES IN MICHIGAN

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 11.—(AP)—A brother and sister were killed and another brother, their pilot, was critically injured late today in the crash of an airplane in a field near an airport where the local American Legion posts were holding an air show.

The dead are: John de Meester, 25, and his sister, Lavina, 33. Peter de Meester Jr., was injured so seriously that physicians held little hope for his recovery.

Witnesses said the plane was flying at a height of about 300 feet when it plunged to the earth in a spin.

New Scout Hero Medal Is Memorial to Capt. Russell

A new award for heroism, to be known as the James C. Russell medal, is to be conferred annually upon some member of the Boy Scouts by the Combat Medal Men's association, it was announced Friday night by representative of the association. The award is to be a memorial to the late Capt. James C. Russell, war veteran, former newspaper man, and a founder of the Combat association. Records of Boy Scouts in the Chicago area are now being examined for selection of the boy to receive the first medal. Capt. Herman H. Weimer, Lieut. Fred Weiss, and Lieut. Sidney T. Holzman, all winners of the Distinguished Service Cross, will make the selection.

FATE OF MEANS IN THE HANDS OF JURY TOMORROW

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The fate of Gaston B. Means, accused of swindling Mrs. Evelyn Walsh-McLean, Washington society woman, out of $104,000 in a plan to return the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, will be placed in the hands of a District of Columbia Supreme court jury Monday. The jury is composed of 11 men and one woman.

Justice James M. Proctor made it known today that he would instruct the jury to return a verdict of acquittal on the count charging embezzlement of $4,000 in expense money.

$48,100 Collected for Veterans on Poppy Day

A total of $48,100 was collected on Poppy day, May 26, for disabled veterans and widows and orphans of soldiers, it was announced yesterday by the Veterans' Poppy Day association. The amount fell below the $67,000 collected last year because of rain, which hampered this year's sale, R. Patrick Reilly, president of the association, said.

1,500 FARMERS UNITE TO WORK FOR TAX SLASH

Bureau County Officials Asked to Take Cut.

Princeton, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Fifteen hundred Bureau county farmers enlisted in a lower taxation movement this afternoon at a mass meeting held on the lawn of the county court house here.

Several hundred land owners signed membership cards in the new Bureau County Taxpayers' association which its leaders say will work for lower taxes until corn again hits 70 cents and wheat goes up to a price that will give the farmer a fair return on his investment.

Arguing that they have had to take a reduction in income of 75 per cent since 1928, the farmer leaders of the taxpayers' movement announced that they would go before the board of supervisors Monday and request that all county officers and their deputies take 25 per cent cuts in salaries. Although legally the salaries cannot be changed in the middle of the term of an elected officer the Bureau county officers have volunteered to take cuts.

Teachers' Also Included.

Similar requests to take 25 per cent cuts in pay will also be made upon school teachers throughout the county, practically all of whom have already taken cuts ranging from 10 to 35 per cent.

The hard road system and the expensive system of schools in Bureau county bore the brunt of the taxpayers' objections in the meeting today. Figures were quoted to show that the general county tax has increased 300 per cent since 1920.

A delegation of a hundred tax objectors from Lee county arrived here as the meeting opened. They came in cars decorated with red signs which read, "Lower Taxes, not more taxes, but more taxpayers."

They reported that every public officer in Lee county will be put on the spot on the salary question and will be asked to take a reduction.

Stark County Effects Saving.

In Stark, another neighboring county, which was represented at the tax meeting today, a tax league has brought about economies in government which will save taxpayers many thousands in salaries.

On account of the high fixed charges the objectors believe the only help for relief is for economies to be put into effect by every tax levying body. In Bureau county 57 per cent of taxes is spent on local schools and if the state and county taxes were wiped out entirely this would lower the tax bill only 20 per cent.

For this reason the attack on high taxes is being centered to a large extent upon the schools.

Pictures Farmers' Plight.

John Hauter, of Tiskilwa, president of the tax association, presided at today's meeting. Picturing the plight of the farmer and small business men in the present emergency he urged his listeners to action and delegations from every township will appear Monday before the board of supervisors.

Speakers included State Senator T. P. Gunning and Representative F. W. Rennick, both of the 37th district; and Mayor Claude Brown, of Princeton.

Senator Gunning urged passage of a bill putting teeth in the assessment law so that each person would be required to file a tax return as is now required under the federal income tax law. This, he said, would put the responsibility on the taxpayer and not on the assessor and would end inequality of assessments both in Cook county and downstate.

Jury Awards Brakeman $30,500 for Injuries

William Strong, 32 years old, of Elkhart, Ind., was awarded $30,500 yesterday for injuries suffered while working as a brakeman for the New York Central railroad. The verdict was returned by a jury in the Superior court of Judge Michael L. McKinley. Strong, who was carried into court on a stretcher, testified that he fell from a moving box car when a grab iron gave way in the Elkhart yards on March 1. Physicians said that he suffered a double fracture of the back, a broken leg and hip.

2 MORE WEEKS OF CONGRESS, IS LEADERS' GUESS

Finish Job and Go Home, Robinson Urges.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Two more weeks of congress were forecast by Republican senate leaders today as Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, called on his colleagues to finish up their work and get out of Washington.

Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, Republican senate leader; Charles L. McNary of Oregon, assistant leader, and George H. Moses of New Hampshire united in predicting that congress would be ready to quit on or about June 25, two days before the Democratic convention meets in Chicago.

There has been hope, even expectation, that congress might get through a week from today, but the three Republicans did not believe it could be done.

People Anxious, He Says.

In his appeal for speed, Senator Robinson told the senate that the people are anxious to see congress adjourn.

"There is a very general feeling throughout the country," Senator Robinson told his colleagues, "that we should conclude our essential business and go home."

As "essential business" he listed the pending relief bills, the agricultural relief measure, the Philippine independence bill, and the annual appropriations bills. Four of the appropriation bills the senate has not yet touched, the fifth, that for the District of Columbia—was under consideration when the Democartic leader made his appeal.

Wants Relief Action.

The question of further relief, in addition to the 300 million dollar bill for direct loans to the states for unemployment relief which the senate passed yesterday, should receive early consideration by the senate, said Senator Robinson. He suggested that the Garner "pork barrel" bill for federal construction be called up and amended by substituting for it the Wagner bill, which provides that one billion 500 millions shall be loaned by the Reconstruction Finance corporation to states, cities, and private corporations for public or semi-public, self-liquidating projects, and that 500 millions be spent on federal construction work.

House Cheers Proposal.

Senator Robinson's sentiments concerning early adjournment were echoed in the house of representatives by Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floor leader. But in his legislative predictions Mr. Rainey took in less territory.

"Congress will adjourn without doing anything but passing the dole bill for the states," Representative Rainey said, referring to the 300 million dollar relief measure.

Despite his prediction, plans were being laid by house members favoring the Garner bill to circumvent the opposition to its provisions for a billion dollars worth of public works. The strategy will be aimed at tacking on to the 300 million dollar bill, a second edition of the Garner bill, with the purpose of forcing opponents to accept all or nothing.

In the senate, too, the tacticians were at work today. Secretary of the Treasury Mills consulted with members of the banking and currency committee, which last week reported out the Wagner bill, and where the Garner bill, and the Barbour bill—the administration's version of further relief—are pending.

Business Loans Urged.

The committee heard George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works and head of the Philada group coöperating with the Reconstruction Finance corporation, argue that the corporation should make loans on equipment trust certificates or that an intermediate credit corporation should be formed to underwrite these certificates.

Wins Scholarship

JAMES ROBERTSON.

The winner of the annual scholarship contest of County Superintendent of Schools Edward J. Tobin was announced yesterday. He is James Robertson, 17 years old, 108 South 17th avenue, Maywood, a student at the Proviso Township High school. He led the nine contestants with a grade of 84 in the examinations which included French, English composition, algebra, solid geometry, and history. The scholarship entitles him to matriculation fees and his tuition at the University of Illinois for four years.

SPRAGUE AGAINST SALE OF CITY'S WATER SYSTEM

Would Agree Only as Last Resort.

Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, indicated yesterday that he is opposed to a sale of the city's water system unless there is no other way for the city to rehabilitate its finances. Mayor Cermak told the council finance committee Friday that a New York concern may offer to buy the city plant.

The commissioner said a prominent Chicago banker told him some time ago that an eastern public utility man was looking into the possibility of buying the system.

Price "Around" 450 Millions.

"The water system is in sound financial condition," said Col. Sprague, "and it would be with regret that I would see the city divest itself of it. If the sale is the only way out of financial difficulties then I suppose I'll have to see it go."

Mayor Cermak disclosed that he has been approached several times by representatives of the New York company. The price suggested is around $450,000,000. The company, he said, is now engaged in studying annual reports of the system to determine its condition, after which he expects another visit from the firm's representatives, possibly with a concrete plan.

Would Mean Meters for All.

"Since the eastern company's men were brought to me by an outstanding Chicago financier," said the mayor, "I'm satisfied that it is not a dream. It shows that Chicago is not broke when it has assets such as the water system. The proposal will be submitted to the council at the proper time."

The opinion was expressed in the city hall that if the system is sold the new owner would compel all water services to be metered. Only 166,000 services are metered now, leaving 300,000 still to be put on the measured supply. The 1932 budget contains an appropriation for the installation of 40,000 meters this year.

CERMAK WANTS JOBLESS TO GET RELIEF BILL CASH

Believe Later Loan May Be Asked for Teachers.

Although stating that money should be advanced by the federal government to permit past due salaries of school teachers and city employés to be paid, Mayor Cermak yesterday indicated that Illinois' share of a 300 million dollar loan to the states as approved by the United States senate on Friday should be used solely for unemployment relief.

The mayor's attitude was revealed in a letter, copies of which were sent to all Illinois congressmen. The letter speaks only of poor relief in urging amendments to the Democratic relief bill passed by the senate which authorizes the Reconstruction Finance corporation to loan 300 millions to the states on the basis of population.

Want Money for Jobless.

Questions concerning the letter were referred by the mayor to Corporation Counsel Sexton. Although Mr. Sexton declined to be quoted, it was learned from other sources that the city administration believes that Illinois' share under the terms of the bill should be used for direct relief of the distressed and unemployed and a further loan be obtained for public employés' salaries.

"On the basis of population, under the bill as it now stands," the letter read in part, "Illinois would be entitled to borrow $18,600,000, and as the allocation now being made by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission amounts to $3,250,000 a month, this would carry on our relief program to the first part of January, 1933.

"Assuming that there are approximately 8,000,000 unemployed in the United States and 800,000 in Illinois, if the bill could be amended so that allocation of funds could be made by the Reconstruction Finance corporation on the basis of needs, Illinois could borrow approximately $30,000,000, which would carry our relief program to the first of May, 1933.

Urges Amendment of Bill.

"As the purpose of the bill is to provide relief where needed, it is hoped that, in order to get the maximum benefit out of the $300,000,000 authorized, when the bill goes to the house you use every effort to get it amended so that the distribution will be made on the basis of needs instead of on the basis of population."

Public officials of other local governments in Cook county disclosed their intentions of trying to get a portion of Illinois' share of the loan under the terms of an amendment offered by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis which would permit governors to pass on loan funds to municipalities.

Minnesotans Ask Removal of State Insurance Head

St. Paul, Minn., June 11.—(AP)—Removal of G. W. Brown as state insurance commissioner and fire marshal was requested of Gov. F. B. Olson today by Z. H. Austin and E. F. Brown, Minneapolis insurance men.

SEEK TO BAR BIG BANKERS FROM HOME LOAN FUND

500 Million Bill Is Delayed in House.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—House leaders moved today to strike big banking and insurance companies from the benefits of the 500 million dollar home loan bank bill.

When an unexpected majority was rolled up against an amendment removing trust companies, commercial banks, and insurance companies from the privilege of making loans from the home loan banks the Democratic leaders quickly made a point of no quorum, and while the count was being taken carried a motion for adjournment.

House Quits in Disorder.

As a result, the legislative jam was intensified by the house's failure to pass on schedule one of the remaining big relief measures and the chamber quit in disorder. When the house reconvenes Monday leaders on both sides will see to it that all members are in their seats to assure adoption of the amendment.

The apparent determination to jam through the amendment limiting the benefits of the legislation to building and loan associations, savings banks, homestead associations and coöperative banks results directly from the hue and cry that the relief program adopted thus far has benefited none but the big banks, big corporations, and big insurance companies.

The amendment was sponsored by Representative William F. Stevenson [Dem., S. C.] It had the support of both Republican and Democratic leaders, as well as the insurgents led by Representative F. H. La Guardia [radical Rep., N. Y.].

Lamont Favors House Bill.

At a hearing before the senate banking and currency committee today Secretary of Commerce Lamont said that he much preferred the home loan bill under consideration by the house to a substitute senate measure proposed by Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.].

The Couzens substitute, instead of setting up a number of discount banks, would furnish loans via the Reconstruction Finance corporation, which would be empowered to employ 400 million dollars to be loaned on mortgages not to exceed $10,000 each.

Secretary Lamont objected to the substitute on the ground that the finance corporation is an emergency organization, set up for a limited period. To perform its function successfully, he said, a home loan discount system should contemplate a life of at least 15 years.

GARNER RELIEF BILL "PINK, IF NOT RED," JAMES A. REED SAYS

Kansas City, Mo., June 11.—(AP)—James A. Reed, former United States senator, today described the principle of the unemployment relief bill of Speaker John Garner as "pink, if not red."

"I do not care what Democrat or what Republican advocates taxes for unemployment for the setting up of nonproductive purposes," Reed said, "he is talking bolshevism."

Both Garner and Reed are candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination. Reed voiced his criticism, without directly mentioning the speaker's bill, in an impromptu address before a women's club meeting.

THEATER TAXES GO IN EFFECT ON JUNE 21ST

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—Americans who go amusement hunting after June 20 at the theaters and other resorts where admission is charged will begin paying tax of 10 per cent on all amounts above 41 cents instead of $3 as under the present law.

The bureau of internal revenue today made public the regulations for administering the new tax by which Uncle Sam hopes to raise $42,000,000 next year. The tax must be paid from those who pay the admission, the bureau ruled.

Another change is the provision for taxing free or reduced rate admissions except to bona fide employés, municipal officers on official business and children under 12 years of age. All others admitted free or at reduced rates must pay the regular tax.

The new law provides that the exemptions afforded certain organizations such as religious, educational, or charitable institutions, shall not be allowed on wrestling matches, prize fights, or boxing, sparring, or other pugilistic matches or exhibitions. No exemption is allowed for college athletics.

U. S. SEA FLYER, LOST EIGHT DAYS, RESCUED BY SHIP

Picked Up in Mid-Atlantic, Exhausted but Unhurt.

lieved to be Hausner's, was reported over Sydney, N. S., late that afternoon.

Before his departure from New York, Hausner said he hoped to cross the Atlantic in 19 hours and to reach Warsaw in 44 hours. He had taken off previously a week before, but was forced back by fog six hours later.

Carried Mail for Europe.

When he began his hop to the Polish capital, the flyer was accompanied over the length of Long Island by another plane carrying Mrs. Hausner and a priest. He had hoped to fly over London and Paris and he carried 50 letters, some of which he expected to drop at the airports of the two cities.

Practically the last vestige of hope that Hausner might land safely in Europe was abandoned late Sunday afternoon. Not one word had been heard of him since his takeoff.

Although there had been no sign of his plane, Mrs. Hausner refused to give up.

"He's too good a flyer," she said. "I'll hear from him soon."

Hausner a "Mystery."

The monoplane carried 525 gallons of gasoline, barely enough to keep him aloft 52 hours. He carried four chicken and two ham sandwiches, several bars of chocolate, two oranges, two apples, a quart of fresh water, and a quart of black coffee.

Hausner was somewhat of a "mystery man" about New York's airports before his flight. What little information concerning him was forthcoming came from his wife, Martha, who was invariably at his side and assisted him in his preparations.

Hausner was born in Sanck, Poland, and came to this country as a boy. He was once a seaman in the naval reserve and is a naturalized American citizen. He has been flying for about ten years. He purchased his plane for $15,000 from a syndicate of Chicago men for what he styled a "good will" flight to Poland.

The records reveal that Hausner holds only a private pilot's license, the lowest rating of the department of commerce's aeronautical bureau. Experienced flyers at New York were frankly skeptical of his ability to achieve the dangerous crossing.

The plane carried a J-5 engine of the same type and design used by Col. Lindbergh on his flight to Paris. The plane itself, christened St. Rosa Maria, was built in 1928.

HAUSNER RESCUE ONE OF MANY IN FLYING HISTORY

New York, June 11.—[U. P.]—The history of ocean flying, while replete with fatalities, is punctuated with many thrilling rescues at sea.

The first on record was the rescue of Walter Wellman and his crew of the nonrigid dirigible America, forced down 1,000 miles east of Cape Hatteras on an attempted flight to Ireland in October, 1910.

The first rescue of an airplane pilot was made by the Danish tramp steamer Mary, which picked up Harry C. Hawker and MacKenzie Grieve, British aviators, attempting a flight from St. John's, N. F., to Ireland, in May, 1919. They landed near the ship and were afloat on their crippled plane only a short time.

Other notable rescues:

September, 1925—Commander John Rodgers and crew of U. S. navy seaplane PN9-1, forced down on flight from San Francisco to Hawaii, picked up by submarine off Kauai island after nine days afloat.

October, 1927—Ruth Elder and Capt. George W. Haldeman, attempting flight from Roosevelt field, L. I., to Paris, forced down and picked up almost immediately by Dutch tanker Barendrecht, 325 miles northeast of Azores.

September, 1931—Willy Rody and Christian Johansen, Germans, and Fernando Costiga-Viega, Portuguese, forced down 50 miles off Newfoundland and rescued by steamer Belmoira after floating 148 hours on wreckage of their monoplane.

May, 1932—Lou Reichers, attempting a flight from Newfoundland to Paris, alighted at sea beside steamer President Roosevelt when fuel supply ran out and was taken aboard.

NEW YORK TO ROME PLANE WILL PICK UP WOMAN PILOT IN AIR

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—An unusual nonstop flight from New York to Rome in which the co-pilot, a woman, will board the craft from the fueling plane shortly after the craft takes off and will leap to earth with a parachute at Florence, Italy, before the craft lands, is planned by a group of New Yorkers to start within the next few weeks.

Three persons will be aboard the plane when the craft heads out to sea with Rome as its goal. They will be the pilot, William Ulbrich; the co-pilot [not definitely selected, but probably Miss Edna Newcomber], and a physician, Dr. Leon M. Pisculli, who is interested in medical research in aviation and is the backer of the flight.

"This is not a stunt flight, but one designed to study the reactions of flyers on transoceanic trips and to test human endurance under the strain of over-water flying," Dr. Pisculli said.

The plane, the same Bellanca in which Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon Jr. flew across the Pacific from Tokio to Wenatchee, Wash., will be used for the 4,200 mile flight.

Dr. Pisculli said he had had forty applications from women pilots who want to make the flight.

The fact that the co-pilot gets aboard after the take-off is not in the nature of a stunt, but to lessen the danger of accident at the start with the heavy load of fuel.

The nonstop flight to Rome, although attempted several times, never has been made.

31ST INFANTRY TO SAIL FROM SHANGHAI JULY 1

SHANGHAI, June 11.—(AP)—The 31st American infantry, which arrived in Shanghai on Feb. 20 to assist in the protection of the international settlement, will sail for Manila July 1.

T. V. Soong, minister of finance in the national government, announced tonight that he had decided to retire to private life. Government leaders are trying to persuade him to remain in the cabinet, pointing out that the country's finances already are in bad shape and that his retirement might make matters even worse.

Three Hurt in Peiping Riot.

PEIPING, China, June 11.—(AP)—Three policemen were injured today in a clash with 400 students from the Peiping Normal school. The students started a march on Nanking to demand dismissal of the school chancellor. Several were arrested.

MAN WHO SOUGHT DUCE'S LIFE WILL BE TRIED JUNE 16

ROME, June 11.—(AP)—Angelo Sbardellotto will go on trial June 16 under an indictment which charges him with "repeatedly attempting to assassinate Premier Mussolini."

Arrested June 5 near the premier's office, two bombs and a revolver were found on Sbardellotto and police announced he confessed he had planned to kill Mussolini.

Documents in the case confirmed reports that the prisoner had revealed the names of co-conspirators in Paris, Brussels and London.

TRUCKS GUARDED AS 9 CENT MILK PLANT IS OPENED

Deliveries Are Made to Grocery Stores.

Cut rate milk was offered Chicago consumers for the first time in two decades yesterday, when truckloads of bottle milk were escorted under guard from the plant of the Meadowmoor Dairy company, 1334 South Peoria street, to groceries to be sold to consumers at 9 cents a quart, 2 cents under the prevailing price.

No violence nor threats were reported by the employes of the Fullerton Cartage company, which has contracted to deliver the Meadowmoor company's products for one year. Officials of the dairy concern also stated they had encountered no resistance, although precautions were taken by stationing armed guards and police at the plant. Each truck leaving the plant was preceded and followed by an auto containing three men.

A meeting was called yesterday afternoon at the Meadowmoor plant, which formerly was operated by an association of dairy farmers, and steps taken to organize independent drivers who would buy the milk and deliver it on routes they would build up and maintain. The Milk Wagon Drivers' union, whose members handle all deliveries for the 140 milk dealers in Chicago and suburbs, issued a statement Friday night declaring it preferred to continue supporting its 600 unemployed members rather than permit them to work for the Meadowmoor concern.

The 9 cent milk tested 3.6 per cent butterfat yesterday and the company was authorized by the city health department to operate within the city limits. Each bottle carried an additional charge of 5 cents, which is held by storekeepers as a deposit to be repaid when the empty bottle is returned.

The milk offered for sale yesterday came by tank car from Sun Prairie, Wis., on Friday morning, it was explained. According to F. R. O'Hara, secretary of the Meadowmoor concern, retail routes are to be opened next week. He said sales on the opening day were "light."

The 9 cent milk in Chicago will prove costly not only to the farmers but to labor, it was charged in a statement issued yesterday by a special committee of the Chicago Church federation, which has been studying the milk situation in Chicago. The committee headed by Dr. A. E. Holt of the University of Chicago, and including Mrs. W. E. Fribley, president of the Chicago Housewives' league, issued a protest against what it termed "sweat shop milk."

"The proposed offer of cheap milk is contrary to policies of public health," said the committee. "Farmers in poverty cannot make expenditures on the farm plant sufficient to guarantee the production of pure milk. A certain measure of prosperity must be the condition of a continuous pure milk supply. The conditions surrounding this cheap price offer are contrary to public policy and constitute an extension of a policy which has been a major contributing factor to the industrial depression which afflicts us."

FREEDOM AT HOME AND ABROAD, NEW GERMANY'S GOAL

Von Papen Allays Fears of Riech's Republicans.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 11.—Addressing the German agricultural council and later the national council of the German states, Chancellor Franz von Papen today outlined the program of his "monocled government," assuring them first of all that it "will be based entirely on the constitution of the reich."

Premiers of the southern German states—Bavaria, Baden, and Wuerttemberg—and the premier of Prussia demanded more definite details and insisted upon a private conference with Von Papen to "insure the protection of the constitutional rights of the German states." The aristocratic chancellor partially succeeded in allaying their fears. The conference will continue tomorrow.

Before the agriculturists Von Papen pleaded for Germans "to use all their moral strength to reach a goal which, for Germany, means regaining freedom at home and abroad."

Calls for Unified Expression.

"In view of the present situation," he continued, "this government has resolved to call for a new unified expression of the national will and as a necessary prerequisite to such an end it has sought and obtained the consent of the president of the reich to the dissolution of the reichstag in the belief that a new parliament will more readily produce a clear-cut majority for a policy of spiritual and ethical rehabilitation and an economic orientation that shall rest on Christian, national and social foundations."

Von Papen denied his cabinet was unsocial or reactionary.

"We believe that the state welfare insurance should be adapted to the economic possibilities of our impoverished country," he said. "The God-willed organization of affairs must be restored and interdependence reëstablished between employer and worker.

"The dire need of millions in Germany makes it necessary to extend social help, but more must be done. Organic reorganization of business must eliminate the faulty points of the capitalistic system and help to provide food and jobs for our countrymen."

The Republicans tonight are sneering at what they term the "reactionary and nebulous" statements of Von Papen, while the Nationalists are cheering his promise of bread and jobs through a reorganization of Germany's economic system.

Baron Friedrich Edler von Braun, minister of food and agriculture, emphasized the necessity for German farmers to increase production and to reduce purchases of food from foreign countries.

What Depression Did.

"This will make it possible to use the foreign currency that Germany obtains through exports for the purchase of raw material needed for her factories," he explained.

"The power and consumption of the masses, greatly reduced through unemployment, must be restored for their own sake as well as for that of the farmers. The depression reduced the consumption of wheat 10 per cent, butter, 5 per cent; sugar, between 13 and 18 per cent; eggs, 40 per cent, and brandy, 75 per cent. The result is that the farmers are in debt.

"Twelve million acres of arable land are mortgaged 100 per cent and 4,000,000 acres are in debt for 150 per cent of their value. Only one-third of the farms are paying interest out of their earnings. All others are paying with the substance of land and property."

Baron von Braun promised that the new government will find a remedy. He suggested the alteration of Germany's trade agreements and a restriction on imports of foodstuffs.

Warning by War Vets.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DARMSTADT, Germany, June 11.—Karl Hoeltermann, leader of the Reichsbanner men, republican organization of war veterans, today warned the government that "the workers of Germany will not tolerate a Fascist government.

"Civic rights are the only thing left to German workers," he said. "We fought to defend these rights against communists and revolutionists. We will fight again to defend them against the Hitlerites."

CHILDREN GET READY FOR SUMMER CAMP

Loretta Kern, 1½ years old, being examined by Dr. A. A. Freedman preparatory to a vacation at Camp Algonquin. The doctor is being assisted by Nurse Mary Mandelson. The other children in the picture, from the United Charities station at 734 West 47th street, also will go to Camp Algonquin.

CAMP ALGONQUIN READY TO REVIVE POOR CHILDREN

Outings for Mothers and Youngsters.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Camp Algonquin will open its summer playground to the mothers and children of impoverished homes of Chicago on June 21. On the eve of its 22d year of service, it is hoped that the camp can help to rehabilitate 2,000 who have felt the ravages of unemployment.

The camp is located 45 miles northwest of Chicago on the Fox river near Algonquin. It is administered by the United Charities of Chicago and is maintained in part by readers of THE TRIBUNE. The dormitories and cottages are spread over 50 acres of timber that slope down to the river. From June until September the city's underprivileged find this a delightful spot to rest and play.

Yesterday youngsters from the Stockyards district climbed on scales and physicians for the United Charities made the final examination that would pass them through the magic gates of Camp Algonquin.

Youngsters Are Tested.

The children know that they will be under the direction of dietitians and recreational leaders and doctors at the camp, that they will have to take naps and sun baths and be in bed right on time every evening at dusk. But such restrictions could not blur their visions of that cool winding river with its huge elms and oaks.

Many of the children have never visited the camp but they have heard stories from their friends who have, of real motor boats, and fishing, and baseball, and hikes down country lanes with leaders who know something about woodcraft.

New Tennis Courts.

There are swings and a tennis court, new this year. There is a play yard enclosed with a white picket fence for the toddlers. There is a library where the older children may spend their leisure hours, and a theater where dramtic talent may come to the fore. Row boats have been given to the camp by A. E. Jessurun.

The neediest of the mothers and children under the care of the United Charities will be sent to the camp, said Edwin C. Jones, financial secretary, yesterday.

"Conditions have been most distressing for thousands of families we have been helping the past year," he said. "Many mothers are broken in health and spirit. A summer outing is more essential for them this year than ever before.

What $10 Will Do.

"Ten dollars will provide one mother with a vitally needed two weeks at Camp Algonquin. Think what this will mean to some needy woman who has been struggling against the tremendous odds of the past year! Could you ask ten dollars to bring more genuine benefit and pleasure to any one?"

Last year outings were provided for 1,884 mothers and children at the camp. This year the camp hopes to increase that number to at least 2,000. The first groups will leave on June 21, and 23, and every two weeks thereafter until Sept. 15. They will be welcomed by Mrs. Astrid Save who has been camp superintendent for years.

All old friends of the Camp Algonquin fund are urged to send their annual contributions as soon as possible.

Planes Search Lake for Missing Purdue Student

Great Lakes Naval station planes and cutters were searching yesterday for the body of Daniel Darwin Driscoll, 21 years old, who is believed to have drowned while on a canoe ride Friday night. Driscoll, a sophomore at Purdue university, lived with his father, Hugh Driscoll, a civilian employé of the naval station. He was last seen Friday night paddling the canoe on the lake. The battered craft was found yesterday along the breakwater.

Death of Loan Official an Accident, Jury Holds

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday afternoon at the inquest into the death of Henry F. Armknecht, 32 years old, secretary of the 15th Ward Building and Loan association, who was found dead earlier in the day in the garage at the rear of his home at 2004 Webster avenue. He had been killed by the fumes from the motor. His widow, Anna, testified that Armknecht was in good health and had no financial worries.

ECONOMY MOVE CLOSES JOLIET PRISON SHOPS

All industries in the Joliet and Stateville penitentiaries were halted yesterday as an economy measure and 1,200 prisoners were forced into idleness. Shops were closed and 20 foremen were dismissed to save $38,000 a year. More than 43 guards in the shops have been discharged during the past year and their salaries bring the total savings to $100,000 yearly, Warden Henry C. Hill said.

Prisoners who have been working in the shops will be given daily calisthentics to replace their usual tasks. Between 800 and 900 prisoners are still employed in yard details and on the honor farm. Last year the state spent $60,000 to prepare a prison factory for the manufacture of automobile license plates. None has been manufactured as yet and state officials have not decided whether the factory will be used, the warden said.

COUNTY BATTLES HIGH DAMAGES IN BELLWOOD SUITS

La Buy Asks Court to Set Aside Judgments.

County Commissioner Walter J. La Buy yesterday took action to obtain reversals of seven allegedly fraudulent judgments totaling $160,000 awarded to Bellwood residents for damages resulting from an opening of a street in the suburb.

A recent investigation by the county highway committee disclosed that the property owners were given damages at the rate of $178 a front foot on unimproved land valued for tax purposes at only $20 a front foot. It also revealed that the highway department lawyers, Edmund Mulcahy and John Bolton, had agreed to the judgments without a trial and had signed away the county's right of appeal.

Finds Time to Act Is Short.

Commissioners demanded that the state's attorney investigate the cases, ordered the defense of all similar suits into the state's attorney's hands and asked the Chicago Bar association to submit the names of five attorneys from whom the board will choose one to seek to expunge the judgments from the court records.

Commissioner La Buy learned, however, that under the court rules Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch, who entered the judgment awards, will retain jurisdiction over the cases only until June 20. La Buy was told that the bar association could not act until next Thursday, which would leave the special legal representative of the county only three days in which to begin his case.

La Buy Goes to Judge.

Therefore La Buy, through County Attorney Hayden Bell, served notice upon the property owners' lawyer, Charles Trainor, and went before Judge Lynch yesterday.

"Because the time is so short in which the court may act," the commissioner explained, "I am asking that the judgment in these cases be set aside to permit them to be tried before a jury." Attorney Trainor opposed La Buy's plea.

Judge Lynch ordered that the hearing be continued until Monday when both Mulcahy and Bolton will appear before him.

UNLICENSED CARS FOUND IN MANY ILLINOIS TOWN

Last Year's Tags on Downstate Autos.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Mattoon, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Chicago is not the only section of the state with automobile owners who have not paid their 1932 license fees. On the main street of this southern Illinois town of 16,000, crowded this afternoon with farmers doing their week-end shopping, six cars without any license plates were counted in one block.

In Shelbyville, a village 25 miles west of here, a light truck parked in front of E. Miller company groceries carried a 1928 license number 168-978 across from the courthouse where three unwashed passenger cars without plates and a few block away was an expensive sedan without state numbers.

Mostly Farm Autos.

The street scenes of the two cities were typical of the situation found in a drive through this part of Illinois today. Unlicensed automobiles were seen in Litchfield, Pana, Hillsboro, Chatam, and Springfield. Several 1931 plates were also noted.

A filling station attendant in Pana was asked whether state or local police arrested drivers of unlicensed cars.

"They'd probably arrest strangers," he replied. "But these are just home folks you see without plates. Most of them are farmers from nearby and nobody wants to get them sore at the town. They don't drive anywhere but around here and every one knows most of them don't have any money."

Trucks Without Licenses.

On the main street of the town, the Pana Cleaning company had a truck, M77-527, 1931. Two live stock trucks, three obsolete mode passenger cars, a 1932 cheap sedan, and four other machines without any plates were nearby. A general hauling truck without state numbers was seen at a filling station on the edge of the town.

At Hillsboro, a fruit and vegetable company's truck was standing without identification plates in a gas station. On the main street where were a farmer's truck and two ancient passenger cars without a license.

Many of these unlicensed machines, used mainly in travel between farm and market, were in a dilapidated condition, but the cars appeared as valuable as hundreds of other cars with 1932 plates. Some of the farmers with this year's numbers, paying their portion of the cost of the highways and also the portion of the tax dodgers, apparently were giving the state an annual fee amounting to 100 per cent of the market value o fthe machine, so aged and worn were many of the vehicles.

Not all of the unlicensed downstate automobiles, however, are antiquated models. Coming into Mattoon a $3,500 1932 sedan was standing with its license carriers vacant.

12 FACE MURDER CHARGE AS NEGRO IS LYNCHED

Ironton, O., June 11.—(AP)—Twelve men were in South Point, O., jail tonight, held without bond, and facing possible charges of murder in connection with the finding of the body of Luke Murray, 35, Atlanta, Ga., Negro, in the Ohio river today.

Murray was taken from the South Point jail Tuesday night by about 25 men after he had been incarcerated for threatening two white men with a knife.

Prosecutor Lee C. Andrews said he may file murder charges tonight against all 12 men. All deny guilt.

Those held are Theodore Johnson, Taylor Napier, Williard Massie, former constable, and his two sons, Garland and Milford; Ray Robinson, Ben and James Hall, Ralph and Lewis McKee, Clyde Elkins and William Johnson.

NEW SO. WALES VOTERS DEFEAT LANG'S RADICALS

Moderate Forces Win Majority of Seats.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, Australia, June 12 [Sunday].—Trades hall, seat of the movement to bring a social revolution in the parliamentary methods of the state of New South Wales, was draped in gloom today. The party, headed by former Premier John T. Lang and standing for repudiation of the state's debts and the confiscation of banks and industry, was defeated in yesterday's election after the greatest swing of the political pendulum in the history of Australia.

The Lang labor group lost 30 seats in the new parliament and retained 25 against the coalition of the Nationalist and country party forces, which captured 65 seats. Lang saved his own seat, but at least five of his former ministers were defeated.

Labor Wins in Queensland.

The result of the state elections in Queensland, however, showed a victory for the Labor party, which thus far has a majority of four or five seats, according to latest returns. This now presents the only difficulty to the United Australia party carrying out Federal Premier Joseph A. Lyons' plan for payment of debts, and reduction of expenditures, but the Labor party there is not Red and no great upsets are expected.

What J. J. Graves, Lang labor leader in New South Wales, described as the "beating of the wings of the vampire of destiny" were heard during the last few days in Sydney as the campaign reached heights of fear and vituperation never reached before in this part of the world. The vampire has passed on temporarily, for the "stop-gap" government of Bertram S. Stevens, who was named temporary premier when Lang was ousted by Gov. Sir Philip Game, the king's representative, now is firmly in the saddle for three years.

Business Men Joyful.

There was joy among business men, property owners, bankers, and empire "loyalists" today. The election was a great mobilization of the conservative and moderate forces of the city and country, which showed that New South Wales still is sound and British in traditions and reactions.

The repudiation of Langism was almost as strong in metropolitan districts as in the country, where plans were made, if he were elected, to sever relations with the city and form new states to be called Riverina and New England near the Victorian border.

The coalition polled 546,013 votes in the state against the Lang party's 463,306. The communist party's strength was only 9,000, while the federal labor party, which may hold the balance of power in the new legislature, polled 50,000.

Lang Holds Own Seat.

Lang held his own seat from Auburn, a Sydney suburb, by a narrow margin. He will head the opposition for the next three years, unless he transfers his activities to the federal parliament.

Michael F. Bruxner, leader of the Country party, will be deputy premier in the new government. He will also hold the post of minister of transport, which it is intended to take out of politics as far as possible.

"Today is a day of thanksgiving and the state now can march on to a goal of restoration of commerce and conservation of finance," Premier Stevens declared today.

The state's deficit is $35,000,000 and the greater part of its income is pledged to make debt payments. How to keep this up and to provide continuation of the social services, which was promised in the campaign, is a great problem and one which is expected to provide disappointment.

Will Keep Jobless Dole.

The coalition is socialistic to the extent of the dole, pensions, endowments, and taxes to make up deficits for state enterprises, such as the railroads, but it will take the road backward as far as possible and an effort probably will be made to reduce wages in the state, which now has the highest basic rate in Australia.

Lang, in an address to his workers today, compared the results of the election to the fall of the MacDonald government in England and the defeat of the Labor government in Victoria. He told the people that wages will go down and the hours of toil will be lengthened, and that there will be no redress for three years. He declared, however, that he will go on fighting.

There is some apprehension here as to whether labor will take the defeat calmly. There has been much bitterness and talk of civil war recently, and at every appearance of Lang thousands of ex-soldiers and ex-sailors marched in the ranks of his "Red army."

But every indication today was that labor will peacefully accept the result in the British sense of sportsmanship. The crowds melted away from Trades hall as soon as the results were definite. Extremists with Red sympathies are out of the picture now and the Labor party may reform on more conservative lines. Even these lines, however, point toward nationalization of the major industries, continuation of high wages, the dole and social service.

The Stevens government has promised the extension of a moratorium for three years. Reform of the upper house is planned, along with formation of new local governments. Private industry will be fostered as the real method of relieving unemployment.

Several Lang ministers now are faced with prosecution for graft.

Newfoundland Goes to Polls.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 11.—(AP)—The electorate of Newfoundland today selected members of the legislature. The contest was between the forces of Prime Minister Sir Richard Squires' liberal party and the united Newfoundland party, led by F. C. Alderdice.

Complete results from the voting were not expected for several days, but it was expected that early returns from St. John's would indicate the ultimate decision.

Both parties had candidates for 26 of the 27 seats being contested. Dr. H. M. Mosdell of Fortune, an independent, was unopposed. He formerly was a member of the Squires' cabinet, resigning after a dispute with Sir Richard over the budget.

Becomes Bride

MRS. H. G. BRIDEGROOM.

Miss Mary Caroline Dunbar and Dr. Hugh Ginther Bridegroom were married late yesterday afternoon in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David O. Dunbar of 715 Carlton avenue, Wheaton. The Rev. Irvine Goddard of La Grange and the Rev. Frank H. Millette of Wheaton officiated. There were no attendants, and the ceremony was witnessed only by the close relatives of the bride and bridegroom. After June 20 Dr. and Mrs. Bridegroom will be at home at 2455 Prairie avenue, Evanston.

ELINOR FARWELL AND E. O. KETTING ARE MARRIED

Miss Elinor Farwell and E. Ogden Ketting were married in the presence of relatives and a few friends at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lincoln Farwell of 1301 Ritchie court. Samuel Insull Jr. was best man. Miss Farwell was unattended. Her cousin, the Rev. Horace Farwell Ferry of Lake Bluff, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore the high waisted white satin gown which was made 76 years ago for the wedding of her grandmother, the late Mrs. Ralph N. Isham [Mrs. Katherine Snow]. The same dress was worn by the bride's mother, the former Katherine Isham at her wedding in 1894.

Mr. and Mrs. Ketting will sail from New York next Wednesday for a trip abroad.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION—AFTER FOUR YEARS.

Four years ago when the delegates to the Republican national convention assembled there was not a cloud in the sky. The new era was an accepted fact. It wasn't goin' to rain no mo'. The bull market wasn't hysteria. It was a normal reflection of American values. The two car family was the lowest common denominator. The farmer seemed to have lost his way to the fountain of eternal wealth, but in the bag of legislative tricks some magic would be found to fix him. The Coolidge days had been golden days for the Republic.

All the gold in the world was here. The land poured out riches. The swamps were in fast selling subdivisions and any security was a good security. A billion dollar government had grown into a four billion dollar government. Any public project was a good public project and carefree taxpayers saw their Uncle increasing his family by adoption. Every half orphan enterprise in the land could go to Washington and be nourished into a big boy over night. The delegates to the best of all conventions meeting in the best of all times selected Mr. Hoover as the best of all candidates, knowing that the Democrats would elect whomever the Republicans nominated.

This week the Republican delegates may say: "We meet again." The only things they find as they were four years ago are the four billion dollar government and the eighteenth amendment. The government to whose growth no one had given any attention is now sprawled out over the land as a dead weight. The gossamer elephant so carelessly viewed has turned to lead. Communism which four years ago was regarded with such sprightly contempt has entered every open door on Capitol hill and there will be delegates in the convention who as members of congress are fresh from voting for expropriation of capital and government coercion of private enterprise, extinction of private profit and the dictatorship of the unfit.

The prowling and penetrating bureaucracy of the United States is revealed against the flat pocketbooks of American taxpayers as the final barrier between them and recovery. The Republican party, to which government was again confided four years ago, has conducted sham warfare against the radicals nominally in its ranks, but it has done nothing yet to devitalize the forms of bureaucracy which are ready at hand for the radicals to expand and use. Neither consideration of costs which are exhausting nor regard for principles has sufficiently moved the Republicans as yet to attack the one or assert the other.

Subversive procedure enters the American system so easily because departmental extension into every activity of life has prepared a machine for it. The government, truly as an octopus, has a tentacle at every throat. The country will wait to learn whether the Republican party, again in convention and this time with the world turned upside down, will even by silence assent to the doctrine of overpowering central government, irresponsible and incompetent states, and bureau ridden, punitively taxed individuals. If so its prophet is Stalin. Its tradition is certainly not of Lincoln.

Four years ago the party went wooing under the windows of its hereditary enemy, the Democratic party of the south, to the scandal of the country. This mountebank Montague beguiled several daughters of the house of Capulet, but more bewitched himself than them. The illicit excursion may be stirring his blood yet and the clergy in the affairs, including Bishop James Cannon Jr. and Dr. Clarence True Wilson, are on the scene to give another blessing.

Four years, however, have done something with an abruptness not wholly expected to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. Senator Fess, the great standpatter, chairman of the national committee, has seen election returns not only cut his own state, Ohio, out from under his feet but sweep the country, carrying the citadels of Republicanism against clerical dictation, bigoted zeal and political hypocrisy. The lesson is not wholly lost upon the party, but there is fear that the management will endeavor to go pussyfooting through the rye, true to the inclination of some of its statesmen never to say one honest word when two tricky ones can be found.

The Republican party had a predecessor which ducked when national issues were shot at it. The Whigs, who were afraid, were thereupon laid to rest alongside their predecessors, the Federalists, who did not give a damn. There is room in the vault for other parties.

JOBS AND EXCESSIVE TAXATION.

Millions of Americans today who have lost their incomes probably think the excessive taxing of incomes is nothing for them to add to their worries. A good many of them probably rather like the idea as tending to equality in misfortune if not, in fact, indirectly to their advantage.

They are badly mistaken. An excessive tax on incomes discourages and often prevents new ventures and the invigoration of going enterprise. The reason is simple. People with investments will, of course, try to make them pay, and in spite of taxes keep going if possible. But this means venturing, and when a question arises, Shall we try this or that, costing money and chancing its loss, with the expense certain and the profit, if there should turn out to be any, subject to heavy taxation? the answer is likely to be no. Thus employers hesitate to venture and therefore to employ. Thus excessive taxation paralyzes new employment. The eight million workers now said to be jobless in this country are hit by excessive taxes as directly as and even harder than employers. The cry of soak the rich is a fraud, and those who raise it are either ignorant of results or demagogues who are seeking power in setting one man against another, although both are in the same boat.

AMENDMENT VS. REPEAL.

Among Americans who now recognize that conditions produced by the prohibition régime are intolerable and must be corrected as soon as possible there is division upon the method of correction. There is demand for outright repeal of the 18th amendment, and there are those who wish the amendment amended.

The most authoritative indorsement of repeal is that of the American legal fraternity, as represented by the American Bar association and by some thirty of the major state bar associations, including those of such reputedly dry states as Virginia and Tennessee, which have officially called for outright repeal. The lawyers are for repeal because they, more than laymen, realize the importance of legal and constitutional principles and the consequences involved in their breach. When an advocate of repeal declares that the 18th amendment is not properly in the constitution, is a police ordinance which does not belong in an instrument like our fundamental law, a lawyer, at least one who has studied our constitutional law, knows what the objection means. But few laymen do.

It is well, therefore, that lawyers should take active part in the discussion to explain the need for repeal in terms which will have meaning to the lay public. An excellent example of this service is a summary by Mr. Rufus Choate, one of the most distinguished of American lawyers. In discussing a resolution of the Voluntary Committee of Lawyers, asking of the party leadership of both parties a clear declaration for or against repeal, Mr. Choate, after commenting briefly upon the loss of revenue involved in prohibition, says of the constitutional question:

"Are we to continue on the course of the last ten years towards an all controlling Washington bureaucracy, or are we to call a halt and reestablish our constitutional form of balanced government? This is no mere academic and theoretical subject for college debates. The difference between federal and state prohibition is not a matter of phrases. The two have nothing to do with each other, and their effects are vastly different. One may be the most ardent advocate of state prohibition and at the same time an equally ardent opponent of federal prohibition. State prohibition is an example of normal self-government. It is a law enacted in a comparatively small geographical unit, presumably supported by the majority of the citizens of that unit, enforced by police within the control of that unit, and changeable and repealable if and when desired by that unit.

"A totally different theory and practice underlie federal prohibition. The fact is usually lost sight of that, politically speaking, the real radicals are the advocates of the eighteenth amendment—the first and only national police regulation ever to be attempted by the federal government. The practical and everyday results of this innovation in our government are beginning to be felt by every citizen. Federal prohibition is founded on the theory that a powerful national center can and shall impose a law not only on those sections of the country which approve it but also on enormous sections which are definitely and conclusively opposed to it, and that federal police, largely supported by taxes from the objecting sections, shall be delegated to suppress this public resistance.

"This theory might conceivably be carried out, but only at a cost which its strongest advocates no longer dare to name. Enforcement would have to be waged as war is waged—the federal government against large sections of the populace. The federal police would have to be given the power to ride roughshod over peace time restrictions, to arrest on suspicion, break in without warrant, convict without jury. The Jones law, wire tapping, and unwarranted search and seizure were all moves in this direction. What happened? These had to be stopped, because it instantly became apparent that they would bring about open and violent rebellion. The Supreme court promptly decided that evidence obtained without legal warrant could not be used against any citizen, wire tapping was officially condemned, and the Jones law was practically abandoned.

"As it is now, federal enforcement has become a farce, and state regulation is fast becoming one. Even in those states which have constitutional prohibition there is now a marked tendency on the part of state authorities to leave enforcement to the federal authorities. Meanwhile, the professional criminal juggles police and public from hand to hand and waxes rich on the profits."

It is one of the chief ironies of the debate over the 18th amendment that dry organizations demand respect for the constitution. But if we understand the constitution we know that no one who respects the constitution can respect the 18th amendment. The broad principles which the constitution expressed are the foundation of our government, national and state. When they are interfered with, conditions result which affect practically the whole people. This does not present merely technical matters, of interest only to lawyers, but matters of government reaching every citizen. No better example of this could be offered than the results of putting prohibition into the constitution.

BUCOLIC SONGS BY MELI SUNG

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY of an Illinois countryside which, because of its beauty, would require the most careful placing of a house to avoid the open and constant view of a landscape too nearly sublime for casual wear? And if this countryside were not a small area, unexpectedly come upon in a region which gave no promise of it, but were almost a principality in the sweep of its horizons? Then, also, let it be not crags and cañons but rich, productive land under cultivation, able to support the people of a principality, offering the full wealth of the soil. Illinois has never set its cap before a mirror. It has plowed its black loam fields for corn and pastured its cattle. What had been the lush beauty of its prairies, waist or shoulder high with flowering grasses, disappeared, for most of the state, into quarter sections where no attempt was made to reproduce the good of New England farm architecture in the north or of southern in the south, into which regions New Englander and southerner had come.

RHAPSODY IN GREEN

ILLINOIS was merely something through which the traveler passed to reach Kentucky, Tennessee, and North Carolina, Colorado, New Mexico, or Arizona, the Adirondacks or the New England scene. But nowhere else in the country would a susceptible person so carefully place his house as in this particular Illinois countryside, where, if he yielded to a natural but untutored instinct, he would so flood himself with loveliness that it would either cloy or stupefy him. Strong words, but the region merits them. The highway runs for miles and miles along a ridge approaching the bluffs of the Mississippi. To the north the land drops away toward Wisconsin, rolling in smooth billows with green ridges and valleys to the blue heights which are the far away horizon. To the south there is another roll of these rich billows, dropping into the broad valley to rise again toward the horizon. Nothing cramped or confined in this beauty, but a scene which spreads everywhere as far as the eye can see.

EDEN FLOWERS AGAIN

POSSIBLY the qualification is that the view should be had in early June when the corn has just been plowed, when the oak foliage has just reached full, when the oats are a foot high, and when pastures are green after rain. In grain fields, grazing land, and groves it is the fresh, vernal green the luster of which is at once earthly and unearthly. July will burn it out. The newly turned black soil shows where man has worked without defacing. Memories of the hills of Tuscany and the fields of Normandy fade out. What is the valley of the Arno, what of the Cotswold or the Grampian hills? They take a corner of the eye. Here one sits on a cloud and the whole domain of Eden is restored to the renewed innocence of man.

[This scene is your own for a fill of gasoline. The practical footnote to ecstasy is: Route 20 out of Freeport to the Mississippi.]

MAN-MADE IMMORTALITY

JEREMY BENTHAM, the father of English utilitarianism, dying June 6, 1832, left his flesh to the service of surgery but his bones to the cause of his own immortality. His will requested that his skeleton be put together in such a fashion that it would represent him sitting "in an attitude wherein I am sitting when engaged in thought." This was done, with a modeled head and Jeremy's garments added. When his modern disciples gather at the University of London to commemorate him with a dinner on the anniversary of his death—the one hundredth being remembered last week—the jurist and philosopher who tried to cheat death sits in a corner as if with them. The jurist was not enough of one to accept a final decree, the philosopher was not sufficient to love the truth. The attitude wherein he thought he was engaged in thought was one in which he was engaged in seeking an assurance of permanence. A pyramid is a reinsurance policy. Man does not quite trust the intangible.

HAPPY, GOLDEN, AND INCREDIBLE DAYS—In June, 1836, the federal government having paid off the national debt, congress voted to deposit an estimated surplus of $37,000,000 with the states—theoretically on call.

THE TREASURY BOOKS today carry an item of $28,101,644 marked as unavailable funds. That was the amount euphemistically "deposited" with the states. Not a dime ever was recovered and no one ever thought a dime would be returned. At least there were no illusions then. The deposit was a gift.

MAINE made a general Christmas with its share in a per capita distribution of the money. Massachusetts gave it to the towns. Boston paid its current expenses. A few states put the fund out at interest and used the return for education. In 1883 Virginia, having meanwhile been out of the Union and in again, went to law to get the fourth installment—which was never paid. The Supreme court held that no legal obligation existed.

THE PAYMENTS were stopped because in 1837 a bubble busted. A new era folded up with a bang. The distribution of the surplus was joined to the other causes, contracting loans and disturbing credit, and there was a crash. The banks of New York suspended specie payment.

THE CONGRESSIONAL SANTA CLAUS had made his advent when the price of cotton was falling, when the grain farmer was in difficulty and, because agricultural purchasing power had disappeared, the merchants were in trouble. New York real estate depreciated $40,000,000 in six months. The government undertook to meet its current needs with a six per cent bond issue and sold less than half of the authorized amount.

WE SEEM to grow bigger only to remain the same.

WASHINGTON'S LAST ILLNESS.

NOT only was George Washington the subject of controversy while he was living but his final illness was a battleground long after his death. The conflict was almost bitter enough to qualify him for Judge Horner's roll of Restless Ashes. The contention was that he was the victim of malpractice and it was even charged that his physicians had bled him to death.

George Washington was nearly 68 years old when he died. He had lived a long time for men of that day, particularly those who had suffered the exposures of hard wars and the grind of important public office. He was a tall man with a large frame and a good development of muscles, but he was not especially rugged and he had suffered severe illnesses such as smallpox and malaria. His family history would indicate that his lungs were his weakest organ, at least the organ most susceptible to infection.

He rode over his plantation in cold rain and sleet two days before his death. When he returned, after hours in the saddle, there was a good deal of ice in his hair and around his neck, and his clothing was wet. Being late for dinner, he did not take the time to have a bath and change to dry clothing. He spent a part of the next day at home, suffering somewhat from a cold and sore throat, but he went about the farm in the afternoon. He was very hoarse when he reached home; still, neither he nor Mrs. Washington considered his condition serious.

That night he was awakened by his discomfort. He had a chill and fever, sore throat, and difficult breathing. His doctor first saw him about breakfast time. Since the onset of the attack in the night, and before any treatment was given, Washington had told those around his bedside that he was fatally sick. When the physician arrived he sent for other doctors to counsel with him. Their patient was dead by midnight.

That he had an acute laryngitis all were agreed. The final diagnosis was cynanche, a term used in that day to designate a form of severe sore throat. Since the term is not in use now, physicians are not agreed as to what kind of sore throat was meant. Some contend that he had diphtheria; some, quinsy, and some, a streptococcal infection involving the larynx. Of course, there was no bacterial examination and there is no record of any examination of his throat, though we can be certain that the distinguished patient was asked to poke out his tongue while the doctors took the best look inside they could. Most physicians are of the opinion that the infection was not diphtheritic, nor do many advocate the theory that the throat disease was quinsy.

The best guess is that he had an infection of the type usually called a bad cold; that it extended to his larynx, causing an acute laryngitis with considerable edema. Death was due partly to suffocation and partly to the more direct effects of the infection. A like case today would be treated by putting a tube in the larynx and giving antitoxin or not, dependent on the bacterial examination.

George Washington was bled three times; once by his servant in the night and twice by his physicians during the next day. Neither the amount of blood drawn nor the symptoms of his illness, as given, indicate that he was overbled. In addition to the bleeding, he was given the various treatments customary in that day for severe acute colds. The treatment he received probably did him neither good nor harm.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. W. E. B. writes: In order not to expose my three weeks old baby to whooping cough which my four year old boy has, I should like to be sure of the following points before I return home with my baby:

1. After the cough is gone, would germs live in dried phlegm, in case they may have got on something?

2. Should everything he has handled be washed with an antiseptic solution? Would it be wise to fumigate? If so, with what? All clothing and bedding will be washed or dry cleaned.

3. Will it be safe for me to go home when the paroxysmal cough is gone, or should I wait a certain number of weeks?

It has been seven weeks since he was exposed, five weeks since he started coughing, and four weeks of whooping cough. He has no fever nor any cold with it, so has had no secretion from his nose, and is full of pep. He has had three inoculations of serum.

REPLY.

1. I don't think so.

2. Fumigation with formaldehyde is done, but it is not of much service. A thorough scouring and airing is all that need be done.

3. A time quarantine is customary, since there is no other satisfactory method of termination. Count from the onset of the cough. A quarantine of six weeks from the onset of the cough is about the limit. Since your baby is young and you want to be very cautious, stay away a total of seven weeks from the onset of the cough. The paroxysms of coughing may continue until warm weather.

"SUPERIOR PERSONS."

M. J. M. writes: I would like to know definitely, once and for all, whether there is any ground for the superior attitude of persons who like to be cold. Are they really physically, mentally, and morally above the poor worms who like to be warm and comfortable? I am assuming, of course, that both classes like a well ventilated room. I might add that it has been my experience that the ones who crow the loudest about always being so hot are usually a more or less tubercular looking type. What light can you throw on the subject?

REPLY.

I do not specialize in superior persons. If you want to know anything about the plain people send in your questions.

ADDISON'S DISEASE.

S. G. writes: Is there a cure for Addison's disease? What can one do to try to correct it?

REPLY.

There is a treatment for it. It consists in a proper use of a preparation made from the adrenal gland. Some of the reports from its use are very encouraging. Since Addison's disease is usually due to tuberculosis of the adrenal and since the disease tends to destroy the gland, some cases, at least, cannot be cured. Bricks cannot be made without straw.

PROBABLY ARE INFECTION.

J. W. writes: For over a year I have had a swelling of a gland in my neck just below where my jaw bone turns to run to my ear. I had a cold and it left this gland swollen. What gland is it and why is it swollen?

REPLY.

It probably is one of the lymph glands of the neck, though it may possibly be a salivary gland. It probably is due to infection. Have you some bad teeth in your lower jaw? Are your gums infected? Probably infection in the lower part of your mouth is draining into this gland. If you can cure or remove the infecting areas the gland should subside.

LOITERERS.

Chicago, June 1. — [Friend of the People.]—What can be done to prevent the young men who gather morning, noon, and night, at the corner of 51st street and Morgan? My daughter cannot pass by without hearing a nasty word or some bright remark from one of these men. I myself am obliged to ride a block farther than my home in fear of being molested. This has been going on for some time. The police pass by, but do nothing. Can you help in some way? M. V.

Officers interviewed the owner of the drug store operating on the corner referred to. He stated that the neighborhood boys frequently gather at that corner to the annoyance of people passing there. He told these young men to find some other place to loiter about two weeks ago and he has not been annoyed by them since that time. Officers visited this location several times on each tour of duty and the boys found there on the first few visits were instructed to stay away from that corner, and since that time have not found any young men loitering there. This location will be given our attention to see that there is no further cause for complaint.

TAX SALES.

Chicago, June 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Does the state have lists of farm lands for sale? 2. If so, where does one write for this information? 3. Just what is meant by tax sale lands? F. E.

1. No.
2. See 1.
3. Real estate upon which the taxes have not been paid is sold for taxes, but under Illinois law the tax deed does not convey a clear title.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WISCONSIN TAXES.

Oshkosh, Wis., June 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—This is my first year of teaching in Wisconsin. 1. Must I pay an income tax in this state? 2. And must I also pay tax in Illinois, which is really my permanent residence, but only for two months of the year? 3. Do teachers pay a federal tax also? E. S.

1. Section 71.01 of the Wisconsin statutes assesses the income tax against income of persons residing in Wisconsin and against income of nonresidents "derived from property located or business transacted within the state." Section 71.02 [c] defines income as including "all wages, salaries or fees derived from service," but the word "business" as used in section 71.01 is not defined. It would seem reasonable for you to take the position that your teaching is not a "business."

2. We have not seen the text of the Illinois law. Under recent U. S. Supreme court decisions we doubt if double taxation would stand.

3. No, as to earnings paid by a state or municipality.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VOTING.

Chicago, May 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Where can I obtain a copy of the laws and rules applicable to a voter? A question also arose during the registration which I would like answered. A person 21 years of age registered under the age of 23, because this is the age which he uses constantly. 2. Is this man breaking any sort of law? T. J. S.

1. Write to the board of election commissioners for their pamphlet.

2. He would not be subject to prosecution for perjury if, as we understand to be the case, the difference in age is immaterial.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 12, 1916.

ST. LOUIS. — With the gathering here of the leaders for the national Democratic convention, which opens June 14 in the Coliseum, the first moves in the campaign of the Democrats against the Republican ticket headed by Hughes and Fairbanks became known. As a result of the nomination of Hughes and the refusal of Col. Roosevelt to lead a third ticket, Democratic leaders purpose to make a concerted effort to attract progressives to the support of President Wilson, and Hughes will be attacked with the charge that he was a candidate for the presidential nomination while still a member of the Supreme court, thereby dragging the judiciary into politics. The only thing which so far disturbs the southern and congenial calm of the convention city is the Roger Sullivan boom for Vice President. The delegates from Chicago are attempting to scuttle the ship of Thomas R. Marshall.

CHICAGO. — The body of John V. Steger, president of the Steger & Sons Piano Manufacturing company, was found in a huge reservoir in the town of Steger, Ill., which he founded twenty-five years ago. It was found by Thomas Northen, his son-in-law. Members of the family said it was Mr. Steger's custom to go to the reservoir on Sundays and feed the goldfish which were kept there and it is suspected that his heart failed and he fell in.

PETROGRAD.—In the fighting on the front of Volhynia and Galicia the Russians took 409 officers and 35,000 men, the official statement says. They also captured an enormous quantity of booty. The army of Gen. Teonitskyn, alone operating in the direction of Czernowitz, Bukowina, overwhelmed the Austro-Hungarians and took 18,000 prisoners. Since the present Russian offensive was started the emperor's troops have taken about 108,000 prisoners.

ROME. — Austro-Hungarian troops attacked in massed formation the Italian positions on Monte Lemerle but were repulsed with heavy losses. The Italian offensive recently started between the Adige and Jadig river and Brenta is making progress at several points.

RADIO ANNOUNCERS, ETC.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 28.—On a recent trip across the continent I chanced upon an arresting paragraph in a Topeka newspaper. Some radio advertiser, it seems, professed to hear a popular demand for a new name for "announcer." Among the suggestions were "airmaster," "choragus," "salutator," "marshal," and "mikemaster." Personally, I have known wrathful owners of receiving sets to call announcers names which are usually heard only in garages, on the New York stage or among the very best people of the Palm Beach winter colony.

It is said that some of the announcers gag at the flapdoodle they are compelled to chant at the behest of the radio advertiser. A large section of the public shares this nausea. One of the potentates of broadcasting tells us that the sale of a radio set is the sale of a seat in the theater of the air. Picture that gentleman's reactions if he bought a ticket for a stage performance and found it heralded, interrupted and concluded with advertising patter! If actors took such liberties as do the broadcasters the audience would wreck the box office. Yet this is precisely the radio owner's grievance under the grotesque conditions that now obtain. He feels that he was gypped when he bought his seat in the theater of the air.

FRANK A. PARKER.

IN ARGENTINA.

Clintonville, Wis., June 1.—In the Argentine Republic they are having just as hard a task as any other country in balancing their budget and in fighting depression. The way they go about it is worthy of attention.

The first thing the provisional President Uriburu did in 1930, after putting the Irigoyen régime out of power, was to drop from the government pay rolls thousands of employés whose work consisted in calling for their checks once a month. This he did regardless of political consequences.

In the April 7 issue of El Mundo, a Buenos Aires daily, I read that the congress of that country voted unanimously to reduce their own salaries and expenses by a total of 500,000 pesos! I do not believe any comments are necessary.

C. S. THOMSON.

CHANGE OF VENUE.

Chicago, June 2.—I beg space to voice my disgust at the legal procedure attending the impending trial of John Bain and his associates. I am not conversant with what privileges Bain may have under the law, but it seems to me preposterous to think that the taxpayers of Cook county, thousands of whom have been impoverished by the Bain failures, may have to carry an additional load of some $100,000 to try this case out of Cook county. If Bain is granted this privilege all of the other indicted bankers will want it also, in which case we depositors might by that time have salvaged enough of our savings to help pay some of the additional taxes incurred by such a procedure. WILLIAM BROWN.

VACANT SCHOOLROOMS.

Chicago, June 1.—From a recent article we learn that when Mr. Howard Savage asked Mr. Bogan the number of vacant rooms in the public school system he was told that there were 186. When Mr. Savage checked up on this he found something like 386. Later, taking into consideration the Strayer report and other reports, Mr. Savage found that there were 700 vacant rooms.

We wonder how long Mr. Bogan could hold a business position if he were not more exact in his figures. We also pause to ask whether Mr. Bogan's estimates throughout the system are as much at fault. MARY EVANS.

HONEST FIREMEN.

Chicago, June 3.—The building in which I have my dental office and flat was damaged by fire. Ten companies responded to the fire alarm. I have read on different occasions of the dishonesty of the brave firemen, so a word in appreciation might not be amiss. The night of the fire I left in a hurry and my watch and wallet were lying on my desk. These and other valuables were left untouched. I found the firemen to be most considerate and courteous.

F. G. ROBESON.

NOTE ON COMMUNIST TACTICS.

Chicago, June 2.—The Kentuckian who uses a character mentioned in the synoptic gospels to designate those whom he dislikes seems to be offended at the activities of people from other states. He probably looks upon them as "damyankees" and, therefore, foreigners. How can the communists and young intellectuals hope to convert the provincially minded hillbilly to internationalism when he can't even understand nationalism?

The Kentucky miner would probably say that he was a Kentuckian first and then a southerner and then an American. If the communists wish to establish themselves in this country, I wonder why they start working in the most backward states. J. N. MCSHANE.

A TAX ON MORTGAGES.

Chicago, May 27.—Your article by Oscar Hewitt captioned "Jacobs Believes Mortgages Will Escape Taxation" is very discouraging to real estate owners. If after all the discussion and publicity we have had on tax matters and the almost unanimous opinion that real estate is too heavily burdened and the absolute demonstration that real estate cannot pay taxes as now assessed, it is almost unbelievable that there should be any doubt as to taxing mortgages and cash, if government is to be maintained. Your demonstration of taxing savings accounts is certainly bad enough, but here is how the present system works on real estate:

A certain apartment building on the west side was built in 1927 at a total cost for building and lot of $45,000. This is taxed $1,300. Total net income fully rented is $4,200.

Interest on $32,000 mortgage is...	$1,920
Taxes	1,300
Depreciation	800
	$4,020

If there are no unusual expenses or loss of rent the owner gets $180 income from an investment of $13,000. The owner of the mortgage gets $1,920 income from $32,000 investment. And yet there are those who question the justice of taxing mortgages. HENRY O. LARSEN.

DOWN IN ARKANSAS.

Round Pond, Ark., June 1.—To the Taxpayers and Citizens of the United States: It is your duty to write letters to your congressmen and senators asking that they do everything in their power to pass a farm relief bill so the government can take up all the loans on farm lands for a period of ten years and that the rate of interest will not exceed more than 3 per cent to the farmers. We farmers must have help or we are lost. More than half the land in St. Francis county, Ark., where I reside, is advertised for taxes. Farmers cannot pay their taxes and pay such high rates of interest. CHARLES FLEMING.

THE PREHISTORIC JUNGLE.

Chicago, June 3.—I was delighted to see in Thursday's TRIBUNE that we are going to have a prehistoric jungle populated by animated mammoths, mastodons, saber tooth tigers, etc., for the World's Fair. May I respectfully suggest to those who are putting on this wonderful exhibition to include Clarence True Wilson, Borah, Heflin, Hoover, and McBride and as many drys as they can collect, for I feel sure by that time the above gentlemen can also be looked upon as our modern mammoths who, like their ancient brothers, had the power but not the brains to save themselves from oblivion. W. SHEEHAN.

SLOW.

Chicago, June 2.—Several weeks ago I read that police squad cars arrived on the scene in response to a phone call on an average of six minutes from the time a call is made. Last evening a large group of noisy toughs began playing ball on the street in front of my home. When I asked them to move farther on, due to their trampling the lawn and hedges, they became insulting. I phoned Police 1313. No officers appeared within 30 minutes and the noise was becoming worse. I phoned the local police station [Sheffield avenue] then, but they failed to arrive until one hour later, when the rowdies had at last dispersed.

I am wondering what might have happened if a murder had taken place and as long a delay were made by officers of the law! MRS. BERNICE GRAVES.

ALUMNI STORM CAMPUSES FOR THEIR REUNIONS

Exercises Held at N. U. and U. of Chicago.

Economic ills and business cares were forgotten yesterday as old grads stormed the campus of Northwestern university and the University of Chicago, recalling dear old college days, marching in parades, singing and making speeches of greeting.

More than 2,000 alumni marched up Sheridan road in Evanston to Patten gymnasium on Northwestern's campus. They had formed in line by classes at 12:30 o'clock, the oldest first. The annual alumni luncheon followed in the gymnasium, after which the 1,500 students who will receive degrees tomorrow morning were welcomed to the ranks of alumni by Harry L. Wells, president of the Northwestern University foundation, and Lester D. Hafemeister.

Class and fraternity reunions were held in the afternoon, the annual alumni meeting following at night in the North Shore hotel. The alumni of the Northwestern university medical school met at dinner in the Lake Shore Athletic club. President Walter Dill Scott's reception to alumni and graduates in Patten gymnasium closed the day's events.

Baccalaureate services will be held in the gymnasium at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Rev. Paul A. Wolfe, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Evanston, will give the baccalaureate address.

University of Chicago Fete.

More than 5,000 alumni of the University of Chicago, graduates of every year since the university was founded in 1892, and a score of graduates of the old University of Chicago, which closed in 1886, met in Alumni day festivities on the Midway.

Seventy representatives of the out-of-town alumni clubs met at breakfast in Judson court, and another Midway breakfast event was held in Ida Noyes hall for alumnae. Afternoon events included class reunions, the annual baseball game between the classes of 1916 and 1917, and a theatrical performance by the University Dramatic association in Mandel hall.

The first 200 alumni who arrived on the Midway were given copies of the questions in the four comprehensive examinations held last week under the university's new plan of education. The questions covered 210 pages.

Alumni Dinner Is Held.

The annual alumni dinner and assembly were held in Hutchinson commons at 6:30 o'clock, while the doctors of philosophy dined in Burton court. The twenty-second annual university sing was held in Hutchinson court at 8 o'clock last night. Following the marching of twenty-six fraternities about the court fountain Athletic Director A. A. Stagg presented blankets to winners of the varsity letter.

Eight hundred and ninety-six University of Chicago students will receive degrees and certificates at the 168th convocation to be held in the chapel on Tuesday. The exercises will be in two parts. In the absence of President Robert M. Hutchins, who is ill with the mumps, Emery T. Filbey, acting vice president of the university, will present the degrees. The convocation address will be given by Ernest Freund, professor of law, on "Law School and University."

Dean Gilkey to Conduct Service.

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the university chapel, will conduct a convocation prayer and service in the chapel from 10 to 12 a. m. today. Tomorrow is class day, to be marked by a senior class breakfast and the annual dinner of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity. Prof. William Oldfather of the University of Illinois will speak at the dinner.

Eight members of the graduating class of Northwestern university were elected to Phi Beta Kappa at the annual meeting in Harris hall yesterday. They are: Carl J. Nelson, 5243 North Christiana avenue; Irwin Earl Perlin, 2033 Potomac avenue; Dorothy Grace Schmidt, 4437 North St. Louis avenue; Jane A. Taft, 2844 Grant street, Evanston; Herbert C. Brook, Stronghurst; Phyllis C. Gampher, Elkhart, Ind.; John W. Parshall, Flint, Mich.; and Milton H. Wright, Lake Bluff.

U. of Illinois Graduation.

Of the 1,900 students who will be graduated from the University of Illinois at Champaign, 373 are Chicagoans. Four hundred of the university's total graduating class of 2,300 received their diplomas on Friday in exercises held for the three Chicago departments of the university, the college of medicine, college of dentistry, and school of pharmacy.

The remaining 1,900 students will receive degrees at the sixty-first annual commencement on the Champaign campus tomorrow morning. Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase will deliver the address and confer the degrees. Baccalaureate exercises will be held this afternoon, with the Rev. Edgar De Witt Jones, pastor of the Central Woodward Christian church of Detroit, as the speaker. Alumni day and class day were held yesterday. A concert by the university band was given last night, followed by the president's reception.

For the first time Illinois graduates will receive an 8½ by 11 inch diploma instead of the larger one of past years. It is of genuine sheepskin parchment and will be handed the graduates in a dark blue leather folder with orange moire lining.

Morgan Park Alumni Gather.

Alumni of Morgan Park Military academy gathered at the school yesterday to open the annual commencement week exercises. Sixty-two seniors will be graduated on Wednesday, the largest class in the history of the school.

The senior and junior classes of the Loyola university downtown college will give a tea this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Hotel La Salle, honoring Mrs. Helen Langer May, dean of women.

More than 100 members of the St. Luke's hospital nurses' alumnæ association entertained the 77 members of the 1932 class of the St. Luke's school of nursing at dinenr in the Blackstone hotel last night.

Several hundred alumni of the Glenwood Manual Training school returned to the school for anniversary day yesterday.

DR. CHARLES MAYO TAKES INSULL'S POST ON BOARD OF N. U.

The resignation of Samuel Insull from the board of trustees of Northwestern university was announced yesterday following the annual meeting of the board in Harris hall on the campus. Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., who received his M. D. degree from Northwestern in 1888, will succeed Mr. Insull.

James R. Leavell, president of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, and Harry L. Wells, vice president and general manager of Bauer & Black, also were elected to the board. Mr. Leavell succeeds the late Charles P. Whitney, and Mr. Wells succeeds George A. Mason, Chicago attorney, as an alumni representative on the board.

ENTRANCE RULE CHANGES MADE AT UNIVERSITY

Urbana, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Rigid entrance requirements will no longer confront high school students ranking in the upper 10 per cent of their graduating class in accredited secondary schools to enter the University of Illinois, it was announced here today.

The university board of trustees has approved a recommendation of the university senate authorizing th eregistrar to admit, "without adhering to the usual subject requirements, graduates of accredited secondary schools whose general scholarship rank is in the upper 10 per cent of their class."

In the future "such students need present only such specific high school courses as are prerequisite to university curriculum they desire to enter," according to the announcement.

The spirit of Dr. Eugene Davenport, dean emeritus of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, and for years an outstanding figure in state and national agricultural circles, was "ordained to posterity" here this afternoon when a portrait of him was presented to the university to be hung permanently in its galleries. Dean Davenport, who is 76, attended the ceremony.

Charles A. Kiler of Champaign was reëlected president of the University of Illinois Alumni association in the annual mail ballot.

58th Commencement at Purdue.

Lafayette, Ind., June 11.—[Special.]—Purdue university ushered in its 58th commencement exercises today with alumni reunions attended by 500 returning grads, and the campus program included presentation of a 50 year parchment to Dr. Elwood Mead, chief of the reclamation service, United States department of the interior, who was a member of the class of 1882.

Campus gates were presented to the university by the class of 1905, Walter Krull of Indianapolis, president of the General Alumni association, making the address. Gov. Harry G. Leslie assisted in the ceremonies.

George Ade, famous author, led the class of 1887 in its 45th reunion program, all five surviving members being present. Twenty-five members of the class of 1897 had their 35th reunion, led by Charles W. Morey of Chicago as president.

SOCIETY WOMAN BARES STORY OF COCKTAIL KILLING

Reveals Quarrel Over Her Love Rival.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 11.—A new charge was filed against Mrs. Elvira Dolores Barney, wife of a New York singer and daughter of Sir John and Lady Mullens, in Westminster police court today.

Mrs. Barney, who is already charged with the murder of Thomas William Scott Stephen, son of a banker, in her apartment on May 31, was further charged with shooting at Stephen with intent to do him bodily harm on May 19.

There was a near riot when the doors of the court were opened. A mob of fashionably dressed men and women fought police to gain entrance. None was admitted, however, for all the space in the tiny courtroom was taken up by witnesses and newspaper men long before the doors were opened to the public.

Woman Sobs on Stand.

Mrs. Barney, pale and distraught, sat in the dock a few yards from her father and mother, clutching a bottle of smelling salts. She burst into sobs as the prosecution's story of what happened in her flat on May 31 was revealed for the first time.

In a statement alleged to have been made to police, Mrs. Barney declared that she was 27 years of age and was living apart from her husband, who is in America. She said her husband left her two and a half years ago.

The night of the tragedy, the statement said, she and Mr. Stephen went to the Café de Paris in London. They returned to her apartment at 2 a. m., when they began to quarrel over a woman Stephen had been seeing. Mrs. Barney said Stephen found her revolver, which she had hidden, saying that he was taking it so that she could not kill herself. She said that she ran after him to get the revolver and there was a struggle, during which the revolver went off.

Tries to Get Doctor.

"He went to the bathroom," the statement said, "half shut the door, and called: 'Fetch a doctor.' I telephoned a doctor, but could get no answer.

"Stephen was looking very ill. When I returned from the telephone he was lying on the floor. He said, 'Ring the doctor quickly; I want to tell him how it happened. It was not your fault. Why doesn't the doctor come?' I put a towel on his chest and did all I could, then went and rang the doctor again. I went upstairs again and saw that he was dead. I do not remember what happened afterward."

Charles Wallace, outlining the case for the prosecution, told how witnesses had heard quarreling in Mrs. Barney's apartment the night of the tragedy. He declared that Mrs. Hall, who lives opposite Mrs. Barney's house, heard Mrs. Barney's voice scream: "Get out of my house at once. I hate you. Get out. Get out or I'll shoot you." This was followed by a shot. Stephen's voice was heard to say, "O God, what have you done?"

Tells of First Attempt.

Attorney Wallace also said Mrs. Barney knelt over the body and kissed it repeatedly, saying: "I love you so. If he is dead let me die, too. I'll kill myself."

Mrs. Hall on the witness stand confirmed the first part of Wallace's allegations and on further questioning said that on May 19 Mrs. Barney had fired a shot at Stephen from the window. Mrs. Barney leaned out of the window and screamed, "Smile, baby, smile, for the last time," and fired a revolver shot. Stephen was not hit, however, and the next morning he was admitted to the apartment and the pair seemed quiet and happy.

The trial was adjourned until next Saturday morning.

PARIS PROPOSES UNITED EUROPEAN POLICY ON DEBTS

Private Franco-British Parley Opens.

PARIS, June 11.—(AP)—Premier Herriot and Prime Minister MacDonald began an eleventh-hour effort tonight to reconcile the French and British viewpoints on reparations and other world problems in preparation for the conference which opens Thursday at Lausanne, Switzerland.

Preliminary conversations between the two premiers were held tonight but their main discussion is scheduled for tomorrow, when they are expected to slip off to some quiet countryside to talk things over across a tea table.

Seeks United Front.

A member of Herriot's cabinet said the keystone of the French premier's immediate policy was to unite England, Belgium, Italy and France in a common reparations and economic front, as the American government desires.

The communique issued after their preliminary conversations merely said:

"M. Herriot, Mr. MacDonald and Sir John Simon [British foreign secretary] took tea and later dined with the cabinet. Very friendly conversations were held on the problems at hand."

Ready to Suspend Payments.

A semi-official note later, however, said that while MacDonald, like Herriot, was hostile to a unilateral annulment of international contracts, the British prime minister apparently would decide to accept a prolonged suspension, if not a definite cessation, of Germany's reparation payments.

Regarding the question of security, the note said it was assured that MacDonald would try to obtain from Germany a declaration affirming its peaceful sentiments in order to dissipate alarmist rumors, notably to the effect that Poland might be menaced by German aggression in the Polish corridor.

The note emphasized that today's discussions were general and that a detailed examination of the problems was due tomorrow.

First Meeting Since 1924.

This was the first meeting between Herriot and MacDonald since the one at Geneva in the autumn of 1924, when they faced problems much similar to those which they are grappling now.

The French foreign office announced that in addition to reparations the two men would discuss the proposed London international economic conference, the question of an Austrian loan and relief to the Danubian countries in general, and what to do about disarmament.

The British prime minister was accompanied from London by his daughter, Ishbel, and by Sir John. M. Herriot as well as a crowd of several thousand persons met them at the station.

Italy In on Deal.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 11.—The Franco-British conference in Paris today will be followed by another preliminary meeting between British and Italian ministers at Geneva on Monday to make the united front of the three big powers on the reparations and war debt problems as complete as possible.

Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, who has been made chief of the Italian delegation at Lausanne instead of Finance Minister Antonio Mosconi, because that conference, it now appears, is to be more political than economic, left Rome at 10 o'clock tonight. He is due in Geneva tomorrow. Grandi expects to confer with British Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon Monday. It is understood here that this conference will be exclusively between the British and Italians.

CALEB F. WRIGHT, LIBERTYVILLE BANKER, IS DEAD

Caleb F. Wright, 78 years old, pioneer banker of Libertyville, died last night at the home of a son, George C. Wright, in Indianapolis. He had been ill several months.

Mr. Wright was president of the Lake County National bank of Libertyville until its merger two weeks ago with the First National bank of Libertyville. The new institution is known as the First Lake County bank. Mr. Wright was born in St. Lawrence county, N. Y., and went to Libertyville 60 years ago. He helped organize the Lake County bank in 1892 and became its president in 1919.

Surviving Mr. Wright are five children, including George. The others are Roy, vice president of the new bank; Wirst, of Evanston, and Clark C. and Helen A. of Chicago. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday in the Libertyville Presbyterian church.

President of Brazil Orders Navy Rebuilt at Huge Cost

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 11.—Commemorating the naval battle of Ria Chuelo, President Getulio Vargas today signed a decree appropriating 40,000 contos [$21,840,000 at par] annually for 12 years to rebuild the Brazilian navy. The plan includes the construction of 25 defensive ships at a total cost of 480,000 contos [$262,080,000]. The president signed the decree after a luncheon aboard the dreadnaught Sao Paulo.

Explosion on Motorboat Causes Damage of $100

An explosion followed by fire did about $100 damage to a 15 foot motorboat docked at 59th street and the lake last night. Benjamin Jaffe, the owner, and a mechanic were aboard at the time and were reported to have leaped into the water to save their lives. Jaffe denied this. The blaze was put out by firemen in command of Chief Burke of the 19th battalion.

INSULL DREAM OF MILLIONAIRE CLUB CRASHES

Famous Mellody Farm Again for Sale.

BY AL CHASE.

Mellody farm, one time palatial estate of J. Ogden Armour, which was purchased four years ago by a syndicate of twenty-six wealthy Chicagoans headed by Samuel Insull as a prospective combination of business and country club, with a national membership of millionaires, is again for sale. It was learned yesterday that the ambitious plans of Mr. Insull were never carried out, except in their preliminary stages, and that the entire original setup of pleasure and business has been shelved.

The 846 acres of land, adjacent to Lake Forest, was taken over from the Armours by the Deerpath Realty trust, composed of twenty-six millionaires. It was learned that this trust was dissolved some time ago and the title conveyed to the Consolidated Properties trust, which already had other land holdings. The twenty-six founders are interested in the latest holding unit.

Stock Crash Dispels Dream.

One of the twenty-six said yesterday that the dream of a super-exclusive club of executives from various parts of the country had vanished in the stock market crash and that the future of the big property depends on what offers for its developments are received.

It also was disclosed that the actual formation of the de luxe organization never got farther than the taking out of a charter for a "Mellody Farms Country club." No memberships, either life or associate, ever were sold.

Mellody farm was bought by the syndicate in June, 1928, for a price said to have been $2,500,000. There is now a $1,500,000 mortgage on the property. The purchase followed close on the heels of the transfer of title by Mrs. J. Ogden Armour to the Continental bank, to aid in the settlement of her husband's debts.

Members Never All Revealed.

A year later it was disclosed that the property was to be developed into a country club. Members of the syndicate, the full list of which has never been divulged, included George M. Reynolds, Arthur Reynolds, Britton I. Budd, the late R. Floyd Clinch, and Thomas E. Wilson.

A few improvements were made. A locker house was erected. An eighteen hole golf course was laid out, and this was in occasional use last summer. The great Italian villa erected by J. Ogden Armour is still as it was when the Armours lived there. It had been planned to use this as a clubhouse, but no alterations ever were made.

J. Ogden Armour assembled his famous estate many years ago by purchasing five tracts from five Irishmen. One of these was Martin Mellody, who lived on the largest of the parcels. Mr. Armour christened his estate Mellody farm and was thereafter continually annoyed by seeing it printed as Melody farm.

Chef Wed by Judge Casey Declines Free Cook Book

Five couples yesterday took advantage of the free marriage court of Judge Edward B. Casey in the city hall, where cook books are given out with marriage certificates. Frank Schrack, 24 years old, 6425 South Morgan street, a chef, declined the cook book. "I'll bake the wedding cake," he told his bride, the former Miss Mildred Krause, 20 years old, 5131 Barry avenue.

Autoist Carries His Own Crossing Gate; He's Jailed

Josph Bulak, 23 years old, 1828 Connecticut street, Gary, was driving his automobile yesterday at 92d street and Buffalo avenue. Attached to the back of the car were a railroad crossing gate and two red lanterns. Halted by police, he explained that he planned to build a railroad. He was lodged in the South Chicago jail.

DISCOVER RICH CUBANS PLOTTING TO KILL MACHADO

Police Imprison Leaders of Havana Society.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, June 11.—"Cubans have turned to terrorism in a desperate effort to oust President Gerardo Machado dead or alive. I am convinced that Havana's leading men and women have turned crazy."

Capt. Miguel Angel Calvo, chief of the police expert bureau, spoke thus today in summarizing yesterday's attempted assassination of the president by three young men. A series of raids yesterday and today disclosed three separate plots against Machado's life. Arms and explosives were confiscated and nearly 100 leading residents of Havana were imprisoned.

"The revelations are astonishing," Capt. Calvo said, "and most disappointing for Cuba's and Cubans' future. There seems to be only one thought in the people's mind, whether social leader or laborer, and that is to kill President Machado or to get rid of him in one way or another."

Raid Fashionable Homes.

Police and military operatives announced the discovery of three plots against the president five hours after yesterday's attempted bombing of Machado's automobile. Luxurious mansions in the suburbs of Vedado, Cesso, and Miramar were raided. Guns and bombs were seized.

"Society terrorists" of the secret ABC organization, which was discovered as seeking to overthrow the government on May 20, independence day, are bent on exterminating Machado and his government by terrorism, police said. The arrest of 75 suspects and alleged would-be assassins disclosed that other government leaders were also "marked for death," police said.

Police tonight imprisoned Pedro Herrera Sotolongo, prominent lawyer and director of the newspaper El Pais. Last week Sotolongo appealed to the Supreme court to terminate military control on the island and to order Machado to restore constitutional guarantees. Police are also hunting an American woman, believed to have participated in yesterday's assassination attempt.

Cuban Leaders Seized.

Most of the prisoners seized in the raids were sent to the Cabañas fortress. The prisoners include Dr. Rene Palma Mendez, Roberto Gonzales de Mendoza, son of the late Ramon Gonzalez de Mendoza, who was one of Cuba's most prominent lawyers; José Andres Rionda, rich real estate man and relative of Manuel Rionda, sugar refining magnate of Cuba and New York; Mrs. Mariana de la Torre, widow of Ramon Mendoza and mother of two of the men who attempted to assassinate Machado yesterday; Mrs. Amelia Hierro, wealthy society matron; Mrs. Clemente Vasquez Bello, wife of the president of both the liberal party and the senate; and Blas Rocafort Altuzarro, well known clubman.

Documents and letters, police said, revealed that they were connected with former President Mario G. Menocal's independence day plot, and that most of the families belonged to the ABC terrorist organization, which is said to be directed by Menocal who is said to be directed by Menocal, who police said was arrested today.

All Held Incommunicado.

The arrested women were confined in the woman's jail at Guanabacoa, across Havana harbor, and the men at Principe Hill and Cabañas fortress. All were held incommunicado. Capt. Calvo said that "every one prominent in Cuba is under suspicion."

President Machado was accompanied by a guard of secret service men when he left the hospital yesterday for a week-end holiday at Santiago de las Vegas.

Details of yesterday's attempted assassination were divulged today.

Ignacio Mendoza de la Torre, 29, Havana broker; Luis Perez Mendoza, 26, lawyer, and Guillermo Jimenez Armenteros, 23, merchant, arrived in Marianao early yesterday in an armored car containing five rifles, three revolvers, and sixty-five rounds of ammunition.

Made 45 Pound Bomb.

The men placed a bomb built in an ice cream freezer, containing 45 pounds of dynamite, 30 pounds of iron filings, and 12 pounds of 4 inch nails, on a branch of a tree five feet from the highway over which Machado was to pass. The explosives were connected by a wire 400 feet long connecting with a magneto hidden in bushes.

Elpidio Martinez Gonzalez, gardener for Secretary of Public Instruction Carlos Miguel de Cespedes, who lives near by, discovered the bomb. He notified police who arrived before the terrorists returned.

The three young men hid in the bushes awaiting the president's car. They were ambushed by police, who covered them with guns. De la Torre was prevented from touching the magneto just as Machado's car crossed the spot in direct range of the bomb. The trio ran, but were captured after a brief chase.

TWO WITH PISTOL SEIZED.

Robert Drell, 40 years old, 1427 Cullerton street, and Truman Powell, 28, were arrested yesterday when police found a revolver in their automobile at Rockwell street and North avenue.

Mr. Probert was born at sea, and his father died on the three months' ocean voyage from England to the United States. FINDS STEAMING MOUND OF LAVA PUSHING UP ISLE

SEWARD, Alaska, June 11.—(AP)—An isolated Bering sea island, populated only by a herd of immense sea lions and great flocks of birds, Bogoslof, has given the Rev. Father Bernard R. Hubbard what he declares to be proof of how volcanic islands "grow." A great steaming mound of moving lava, he said in a message sent to Seward, has been pushed out of the earth and has changed the contour of one section of the island completely. The mass is apparently increasing in size.

The "growth" is taking place, the Santa Clara university professor said, at a place where formerly a sheltered harbor existed. His observations were made on a voyage from Bristol bay with his party on the motorship Polar Bear. Despite storms and high seas a successful landing was made.

One furious sea lion charged Capt. Pete of the Polar Bear and he was saved from serious injury only by quick dodging. Bogoslof has been little explored. Expeditions in recent years have been unable to make a landing there. A geographic dictionary describes Bogoslof as having arisen from the sea on May 18, 1796. Nearly a century later a new volcano arose nearby. From 1884 to 1890 the two, connected by a spit, became a single island.

SUIT FOR $100,000 FOLLOWS CLASH AT HORSE SHOW

A dispute at the South Shore Country club's horse show last Wednesday when Grand Lex, champion five gaited gelding of America, was withdrawn by his owner, Murrell A. Kern, president of the Life and Casualty company of Chicago and owner of the Lexington Saddle farm at Palatine, had an aftermath in the Superior court yesterday.

The praecipe of a $100,000 suit naming the country club and Groverman Ellis, E. M. Anderson, and C. B. Goes members of the club committee which staged the show, as defendants was filed by Attorney Delta I. Jarrett, on behalf of Kern. The attorney said the declaration would charge injury to his client's reputation.

At his office yesterday Kern said he had withdrawn his horse from the show because of a loose shoe. As a result, he said, he and his stable were ruled from the show by the committee.

Dismisses $50,000 Suit Against Peaches Browning

A $50,000 suit for breach of contract against Frances [Peaches] Browning was dismissed by Circuit Judge A. W. Summers yesterday when he sustained the demurrer filed by her counsel, Benjamin H. Ehrlich. The plaintiff was Arnold Stolz, Chicago and New York theatrical agent. He charged that shortly after the divorce trial which brought her into the newspaper columns she signed a contract with him. Later, his suit charged, she repudiated the paper. Judge Summers ruled that Stoltz lacked sufficient ground for his suit.

LEWIS PRAISES HOOVER DODGING OF DEBT PARLEY

Theory at Lausanne Is Fraud, Says Senator.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—From the senate floor Senator J. Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.], today congratulated President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson for taking "the strong American course" in refusing to join in the Lausanne conference.

The conference, said the Illinois senator, was disguised as being for "trade adjustment," but was in reality designed to bring about the cancelation of Europe's debts to the United States.

Parties Join Against Cancellation.

"The Democratic party and the Republican party have their differences at home but they are united against this effort on the part of the financial jugglers and the parliamentary international politicians to establish in the minds of America that there is a trade regulation bringing the prices of all commodities of the world to the same level by an artificial standard," said Senator Lewis. "Then they contend that the reason the products can not be bought is the consciousness on the part of the debtor lands of their indebtedness.

"They then seductively introduce the doctrine that, with the debt completely extinguished or held up through the whole life of the present generation in some form of moratorium—then the money that otherwise would be expended upon the debt would be used to purchase the goods at the new high price level adjusted by international arrangement and convey to the individual producers the large profits to be realized.

Calls Plan a Fraud.

"This assumption is fraudulent and the pretenses under it are hypocrisy.

"President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson can be assured that they have complete endorsement and the full approval of the United States senate. And this fact must be known to the debtor nations and kept before them that they may be conscious that any attempt of jugglery for political purposes will be unavailing, because of the confidence America has in the statesmen of her country and the patriots of her political administration."

Ten British Clubs to Join in Washington Army Fete

The clubs will sponsor a number of booths and floats, Robert Teasdale, in charge of British participation, announced.

The Curse of Prohibition

An Editorial by J. LOUIS GUYON

While Our Best Citizens Are Falling Out of Windows

and our property depreciates in value and our old established manufacturing and mercantile firms close their doors and go out of business, the men we elect to public office SQUABBLE OVER THE NOBLE EXPERIMENT. Have your laws fulfilled their purpose?

The Purpose of Law Is to Prevent Crime, Not Create It

Stock manipulators have been able in spite of the law to run the market up or down at will to such an extent that if the dollars lost in the stock market in the last two years were placed end to end, they would reach around the world two hundred times. We live in a land of plenty, with more than enough for everyone, yet thousands of people have lost their homes and millions are hungry!

And We Find Men and Women Eating Out of Garbage Cans

Salaries have been cut 25% to 50% and many of us are not working. The farmer gets as little as twelve cents a bushel for oats. The sheriff sells the farmers' hogs at public auction at 75c to $1, and we used to pay ninety cents a pound for boiled ham! We pay a man $75,000 in six months for batting a ball. We give him all the praise, glory and admiration that it is possible to bestow upon a man. We pay the President of our country $75,000 a year to look after the welfare of one hundred and twenty million people. We elect thousands of other public officials at an expense of millions, and pay millions more in salary and give them the right and privilege of blaming their own shortcomings and misdeeds, right or wrong, on this same President.

We Pass an Income Tax Law That Makes Honest Men Sit Up Nights Figuring How They Can Cheat the Government

Where is the public official who would sponsor a law that would create in the brain of man the desire to cheat his own mother and father?

Mother and Father, You and I Are Part of the Government
WHY CHEAT OURSELVES?

You pay fifteen cents for a package of cigarettes. Six cents of every fifteen goes for government tax, and the stamp is on the package before you buy it. The average man smokes a package of cigarettes daily. Three hundred sixty-five packages a year at six cents per package amounts to $21.90, which the government collects from each smoker every year. Suppose they changed this law and only charged nine cents for the cigarettes and at the end of the year tried to collect the six cents for each package consumed. What would happen? All the snoopers in the world could not catch up with the liars and cheaters that this change would create. If Uncle Sam would collect all our income taxes the same way we would not have to send men to jail for tax evasion. If real estate taxes could be collected as easily as gas taxes, the policemen, firemen and school teachers would all be paid in cash.

We allowed a small clique of reformers, fanatics, dishonest politicians and thoughtless men and women to put over the prohibition act which has spread corruption, murder, crime and disrespect of the law in every part of the country.

The God of us all needed but ten commandments while laughable legislation crowds our statute books into the millions

THEY HAVE PUT POISON IN LIQUOR
THEY HAVE PUT MEN IN JAIL FOR LIFE
THEY HAVE MADE MEN BLIND
THEY HAVE PUT MOTHERS IN JAIL

They've taken our revenue that the government should have and placed it in the hands of the criminal classes who have used it to corrupt our public officials and our courts. And today our sons and daughters and our wives, that never drank before, think it smart to get stewed—the common term for plain drunk.

And We Still Squabble Over the NOBLE EXPERIMENT and Wonder Why We Have Depression!

We get out of life just what we put into it. If we plant pumpkins we will not grow pineapples. The Good Lord Himself turned water into wine and supplied it to his brethren, thus sanctioning its use under proper conditions, and we as a nation tried to take from the public that which Christ has given, that which man has enjoyed through all the ages. Surely we need more common sense and fewer efficiency experts.

PLAN REPLICA OF SOLOMON'S TEMPLE AT FAIR

$500,000 Structure Will Be Erected.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago's Century of Progress exposition is to have a $500,000 replica of King Solomon's temple, drawn from plans by Harvey Wiley Corbett of New York City, head of the World's Fair architectural commission, it was announced yesterday by Dr. John Wesley Kelchner of New York, archæologist, who has spent thirty-five years in study and research into the history and design of this stupendous structure of antiquity.

EMMETT W. MACCONNELL.

The proposed restoration of the greatest building of biblical times has been allotted a site 400x800 just south of and adjoining the Travel and Transport building. The architectural commission of the World's Fair already has passed on the project and the exposition officials have approved of it.

Dr. Kelchner states that actual construction probably will get under way within ninety days and that the temple will be complete six months later. Meanwhile, general offices and a studio have been opened in the Brevoort hotel, where paintings, sketches, designs and models, on which half a million dollars are said to have been spent by Dr. Kelchner during the last thirty-five years, will be exhibited.

In Gorgeous Colors.

The replica of the great temple of King Solomon will be of steel frame construction and with exterior walls of wall board similar to the other fair structures. Gorgeous colors—purple, blue, gold, scarlet, and silver, rainbow effects, will be used both inside and out. The base of the temple will be gold and black. It will be flood lighted, of course.

"It is known to every reader of the Bible and student of Solomon's days that an amazingly exact description of the temple and its associated structures has been carried down from the mists of antiquity by the scriptures," said Mr. Corbett. "Lineal measurements, materials employed, and ornamental detail are so graphically presented that restoration of the temple at any time within a score of centuries past, awaited only the coming of a man with the vision to recognize its historic value and the imagination to undertake the task."

Nothwithstanding the universal interest in King Solomon's temple, a fascination which has created innumerable legends and romances during the intervening centuries, the fact remains that no determined effort to restore the temple was made until Dr. Kelchner began thirty years ago to make real his vision of the scriptural description.

Spends a Fortune.

He spent a personal fortune, acquired in the industrial world as a manufacturer, in a world-wide search for archæological data and period decorative technique, from which to render accurately down to the minutest detail, the general ornamental scheme revealed by the biblical story. Other noted archæologists collaborated with Dr. Kelchner and at length the work was completed.

Nine years ago Dr. Kelchner had assembled all that was needed to erect an exact replica of a temple which had vanished 3,000 years ago. The next step was to vision the entire conception, from the foundation up, in graphic sketches, paintings, working drawings, and plans, and in his New York studio he surrounded himself with expert draftsmen and capable artists, laying before them the models, plans, and designs of this, his life work.

Harvey Wiley Corbett has been interested in the Solomon's temple project with Dr. Kelchner for nearly twenty years.

Open to All Denominations.

The interior of the temple will, in addition to various religious courts and rooms, contain exhibits, bazaars, shops, and industries of the far east, dancers, musicians, and other attractions.

Dr. Kelchner declares the great temple should appeal to all religions, to educational interests, and to fraternal groups. Every denomination in the world will be permitted to have a room in the structure for its World's Fair headquarters.

Dr. Kelchner's executive committee for his King Solomon's temple is headed by Charles S. Peterson, vice president of the World's Fair. Dr. Louis L. Mann, rabbi of Chicago Sinai congregation, and Thomas J. Houston, imperial potentate of the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, are vice chairmen. Many other important names are to be announced later, Dr. Kelchner stated.

Mr. Corbett heads the operating staff of Dr. Kelchner. Others on the staff are Emmett W. MacConnell, international exhibition specialist; A. J. Hilt of Philadelphia, and Myron H. Post.

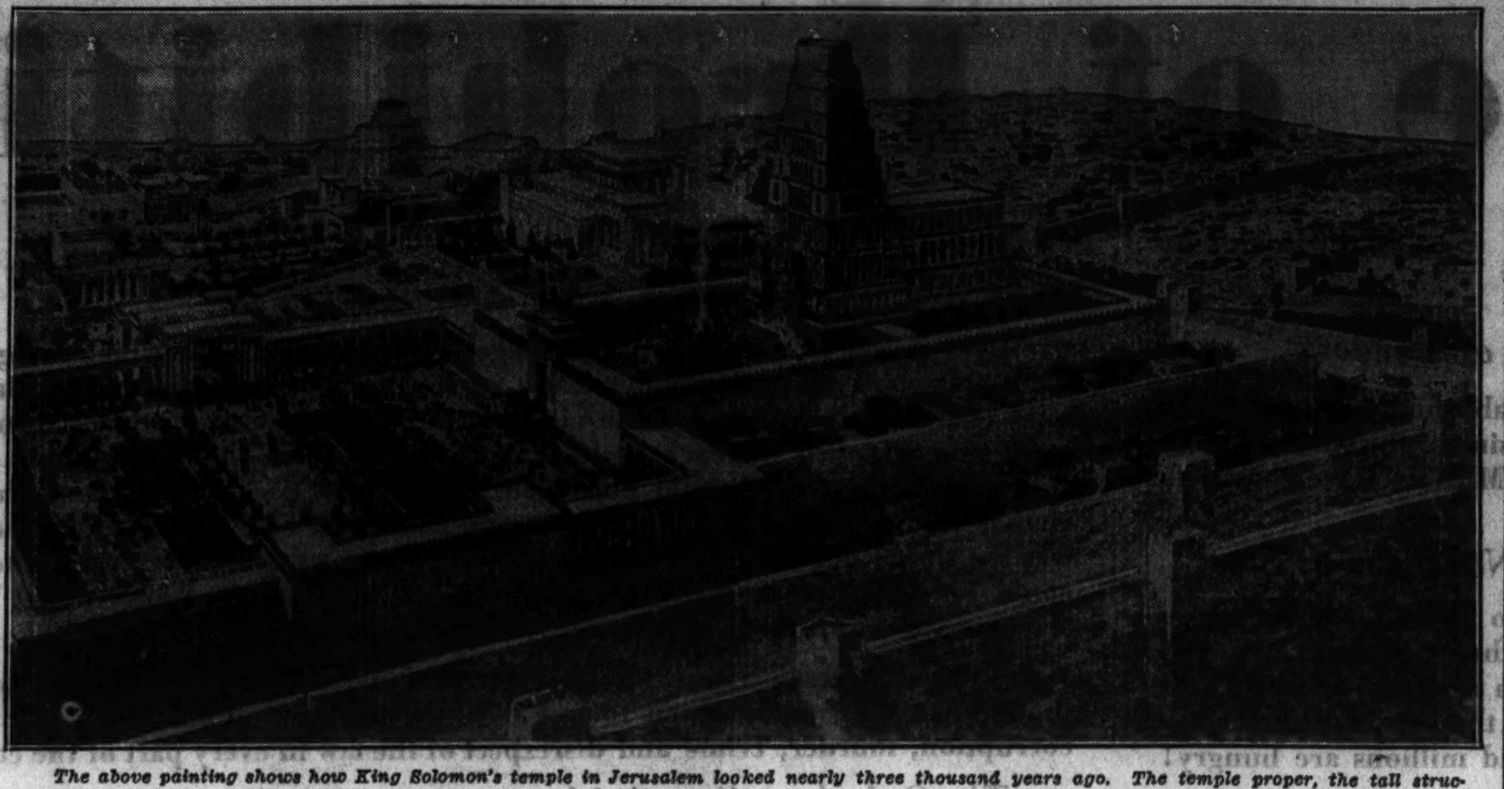
Praise from Rabbi.

Dr. Louis L. Mann of Chicago Sinai congregation. yesterday had this to say regarding the big project: "I have studied very carefully the plans and drawings of King Solomon's temple. Dr. Kelchner, who has devoted many years of research toward reconstructing this sublime edifice, which has played so great a rôle in the religious history of mankind, has achieved a superb triumph.

"Historically it is the most accurate attempt toward reconstruction that has ever been made. I feel certain that this structure will prove to be the outstanding attraction at the World's Fair."

The project is financed and there is no stock or securities for sale. Perhaps the most interesting angle to the project to reproduce this great architectural masterpiece of Biblical days is the plan of Dr. Kelchner eventually to build a permanent replica somewhere in the United States. He stated that he has an option on two sites, one of which is in Cook county.

[redacted] LOOKING BACKWARD 3,000 YEARS



The above painting shows how King Solomon's temple in Jerusalem looked nearly three thousand years ago. The temple proper, the tall structure on your right, and the citadel, on the left, are to be reproduced at the World's Fair by John Wesley Kelchner of New York, who has spent more than three decades of study and research into the history of this famous structure. Harvey Wiley Corbett, head of the exposition architectural commission, has been associated with Dr. Kelchner for many years, and will be the architect of the project.

ARCHITECTS TO LOOK BACK INTO ILLINOIS HISTORY

Historical architecture in Illinois will be told about and pictured at the annual meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, to be held at the Architects' club on Tuesday evening, June 14. Thomas E. Tallmadge, F. A. I. A., will preside and will talk on "The History and Historic Architectural Monuments of Illinois." Mr. Tallmadge is a member of the historic monuments and natural resources committee of the A. I. A., and also is chairman of the historic monuments committee of the Chicago chapter of the A. I. A.

EARL H. REED JR.

Other speakers will be Prof. Earl H. Reed Jr., head of the department of architecture of Armour Institute of Technology, who will give a talk on examples of historic architecture in Illinois, illustrated with lantern slides.

Dr. James A. James, head of the department of history at Northwestern university, will talk on "Illinois and New Orleans in the Eighteenth Century," and Dr. Otto L. Schmidt, former president of the Chicago Historical society, will tell about the old history of Chicago.

Guests of the chapter will include officers of the Chicago Historical society and of other historical societies or affiliations.

COMMITTEE OF SIX IS NAMED TO AID BONDHOLDERS

A bondholders' advisory committee of six is announced by Harry G. Stern. of Louis P. Mann & Co., to answer inquiries regarding the real estate bonds and mortgages purchased through the Citizens State bank, recently closed.

The members of this body are: Sanford D. Abrams, secretary and treasurer of Abrams Department store; Mahlon D. Miller, formerly with the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank for nine years; W. B. Prickitt, with A. B. Leach & Co. for ten years; Marvin L. Mann, Lincoln avenue merchant; Harold A. Tubby, vice president Paul Dodge & Co., and Mr. Stern.

"It's the sole purpose of the committee at this time to assist and advise bondholders" said Mr. Stern. "The men on this committee have or represent business interests in this community. They are in no way affiliated with any bank or investment house. At present the committee is not prepared to recommend any plan. Arrangements have been made for offices at 3131 Lincoln avenue."

Reports Renting Activity in Barrington District

Nearly every available house in Barrington has been rented and the demand still is active, according to J. B. Coates of the Biltmore Country Estates development, three miles north of Barrington, who states that this demand comes largely from officials and department managers of the Jewel Tea company, which two years ago completed a new plant and office building at Barrington. He adds that several new homes are now under construction in Jewel park and the Biltmore estates.

"Local dealers also report a good inquiry for country estates," said Mr. Coates. "The Foote estate, three and a half miles north of Barrington, adjoining the Biltmore Country Estates development, containing twenty acres and having frontage on Grassy lake, recently was purchased by J. Edward Liess of Evanston at a reported price of $26,000."

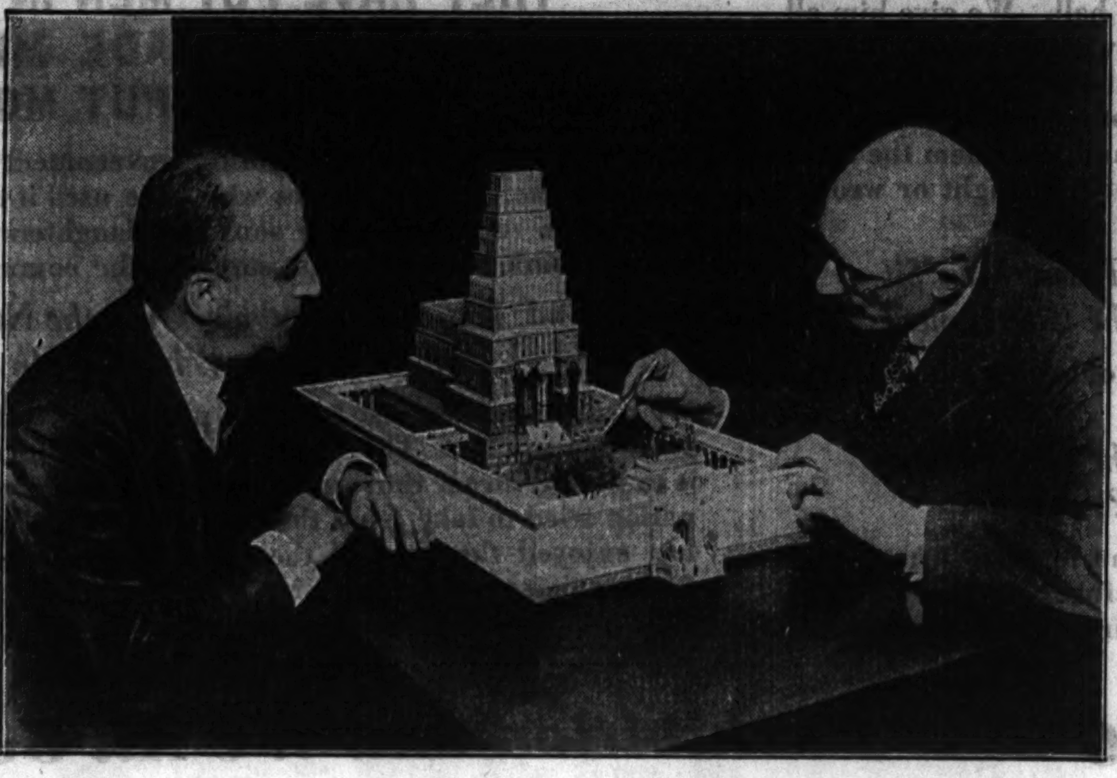
Brokers' Notes

C. H. Schryver Jr., who for six years was editor of the Central Manufacturing District magazine, has been made a member of the real estate sales staff of the Central Manufacturing district. He will divide his time between the main office in the First National Bank building and the Central Storage and Forwarding company, at 3932 South Lincoln street.

Salk, Ward & Walk have moved their offices from 105 West Madison street to 11 South La Salle street, suite 915.

Ross and Browne have been appointed renting and managing agents for the Illinois Women's Athletic club building, at Tower court and Pearson street. They also have been made renting managers of apartment buildings at 257 East Delaware place and at 1601 North Troy street.

STUDYING THE TEMPLE MODEL



Here's an interesting study of John Wesley Kelchner, on your left, and Harvey Wiley Corbett, both of New York, looking at a model of King Solomon's temple. A gorgeous replica of this famous structure of Biblical days, costing $500,000, is to be erected on a 400x800 site just south of the Travel and Transport building at the Century of Progress exposition, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Kelchner has spent thirty-five years of investigation into the design, construction, and plan of this ancient temple.

BRANT LINEN CO. RENTS NEW SPACE ON UPPER MICHIGAN

C. M. Brant, president of the Brant Linen company, has leased for his firm the remaining large store in the Life and Casualty building at 750 North Michigan avenue, at the southwest corner of Chicago avenue. The space taken is just south of the boulevard entrance to the building. McMenemy & Martin, Inc., agents for the building, were the only brokers. The lease is for a ten year term on a minimum guarantee plus a percentage of gross receipts.

The Brant Linen company deals chiefly in imported household linens from Ireland, fine laces and embroidery goods from all parts of the world. The business is an old established one, Mr. Brant having been at the head of his own company for twenty-one years. Previous to the present occupancy at 314 North Michigan avenue, where it has been since 1923, the firm was for a number of years in the Fine Arts building and also at 616 South Michigan avenue.

Mr. Brant will take possession of his new location on July 1. Extensive remodeling already is under way.

McMenemy & Martin, who negotiated this lease, recently closed the Walgreen Drug lease for the corner store in this same building, as announced in this department on May 7. The formal opening of the new drug store is announced for next Saturday, June 18. It is claimed this will be one of the finest units in the Walgreen chain.

New Evanston "A. & P." Plans Delivery and Charge Accounts

Delivery service, a new type of charge account and a flood lighted store at night are features contemplated for Evanston's newest and what is claimed will be Chicagoland's finest "A. and P." store. Another novelty will be an entrance from the chain store into Lord's department store. According to an announcement made yesterday the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Stores will spend approximately $40,000 in remodeling the Davis street frontage of Lord's department store into a large scale modern food market. The property leased fronts forty feet on Davis street, with a depth of 116 feet. The space is now occupied by a portion of Lord's store.

"The remodeling and construction is scheduled to begin in about a week," said R. D. Clark, head of the A. and P. real estate department, "and it'll be opened approximately the first week in July. It'll be the finest A. and P. store in the Chicago area, and will be the only one of its type on the north shore to have a meat department as well as all other standard departments.

"All the equipment is to be of special design and made to order. There will be a new shelving arrangement and the store will be flood lighted at night. Delivery service is being contemplated and also charge accounts in which the customer may deposit in advance and charge his purchases against this credit."

Not only will the main entrance from Davis street be used but there'll be an entrance from Lord's department store. The lease is for ten years or more. J. F. Fisher of Baird & Warner represented all parties in the transaction.

Soule Warterfield, president of the Chicago Real Estate Board, announced last night that he will open a real estate office doing a general business and specializing in commercial and loop properties in Chicago and in the larger cities of the United States and Canada. He states that he will continue to assist in the management of the properties of Starrett Brothers, Inc., which are scattered from coast to coast. Mr. Warterfield has taken over the Starrett offices in the Hartford building and will conduct his business under his own name from the same address, 8 South Dearborn street.

ASKS JUDGES TO CONSIDER PLAN FOR RECEIVERS

Realty Body Writes to 7 Chancellors.

Judges in the Superior and Circuit courts who act as chancellors and appoint receivers for property in Cook county tomorrow will receive a request from the board of governors of the renting and management division of the Chicago Real Estate board to consider the recent plan announced by Arthur Kruggel, chairman of the realty division. This plan, first announced on May 26, calls for an official board composed of property managers, plumbers, painters, carpenters, etc., to pass on all bills for supplies, work on buildings and even O. K. rental schedules for properties in receivership.

ARTHUR KRUGGEL.

This communication, mailed last night to the seven chancellors, reads as follows:

"To the chancellors of Cook county, Ill. Honorable sirs: The Chicago Real Estate board and the board of governors of the renting and management division are gravely concerned with the problem of receivership difficulties as it applies to real estate in the city of Chicago.

"The Chicago Real Estate board feels it is of great civic and economic importance that steps be taken to improve the management of real estate by receivers and respectfully offer suggestions that in its opinion may help to bring this about.

Lists Three Problems.

"The suggestions set forth apply specifically to the following problems: First—The management. Second—The maintenance. Third—The rental schedules.

"The proper management of real estate requires a background of experience; it is a business or profession of an exacting nature, great attention must be paid to details, diplomacy and tact, knowledge of human nature, willingness to serve, knowledge of values and of the community are essentials. It deals with the home and its importance must be realized.

"It has come to our notice that in a great many instances individuals unfitted for the task, because of the lack of the background of experience, unacquainted with the community, and unfitted in many other respects, have been appointed as receivers; institutions which never before had managed real estate have been appointed receivers for large projects where the highest skill is required to obtain the best results.

"Grave injustice has been done in a great many instances to equity interests and the security for the indebtedness has been greatly depreciated by reason of incompetent receivers being placed in charge.

Costly and Inefficient.

"The maintenance problem of property in receivership under the present method of procedure is both costly and inefficient. It is unreasonable to expect a chancellor sitting in his court, his mind concerned with matters of law, to pass upon and intelligently approve of orders submitted, price and necessity cannot be determined, nor are the attorneys for receivers in a position to vouch for same.

"This class of work could be handled more efficiently, more expediently, and at less cost if it were referred to a group or committee composed of men experienced in building maintenance work and under court supervision to pass upon.

"Fair rental values can only be determined by one familiar with the community, one having a knowledge of maintenance and operating costs.

"It is of great importance that fair rental values be maintained. To have them disregarded by agencies under court supervision is unjust to the taxpaying owner who looks to the courts of the land for fair treatment, it defeats the very purpose of receivership, which is to conserve the value of property. It forces other property into insolvency by its unfair and unjust competition.

Offers Coöperation.

"The Chicago Real Estate board, through it renting and management division, realizing the great importance and need for immediate action, hereby sincerely and respectfully tenders its aid, knowledge, and coöperation to the chancellors of Cook county, Ill., for the purpose of bringing about improvement in the present deplorable real estate receivership situation.

"It stands ready to furnish a list of competent, qualified property managers from which the chancellors may select receivers; it offers to organize a group or committee of maintenance men of expert ability and the highest integrity.

"The board of governors of the renting and management division of the Chicago Real Estate board shall be pleased at any time convenient to the chancellors to meet with them for the purpose of putting into effect the proposals offered, if same meet with their approval. Sincerely,

"CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD,
"Renting and Management Division.
"By ARTHUR KRUGGEL, Chairman."

Questionnaire to Realtors.

Just prior to mailing the foregoing communication to the chancellors the following letter was sent to all members of the Chicago Real Estate board:

"The board of governors of the renting and management division of the Chicago Real Estate board has offered to give the judges of Cook county, handling foreclosure suits, a list of competent qualified realtors from which to select receivers for property that comes to their court.

"If you are seeking to manage property as a receiver or for a receiver and care to have your name included, please fill out in full the enclosed questionnaire.

"State accurately your qualifications and business experience and return to the board. Failure to secure this information from you will be taken as an indication that you are not interested in acting in the capacity as above set forth, and your name will not be included in the list. The list will be made up in alphabetical order—every one will be given the same consideration—all we ask of you is to give us facts as to your qualifications and experience."

The questionnaire requires as references the names of three clients the realtor does management business with. It asks if he can furnish a fidelity bond, and requests him to set forth his qualifications in not more than 200 words.

REAL ESTATE BOND SERVICE

Inquiries must be accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply. Answers are based on information received from outside sources and, beyond care in securing it, The Tribune assumes no responsibility. Inquiries should be addressed to the Real Estate Bond Service, Chicago Tribune. Information should not be asked for more than one issue at a time. Give the name of the underwriter and the full title of the bond.

I'll appreciate it if you can inform me as to the standing of the One La Salle Street building 6 per cent bonds due in 1949, underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co.—J. B. F.

The statistical department of S. W. Straus & Co. states that all interest coupons which have come due to and including Jan. 1, 1932, have been paid by the mortgagor. Up to April 6 monthly installments of interest due under the mortgage of Jan 1, Feb. 1 and March 1, and amounting to $78,750, have not been deposited.

The following statement, estimated by the mortgagor, is based on leases that are now in effect on the property. These estimated earnings, computed early in April, are on an accrual basis for the period from May 1, 1931, to April 30, 1932:

Income, rents, etc. This sum includes accounts receivable from tenants which reflect difficulty in rent collections at present time, $970,640.

Operating expenses [includes requirements for taxes unpaid], $450,000.

Net income before ground rent, mortgage requirements and depreciation, $520,640.

Ground rent, $172,077.

Surplus before first mortgage charges, $348,563.

Interest requirements and coupon tax, $321,300.

Surplus before depreciation, $27,263.

The major part of the combined 1928 and 1929 taxes, amounting to $158,037, has been paid and an objection filed to the balance of approximately $3,900. The property is held under a ninety-nine year lease, and is improved with a forty-seven story office building.

Exclusive of the space on the second, third, fourth and fifth floors, designed to meet the needs of some financial institution, the occupancy of the building was approximately 96 per cent on April 1, 1932. Inclusive of this space the occupancy was about 80 per cent, it is stated

Farrand Building, Detroit.

Please give me any information you can regarding the Farrand building at 12800 Woodward avenue, Detroit. This issue was underwritten by the Straus Brothers Investment company.—I. K.

This is a four story fireproof building containing ten stores, 133 apartments and a garage, erected three years ago and reported to be in excellent physical condition. It was 90 per cent occupied on May 11, 1932. According to the bondholders' protective committee the property is in the hands of the trustee who reports gross receipts for four and a third months to Feb. 29, 1932, of $33,170. He states that operating expenses for the same period were $14,676. Other disbursements for the same length of time were $16,697 for taxes and $1,200 for furnishings. Taxes are completely paid up. There are $700,000 outstanding first mortgage bonds. Thirty per cent have been deposited.

The lessor was the American Trust and Safe Deposit company, as trustee for one of the bond issues sold by the American Bond and Mortgage company and now under foreclosure. The hotel contains ninety rooms, all furnished. Mr. Draper represented the trustee and I. E. Glaseman the lessees.

HOBBYISTS HOLD FLOWER SHOW IN GARFIELD PARK

Men's Garden Club Has Unusual Display.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Of the many flower shows being held at this time of year, perhaps the most unique is the display which is largely the product of business and professional men in the Chicago area who have made flower gardening a hobby. This show, open today to the public, is being staged by the Men's Garden club of the Chicago region, in Garfield Park conservatory.

O. V. MORGAN.

Such displays of peonies, irises and other June flowering varieties represent the height to which amateur gardening has developed in recent years. According to the Men's Garden club president, O. V. Morgan of Elmhurst, much of the stimulus to gardening in the metropolitan area has come from the organized community projects of both men and women, from the many local flower shows and from contests such as those conducted by THE TRIBUNE.

"Electrical engineers, doctors or lawyers make just as much of their flower growing hobby as they would of golf, and they combine just as much exercise and skill in producing attractive yards as they would to compete in any sport tournament," declares Mr. Morgan.

Requires Zealous Culture.

Few persons who view the gorgeous blooms to be seen in the seasonal flower shows realize the zealous care required to produce them. Hours of study of plant breeding, feeding and nurture are behind the final product of natural beauty.

The ribbons and medals awarded in these competitions only serve to goad the competitors to more exacting study of how to work with nature. Many of the new creations in variety or species are in themselves as much reward to the hobbyists as any of the new strains Darwin produced were to him.

The fact that there are over a hundred and fifty varieties of iris that thrive in the Chicago region, as well as scores of different kinds of peonies, delphinium or violas, only causes the gardener to become more specialized as he develops the garden over a period of years.

Iris Blooms Many Weeks.

Those who have worked with iris for several years come to realize that by selection and cultural methods these modern generations of the old "flags" can supply the garden with continuous bloom over as long a period as three months. Choice of varieties, care in surface soil cultivation and proper feeding bring this about.

Many gardeners make the mistake of planting the rhizomes or "tubers" too deep. The roots of irises naturally grow close to the surface, and it is advisable that the rhizomes be just covered by the earth, or leave part of them showing along the surface soil.

The iris bed should be mulched with leaves or other materials in winter, especially the first winter they are set out, to avoid the roots being heaved out by frosts. Once established, the mulching is not necessary.

Acid Soil Best for Iris.

An acid soil is most favorable to growth of iris, which accounts for such splendid blooms found near rock gardens or in soil in which the pines thrive. Once the bloom has faded, the flower stems should be clipped and the plants allowed to store up plant food during the remainder of the growing season. Plant food may be applied this summer to aid that process, and again next spring as the buds appear.

Many gardeners who have healthy growth in their dahlia beds now are preparing for the tall, colorful effects this flower will supply in the early fall. The tall dahlias, if well fed during this growing period, will require stakes or some other support. To secure the best blooms, the side buds should be pinched off and only the hardiest shoot permitted to grow.

When the central shoot is three or four joints above the ground pinch out the top to cause branching of the plant. Leave only the end bud on each branch, removing the side buds appearing at each set of leaves.

HOW TO GET TENANTS NOW

Every month of the year thousands of families in Chicago and suburbs seek new living quarters. Many families purposely delay their moving until after the May peak.

The time to reach these families with your rental offers is now.

The way to reach them is through want advertising in the Chicago Tribune. This newspaper is the year-round favorite guide of apartment tenants. In a recent survey they expressed a three-to-one preference for the Tribune over any other Chicago newspaper.

FIND DYNAMITE IN BONUS CAMP AT WASHINGTON

Police Fear Communists Plan Violence.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Discovery of two and one-half sticks of dynamite in the bed ticking of a world war veteran living at the Anacostia bonus camp today stirred new excitement in police circles already on pins and needles as a result of the presence in the city of 12,000 uninvited members of the bonus expeditionary forces.

As police delved into the possibility that communist members of the bonus army were planning acts of violence, Walter W. Waters, commandant of the veterans' expeditionary forces, dispatched recruiting agents to far flung points of the nation in an endeavor to mobilize a force of 50,000 within the next few weeks.

No Arrest Made So Far.

Some of the leaders of the veterans already are talking of digging in at their various Washington camps until congress meets again if it fails to vote the bonus at this session. Others are talking of sending emissaries to Chicago to intimidate the delegates to the Republican convention that the veterans will desert the party en masse unless a pledge is inserted in the platform calling for immediate enactment of legislation giving the vets their bonus cash at once.

The dynamite, together with fifty feet of fuse and six detonating caps, was seized by detectives. No arrests have been made thus far. Following the discovery of the explosive, government and local law enforcement personnel redoubled their efforts to avert an epidemic of violence.

Seek Farm Board Flour

The ranks of the indomitable B. E. F. passed the 12,000 mark today, counting only those in the four concentration camps, and Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, chief of police, predicted the federal government may have to assume control "if the problem becomes too big for the district to handle.

The proposal that farm board flour be turned over to the army by the Red Cross was under discussion today at a conference between Red Cross officials and representatives of local charity agencies. The Red Cross yesterday indicated the flour would be available if requested by the agencies.

Number of Sick Increase.

The movement to raise $3,000 by public subscription to equip a 50 bed hospital for the veterans was reported well under way today. This campaign was started as the result of an emergency conference held yesterday afternoon with officers of the district medical and dental societies, the commanding officer and chief surgeon of the 6th marine brigade and Chief Glassford in attendance.

It developed at this meeting that the daily sick call at the bonus army camps had jumped from 30 to 350 and that more than 200 sick veterans were applying daily to the veterans' bureau and were being rejected.

URGES U. S. BUILD AIR TERMINAL TO GIVE VETS JOBS

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—A proposal to place 2,000 acres of the ancestral home lands of George Washington at the disposal of the bonus army now in the national capital for camping purposes, and to provide them with part time employment in the building of a trans-Atlantic airship terminal and airport there, was made today on condition that the veterans could induce the Reconstruction Finance corporation or other government agencies to finance the work. The cost is estimated at $500,000.

The proposal was made to veterans who came here from Washington in search of funds, by Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America, who purchased the land from 18 different owners in 1928. The veterans to whom he suggested it, he said, returned to Washington declaring their problem had been solved.

Senate Gets Expense Bill from Stocks Quiz Witness

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[U. P.]—Walter E. Sachs, president of the Goldman-Sachs company of New York, has sent the senate banking committee a bill for $34.04 for witness fees and expenses. Sachs was called as a witness in the committee's stock market investigation. He was questioned in connection with a deal in which his company made approximately $11,500,000.

Baby British Princesses Save Pennies for Rainy Day

LONDON, June 11.—[U. P.]—The recent economy wave which swept the royal houses of Europe has extended even to the younger generation in England, it was learned today. The Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose are thriftily putting their savings in small penny banks which their mother, the duchess of York, recently ordered from the postal savings bank.

Stage Fire Causes $500 Loss in Nortown Theater

Fire yesterday caused damage of $500 to the stage, sound equipment, and organ of the Nortown theater, Western and Devon avenues. Fire Marshal John Stahl said the fire started in electrical equipment. The blaze was discovered by a janitor before the theater opened for the day. Lowering of the fireproof curtain saved the interior from more serious damage.

FLOWER SHOW DRAWS BIG CROWD IN LAKE FOREST

Mrs. Edith McCormick's Estate Open to Public.

BY ROBERTA NANGLE.

Only the presence of a dozen policemen prevented a traffic jam yesterday along the winding driveways to the entrance of "Villa Turicum," the Lake Forest estate of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, which was opened to the public for the annual two day flower show of the Lake Forest Garden club. Hundreds of garden lovers motored out to see the blossoms and to wander through the formal gardens.

The exhibit from north shore gardens were housed in the service buildings, where carriages and horses were quartered years ago. In the flagstone courtyards between the buildings young women wearing green garden smocks over bright summer dresses presided over booths of fresh cut flowers, vases, and garden equipment. Nearly every one went home carrying an armload of flowers.

Flowers in Twelve Classes.

The twelve classes displayed by the Garden club included everything in the way of floral groupings from simple arrangements of flowers of one color to formal dinner tables set for six guests. In addition there were twenty-two classes sponsored by the North Shore Horticultural society, to which the best of the north shore gardeners and estate superintendents sent their prize blooms.

In the section for tables the crowds lingered longest around the class for breakfast trays set for one person.

Mrs. Frank Hibbard Winner.

First prize in this class went to Mrs. Frank Hibbard for her all white tray, set with old fashioned milk glasses, before the portrait of a young girl holding a Scottie.

One of the hitherto untried classes was window boxes for a child's room. First prize went to Mrs. Edison Disk and Woodbury S. Ober for their box of candy tuft and rose geraniums.

The economy tables, judged for standards of beauty achieved at a minimum cost, attracted much attention. Mrs. Phelps Kelley took the blue ribbon for her $14 table set with a yellow woven cloth, black glass plates, and Chinese wooden bowls.

SENT TO JAIL FOR RUM SIGN ON AUTOMOBILE

Galena, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—"Paid county officials $740 for protection and they padlocked my place for a pint of beer."

This was the legend scrawled on the automobile of Oscar Lersch of Menominee when he parked it in front of the county court house today to appear at a liquor case hearing.

The legend brought Lersch a 90 day jail sentence for contempt of court from Judge C. I. Cook.

Lersch denied that he intended any reflection on the judge or state's attorney, insisting that the words applied solely to other law enforcing officers.

Despite the fact that Lersch's place was destroyed by fire last night a court padlocking order was made permanent.

Local and federal officers who raided Lersch's place May 14 reported they found 25 gallons of alcohol and other liquor.

Boston, Mass., June 11.—It took the 23 year old Lon Warneke to lead the Cubs out of their losing streak and back into first place this afternoon. Pitching in about the most sensational style thus far revealed in his brief but spectacular career as a major leaguer, Warneke made chumps out of the Braves and registered his eighth win of the season, 2 to 1, before 15,000. It was the fourth time Warneke had confined his opponents to one run and the tenth time he finished in eleven starts.

Warneke had to be good to win, because his mates, while supporting him nobly in the field, didn't assist him greatly with their hitting. Walter (Huckleberry Finn) Betts, who had registered six triumphs without a defeat, surrendered only five hits, but the Cubs got around this deficiency by going in for extra bases. Johnny Moore ripped off a triple in the first inning and it became a run. Marvin Gudat offered one of similar length in the second, and this, too, became a run. After this session Betts permitted only two men to reach first base.

Lonnie at Best in Pinches.

Warneke was just a bit more generous than his opponent, but had something in reserve whenever an extra head of steam was necessary. During six innings the Braves could move only one man as far as third and that was because of an error on one of the only three hits the locals produced. But in the seventh the Cub wonder was in actual difficulties for the first and only time. With one hostile already across the plate there still were men on first and third with only one out. Warneke emerged from this with no apparent exertion.

Woody English, whose intervention in the Brooklyn fight yesterday gave his mate, Bill Jurges, a good chance to mar Mickey Finn's features, featured in a bit of byplay again today, but only in a mild fashion. Having hit into two double plays, Woody was in no mood to laugh about it when Umpire Reardon called him out at first in a close play in the ninth. Woody playfully nudged the arbiter in the short ribs with his right elbow and Reardon, being a ticklish young fellow, felt it necessary to banish the Cub third sacker from the scene. Hack took care of the third base duties in the last half.

This Was Some Triple.

The triple with which Johnny Moore opened the festivities was the only hit of the Cubs' first inning, but it proved good enough to promote a run. Moore drilled his drive against the right center field wall, 417 feet away from the plate, and stood on third while Herman hoisted a short fly to right. English then flied to center and this was deep enough to

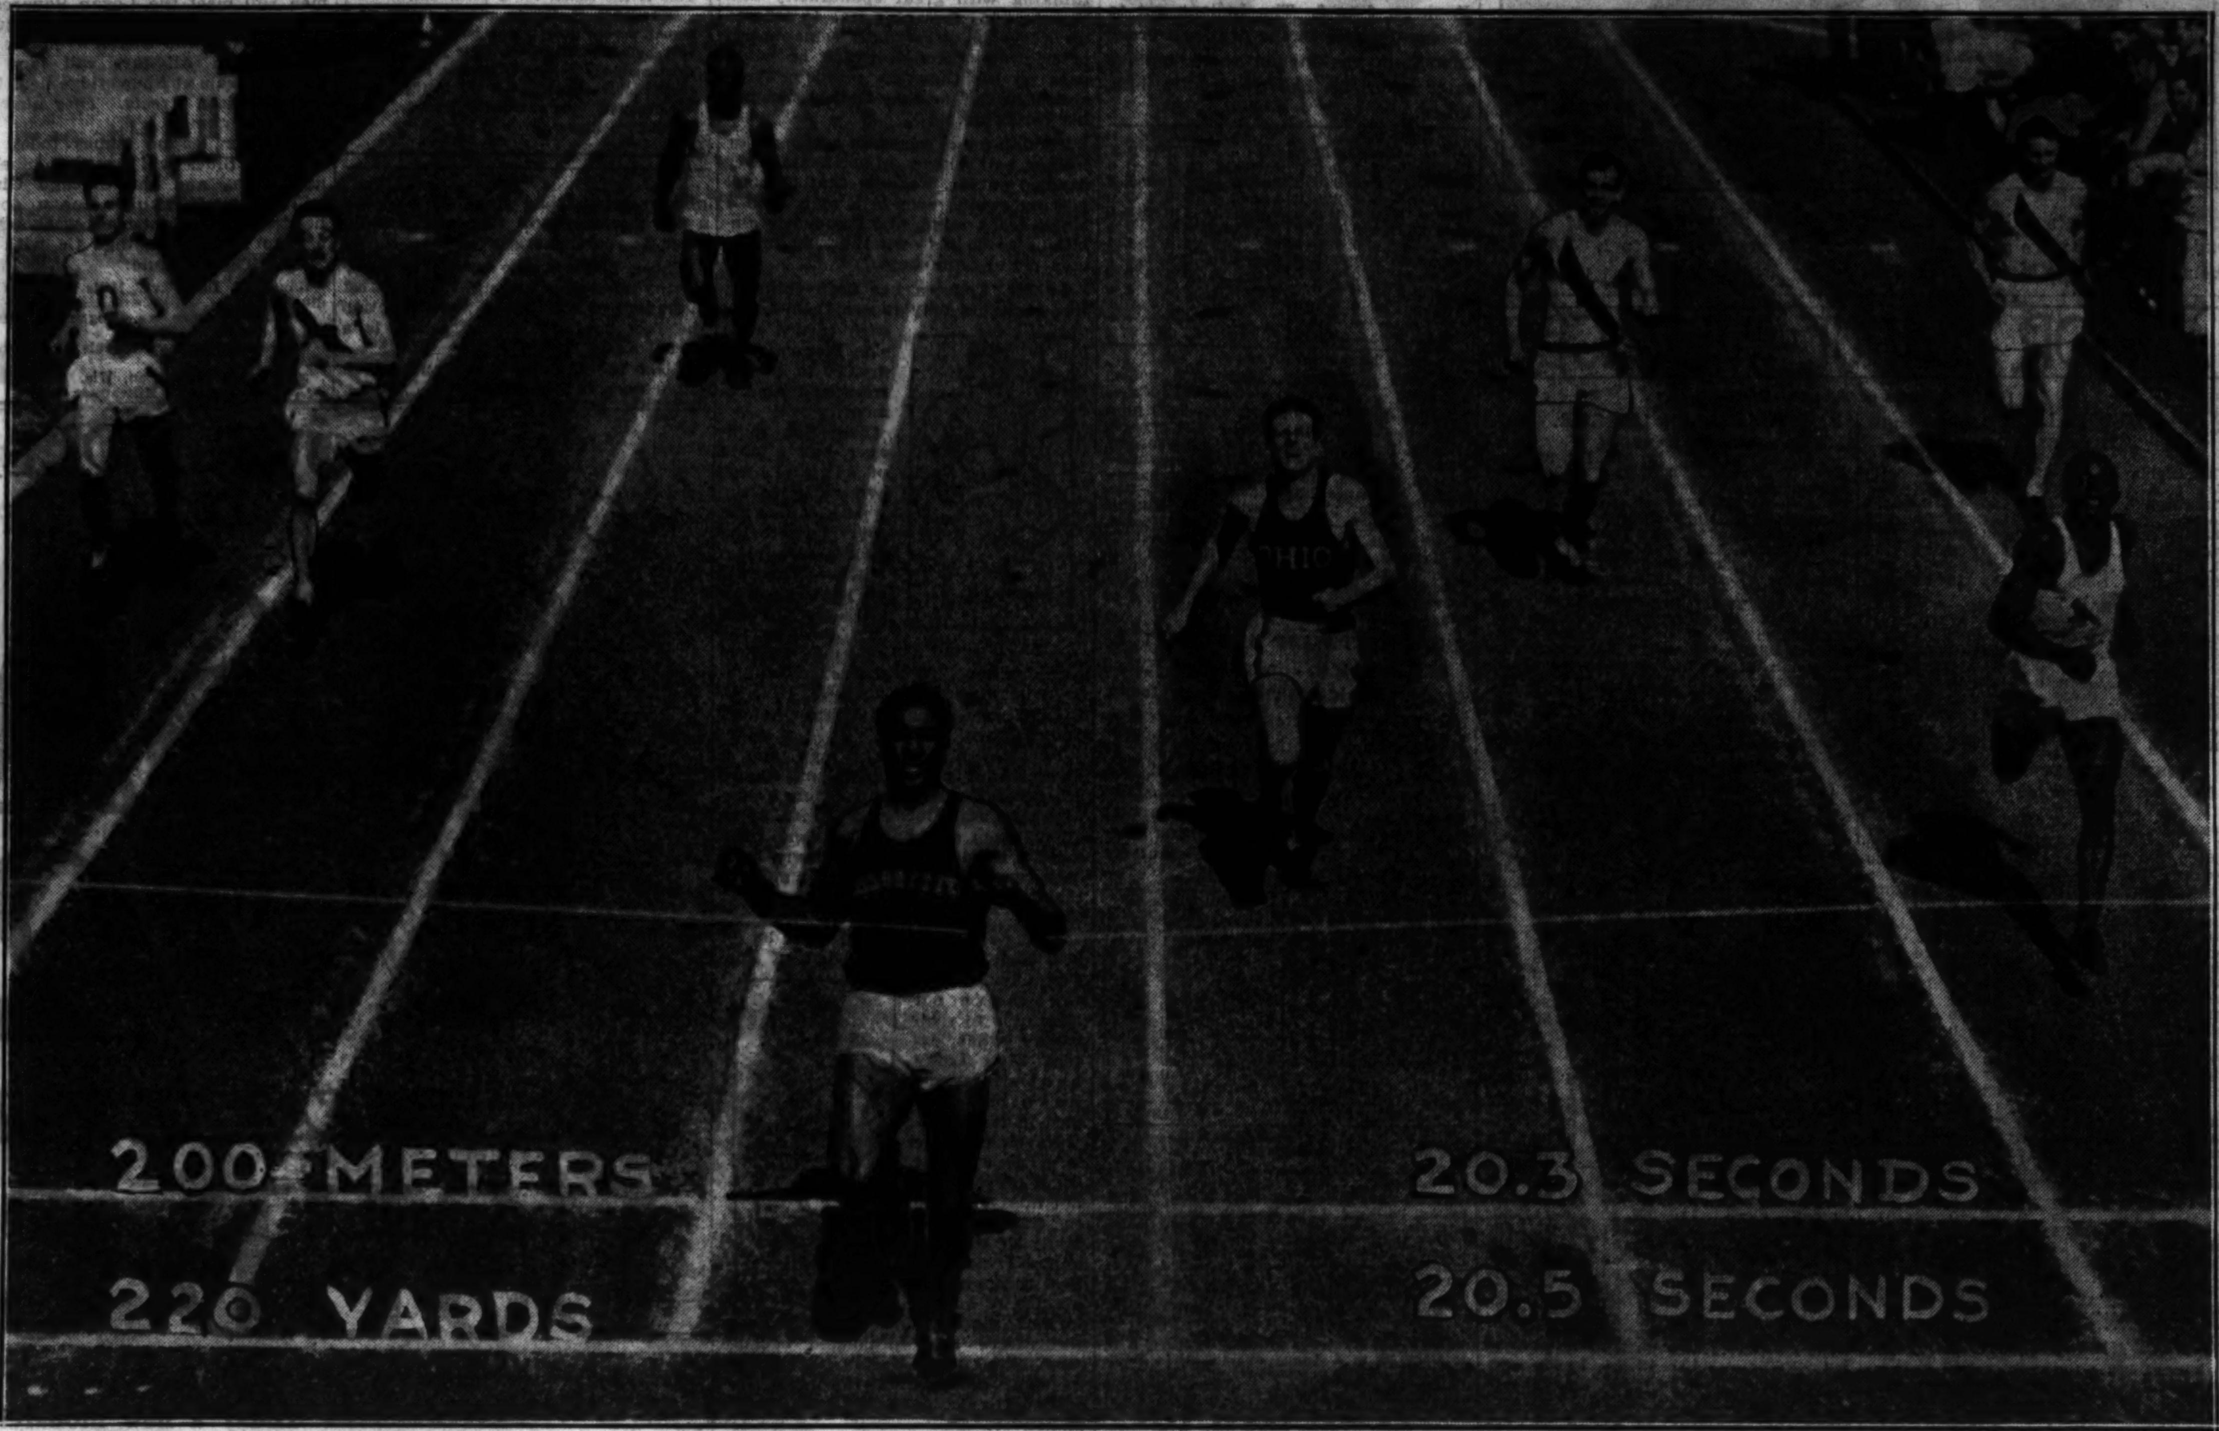
WHEN RECORD TIME SEEMED LIKE WALKING



Fastest in history. Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette breaks the tape in national college meet at Stagg field yesterday and the timers' clocks for the 220 yards stop at 20.5 seconds, one-tenth of a second faster than the world's record set by Roland Locke of Nebraska in 1926. The white line, which Metcalfe already has crossed, is for the 200 meters and his time also was a world record—20.3 seconds, for this distance. James Johnson, Illinois Normal was second and Don Bennett, Ohio State, third.

Five world's records were broken and one was tied in the finals of the National Collegiate track and field meet yesterday at Stagg field. In addition one American record, one American collegiate mark, and six meet records were established in the list of super performances by the athletes, who also were competing for the right to enter the American Olympic finals at Stanford university next month.

Spectacular as was the meet, the competition for the title reached a climax almost without parallel. Indiana university, by virtue of Bryce Beecher's leap of 13 feet 10 inches in the pole vault, the last event of the afternoon, nosed out Ohio State. Beecher's victory raised Indiana's total to 56 points. Ohio State finished with 49¾ points, when John Wonsowitz, its star vaulter, who had won the Big Ten title, tied with five others for second place.

Jinx Pursues Ohio.

For the second time this year misfortune cost Ohio State a major track title. The Buckeyes failed in the conference championship meet when Jack Keller pulled a muscle and could not finish the low hurdle race. Yesterday Wonsowitz's defeat was the turning point.

And then, as an indication of his true ability, Wonsowitz cleared 13 feet 10 inches in the jumpoff to determine who should win the qualifying berth in the American Olympic finals.

But consider Beecher. His jump yesterday was the best he has done in competition and, like his indoor championship last winter (in which Wonsowitz did not compete), it was the deciding factor in Indiana's successful title bid.

Records Go Boom.

The wholesale crashing of track records was carried on by Ralph Metcalfe, George Saling, and Jack Keller.

Metcalfe, one time Tilden Tech star, now a sophomore at Marquette university, forced his way to the front as America's best in the coming Olympiad.

Twice he came racing down the cinders running the American distances of 100 and 220 yards and continued on for records in the 100 meter and 200 meter dashes, the Olympic measurements. Three times Metcalfe broke world records. Over the fourth distance he equaled the accepted world record for the 100 yards.

In his races yesterday Ralph won from Don Bennett, the conference sprint champion, and from Jimmy Johnson of Illinois State Normal. Here is what he did:

100 YARD DASH—Time, 9.5 seconds, equaling Tolan's accepted world's record.

220 YARD DASH—Time, 20.5 seconds, beating Locke's world mark and George Simpson's national collegiate record.

100 METER DASH—Time, 10.2 seconds, smashing the world record established by Charley Paddock in 1921, which was equaled by Eddie Tolan in 1929.

200 METER DASH—Time, 20.3 seconds, clipping three-tenths of a second from Roland Locke's six year old world record.

Metcalfe's sprinting was the best

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Smead Jolley, Benny Tate, and Johnny Watwood, members of the Boston chapter of the Comiskey Alumni association, yesterday took a hand in plastering dear old alma mater. The score of the Red Sox opener against the White Sox was Boston 4, Chicago 1, and the alumni had a big part in the production of three of the four runs.

Defensively, most of the glory went to Ivy Paul Andrews, a recent alumnus of the Yankees, who held the White Sox to four hits. This terrific onslaught by the Chicagoans brought their total hits for two days to a staggering seven.

Gaston Returns and Departs.

Milt Gaston resumed his baseball activities when he started the game after a ten day suspension for being too aggressive in helping Firpo Moriarty to his feet after the umpire fell down under the Cleveland grandstand on May 30. Two earned runs were made off Milt and his own throwing error figured in the other two. Pete Daglia pitched the last four innings and held the visitors away from the plate. He hasn't been scored on in three appearances at the relief business.

The game was the tenth the Red Sox have won this season in fifty starts and the second straight they have taken from the White Sox, having won the final in Boston a month ago.

Jolley scored the first enemy run in the second inning. The large fellow singled to center with one down. Gaston then came up with Rhyne's slam and threw wide to second, Jolley landing and Rhyne reaching first. Pickering singled to right, Jolley scoring on an elaborate slide and Rhyne stopping at second. Tate flied to Sullivan, but Andrews singled to right, scoring Rhyne.

Hooray! A Run! A Run!

In the fourth Sullivan singled to center for the first hit off Andrews and Kress walked. Selph tapped to Andrews and Sullivan was forced at third on a throw to Pickering. Pickering sought to complete a double play, but Van Camp muffed his throw, Kress scoring and Selph stopping at second. Pickering threw out Hodapp and Seeds.

The day's scoring was concluded in the fifth inning. Tate led off with a double to left and when Andrews bunted neither Gaston nor Hayes went after it and it died of its own lack of momentum, a single for Andrews which put Tate on third. Tate held third and Andrews reached second while Hayes was throwing out Van Camp. Watwood scored the pair on a double to left, went to third while McManus was being retired, but died on Webb's long fly.

Boy, This Looks Good.

In the Chicago end of the fifth Berry was credited with the second hit off Andrews when his bunt hit a lump of dirt and rolled fair before Andrews or Tate could pick it up in foul territory. Rothrock flied to Watwood, but Blue walked. Fothergill flied to Watwood and Sullivan walked, filling the bases. Then Kress flied to Watwood. That was the big Chicago threat of the afternoon.

The White Sox still are in seventh place, seven games ahead of their conquerors.

Navy Jayvee Crew Beats Varsity at Poughkeepsie

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 11.—(AP)—The navy varsity and junior varsity crews were sent over the regatta course under excellent weather conditions today, the Jayvees winning by a length after the varsity weakened near the three mile mark. Syracuse went up river, almost to Hyde Park, and returned at a smart pace for the entire distance of the course.

White Sox Sell Al Thomas to Washington

Tommy Thomas, for six years a member of the White Sox, was sold to the Washington Senators yesterday for an unannounced cash consideration. Thomas, a right handed pitcher, will report to Washington at St. Louis today.

Thomas came to the Sox from Baltimore in 1926 after he had won 32 games and lost 12 for the Orioles in 1925.

In his first year on the south side he won 15 games and lost 12, and the next year he won 19 and lost 16. In 1928 he won 17 and lost 16, then he began to lose, winning only 29 games against 45 defeats in the next three seasons. His six year record in the big leagues is 80 victories against 89 defeats. His best earned run average was in 1927 when he allowed only 2.97 runs per game and participated in 40 games.

During the early years with the Sox he was known as a hard luck pitcher, losing numerous games by one run after pitching four and five hit ball. Of late, and particularly this season, he has been fairly successful in early innings, but generally faded against all types of opposition. After a miserable season last year, he surprised fans by pitching almost perfect baseball to beat the Cubs in the city series.

GERMANS SURE TO WALLOP CHICAGO BOXERS—SCHMELING; O, YEAH?

Fatherland's Amateur Fighters World's Best, Says Champ.

Kingston, N. Y., June 11.—The German amateur boxing team, which fights the Golden Gloves champions of Chicagoland at Soldiers' field July 26, has an excellent opportunity to bring home the bacon, according to Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion.

"I think the young men from Germany some day will be the greatest fighters in the world," said Max to a CHICAGO TRIBUNE correspondent as he sat on the porch of his cottage where he is training for his title fight with Jack Sharkey on June 21.

"The Germans are taking the place in boxing that used to be held by the Irish a few decades ago," he remarked. "The reason for this is that thousands of boys are being taught boxing in the schools of Germany. Every town has its boxing club. There are many Max Schmeling clubs scattered throughout the country since I became heavyweight champion.

Says They'll Shellack Americans.

"Boxing has taken a remarkable hold on the fatherland. Fifteen years ago few German boys could name the world's champion. Now they all have taken to boxing and many of them, no doubt, have an idea they some day will hold the title I now own.

"I saw the Chicago Golden Gloves boys whip the champions of France at Soldiers' field last year, so I know pretty well the kind of a team that will represent the United States against my native country. I also know the caliber of amateur fighters in Germany.

"Based on my personal observations, I predict that the German team will give Chicago a real shellacking. You see, of the 5,000 boxers who competed for a place on the German team, only eight will be sent to America. They ought to be good. You can't have 5,000 boys engaged in any competition without coming up with a strong team. I am sure Germany would not send a man who didn't have a chance to win.

What? Better than Rodak?

"Ausboeck of Munich, the German flyweight champion, is almost sure to whip any boy Chicago can send against him. I think he is a better man than your Leo Rodak, who whipped the 112 pound champion of France last year. Spannagel of Berlin, bantamweight, is another who ought to score for Germany, if he makes the team. There is another bantamweight, Ziglarski of Berlin, who is about as good.

"There is a heavyweight on the team named Rameto, whom they call the German Carnera. Your Adam Smith will have to stretch to his full height to hit this boy above the belt.

"After I win from Sharkey, perhaps I shall go on another tour. I shall arrange my dates so I will be in Chicago on July 26. Then I shall be able to see the international bouts. I'll have my money on the Germans to win most of the championships.

Germans Best, Says Max.

"The American amateur is better than the average French or Italian amateur, but not as good as the average German. My people go in for boxing in a more determined, methodical manner.

"Boxing has improved so fast all over the world I think from now on we will have better champions than ever. People no longer will be comparing the present day champions with the old timers. There won't be any comparison."

Sharkey Battles Four Sparmates and Heavy Cold

Orangeburg, N. Y., June 11.—[Special.]—A heavy cold, contracted over night, slowed Jack Sharkey up a bit in his five round workout with four sparring partners here this afternoon. The challenger tried hard to put on a satisfactory performance for some 500 fans, the largest crowd in attendance at his daily workouts to date. His work was below standard at the start, but as he went along he began to improve.

SCHMELING POUNDS MATES.

Kingston, N. Y., June 11.—[Special.]—Max Schmeling finished six rounds of fast fighting with three husky sparring mates this afternoon in fine condition. So far the champion has not had as much as a scratch in all the boxing he has indulged in with the huskies who have opposed him in training for his fight with Sharkey. Lou Barba, Chester Matan and Eddie (Gunboat) Williams were the men who boxed with Max today, and all of them were sent in with instructions to put everything they had into their punches. They followed orders, and took a severe lacing for their pains.

It's Projectile by a Length in Curran Stakes

Our western 2 year olds were handed a good solid trouncing in the Curran Memorial stakes at Washington Park yesterday before a crowd of about 18,000. And the colt which made them take it and like it was Projectile, owned by Walter J. Salmon of New York. The son of Swift and Sure won by a length from Edward R. Bradley's Broad Bill, with In High, the winner of the Bashford Manor stakes in Kentucky, third.

Little Mr. Red Whisk, the golden flyer from old Kentucky, after beating every horse he met earlier in the season, finished fifth, conquered with no excuses to offer except that he started from an extreme outside post position.

Mr. Farley's Dope O. K.

There were three great heroes of the race—Projectile, which had to run so fast to win; Jockey Charley Allen, who picked a safe and careful path for him and drive him with heel and leather all down the stretch, and old Jim Farley, the noted clocker.

It was old Jim who turned his magic binoculars on Projectile in the dark of the night a few days ago and watched the colt reel off five furlongs in less than a minute. That was track record time. Right away old Jim passed out the word that this easterner would smother our western bidders for 2 year old championship honors.

Well, the running of the race proves pretty well that he knew what he was talking about.

Projectile Pays $8.20.

Red Whisk never got into contention, but In High was a hard fellow to conquer. He ran straight and true all the way and after conquering the fleet Liqueur on the turn into the stretch flew into the lead for an instant. Then along came Projectile to snatch it away from him and in the last strides Bradley's Broad Bill, which is a son of North Star III-Fancy Me, came with an electric rush and beat In High by a nose for second money. Finishing fourth, just a length back of the three leaders, was Metaurus, from the Audley farm stable, which had a rough journey all the way.

Projectile ran the 5½ furlongs in 1:06 2-5, which wasn't particularly fast time, so the westerners had no excuses to offer. In the betting Projectile paid $8.20 to win, $5.60 to place, and $5.16 to show. Broad Bill was grouped in the field and paid $13.69 to place and $6.64 to show. In High's show price was $6.28.

There was a bit of sadness in the race for Tommy Woodcock, trainer of

Burgoo King Breaks Down; Out of Derby

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Burgoo King, the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, will not race again this year.

He was scheduled to leave New York today for Washington park to run in the American Derby. Shipping arrangements were cancelled late this afternoon and from Trainer Dick Thompson came the word that he had bowed in one leg and had practically broken down.

The injury came while he was drilling at Belmont for the American Derby.

Three veterinarians will examine the Bradley colt tomorrow and it will be determined then the full extent of his injuries. But he is definitely out of the American Derby, it was announced by Owner Bradley.

Even while he was racing to spectacular victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness his most ardent admirers showed a concern over his weak underpinning.

PHILS AND REDS DIVIDE.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 11.—(AP)—Cincinnati divided a double bill with the Phillies today, the Reds losing the first game, 6 to 3, and winning the second, 4 to 3. Steady pitching by Jim Elliott, coupled with heavy hitting by his team mates, including home runs by Klein and Hurst, gave the Phils their victory. Klein's homer was his 15th of the season.

Sox Pick Frasier to Even Series with Boston Today

The White Sox and the Red Sox, the two losingest teams in the major leagues, today will vie again. A nice thing about the contest for one of the contenders is that if weather or darkness does not interfere they can't both lose again.

Henry Johnson, who came to the Red Sox with Andrews, may get the pitching assignment today. Vic Frasier, the try, try again fellow, will work for the Chicago Sox.

The hit with which Smead Jolley started the Red Sox rally in the second was his sixth in a row off White Sox pitching. He made five for five in the final in Boston a month ago.

Both of the alumni doubles in the fifth—by Benny Tate and Johnny Watwood—were along the left foul line and each passed third about five feet fair.

Another alumni item is found in the fact that in the fifth, when the White Sox had the bases full, all three putouts were accomplished by Johnny Watwood.

When the White Sox revamped the outfield in the sixth they had outfielders instead of infielders playing the outfield for the first time in several weeks.

Tate, Watwood and Jolley, the three ex-Sox who appeared in the Boston lineup, collected five hits, one more than the total output of the 14 players who represented Chicago.

Ruth's 18th Home Run Fails to Stop Ferrell.

Cleveland, O., June 11.—(AP)—Babe Ruth's eighteenth home run of the season, coming with Combs on base in the first inning, proved only a temporary annoyance to Wesley Ferrell today and the big right hander went on to pitch a six hit game while the Indians rallied to defeat the New York Yankees, 6 to 3. The Indians got to George Pipgras in the fifth and drove him from the mound three innings later after he had yielded 12 hits. Score:

St. Louis, Mo., June 11.—(AP)—Lloyd Brown was hit thirteen times today, but the Washington Senators converted fifteen safeties to a dozen runs to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 4. Bettencourt and Campbell knocked out homers in the ninth for a spectacular but futile ending for the Browns after Manush had made a circuit clout for the Senators. Score:

A'S BEAT TIGERS, 7-3.

Detroit, Mich., June 11.—(AP)—Tommy Bridges' wildness in the opening inning cost the Detroit Tigers their place in the first division of the American league today as they dropped a series opener to Philadelphia, 7 to 3.

In the opening inning the Athletics scored five runs on one hit. Bridges issued passes to load the bases and then walked a fourth man to force in a run. McNair's homer with the bases loaded brought in the other four.

Sox Can't Learn Signals; Why Not Adopt Huddle?

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Lew Fonseca, who has been spending most of his waking hours evolving stratagems designed to confuse and defeat other teams in the American league, is on the verge of giving up the idea that thinking by a manager is worth the wear and tear.

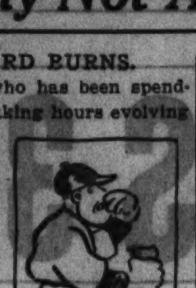

DIAGRAM A.

It appears that Lew can think as well as the best of them, but has had great trouble in transferring or relaying his thoughts to his young hopefuls on the White Sox team.

Mr. Fonseca likes to do his best thinking with great spontaneity and therefore his first plan was to scheme up a system of signals, semaphores, or wigwags through which he could pass on his thoughts to his players almost as fast as they flashed through his cerebrum.

Though many years an active major league ball player himself, it never dawned on Mr. Fonseca that the ball playing genius ever is a man with a single track mind, and frequently ambitious to do his own thinking in his own picturesque way.

So Mr. Fonseca has been thinking fine thoughts only to see them forthwith turned hind side foremost, greatly to his distress and amazement.

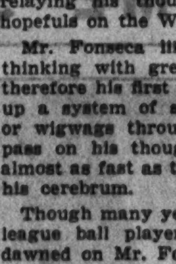

DIAGRAM B.

The Sox manager has a code of signals for every day of the week, offset according to the team he's playing, and each set of wigwags has an alternate set, just to keep the enemy from catching on. Then there are auxiliary semaphores and codes A, B, C, D, E, X, Y, and Z for use by the pitchers and catchers.

Fonseca, a scholarly man and a magician of no mean talent, knows all these signals and his coaches, Cunningham and Butler, claim to know all of them and have, perhaps, mastered a third of them, but there have been repeated indications that most of the Sox players do not know any of them.

This naturally has led to a lot of confusion and some criticism of Fonseca by persons who have not been able to realize to what extent Boss Lew's best stratagems have been garbled in transit.

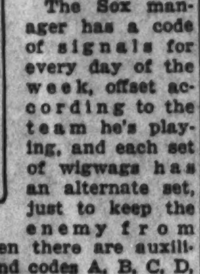

DIAGRAM C.

Never a game is played that some player does not miss from one to fifty signals. Many of the Sox games have been lost through the muffing of an important signal, while several contests have been prolonged because some base runner was in the dark as to what the rest of the team was seeking to do in the way of a slick maneuver.

Among the things that have happened due to crossed wires have been an attempted double steal with men on third and first and none out, a signaled double steal with men on second and first and the man on first holding first while the man on second stole third, the base to which the play was bound to be made, and many others of similar character, including an instance in a game which ended 2 to 1 against the Sox.

With the score 1 to 0 against the Sox the first man up in an early inning doubled and reached third when the next batsman beat out a bunt. Three wide balls were thrown to the next batter and, doubtless the signal was given to the batsman, a notoriously weak hitter, to take two strikes if necessary, before swinging. The hitter missed the signal, took a swing at the fourth pitch and his grounder caught the man on third completely off guard, with the result that he was thrown out at the plate. The inning petered out in the panic over the collapse of the semaphore system and an elegant chance to wreck the game instead heartened the opposition.

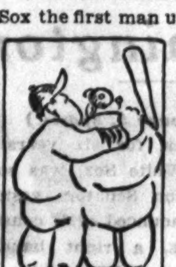

DIAGRAM D.

John McGraw recently gave up after 30 years of trying to make ball players understand signals. And it's a bet that Fonseca, too, will give up after 29 years, more or less.

Those players who praise Joe McCarthy as being among the greatest managers of all time always mention the fact that Joe's best signal is a verbal one:

"Get the hell up there and knock out a base hit!"

EXPLANATION OF DIAGRAMS.

DIAGRAM A—This illustrates a multipurpose signal. If the manager or coach off third base takes fincut tobacco out of the pouch and taps a staccato with his right foot that means one thing; if he takes a chew of scrap and taps his left foot that means something else; if he bites off a chew of plug—well, it just goes on and on like that!

DIAGRAM B—Here's a dandy that always confuses the enemy. If the manager or coach jumps into the air the man at bat is supposed to look at the manager or coach's shoes. If the manager or coach has his left shoe on his right foot and vice versa, then the batsman knows instantly that he is to try to bunt on the third strike.

DIAGRAM C—Here's one in which the manager must have a rich baritone voice. One of the players stands in front of the bench with the visor of his cap askew. He breaks into a smile and the manager sings, "Why Do You Smile Mona Lisa?" This is the signal for a pitch out.

DIAGRAM D—Here's an old fashioned signal, rarely used in the course of present day sly stratagems. It is the picture of a manager telling a slugger to go up to the plate and take his cut in the hope of accomplishing a double, triple, or, mayhap, a homer.

MILLS TO PLAY HOUSE OF DAVID 2 GAMES TODAY

Doug McWeeney, former member of the Brooklyn Dodgers, will make his first appearance of the season this afternoon when the Chicago Mills meet the House of David in a double header at Mills stadium, Kilpatrick avenue and Lake street. McWeeney will pitch the first game for the Mills, and Gob Buckeye the second.

The bewhiskered team has met the Mills in double headers twice this season. They devided the first bill, and three weeks ago the Mills captured both games. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock. It will be Ladies' day.

Other members of the Wisconsin-Illinois Semi-pro league will take on league opponents. The Chicago Firemen will meet the Logan Squares in a double header at Logan Square park, Kedzie and Elston avenues, and the Colored All-Stars will face the Duffy Florals at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets. They also will play two games.

In other league games today the Madison Blues will travel to Sheboygan, Wis., and the Chicago Giants will go to Milwaukee for a double header. The Giants last week played a 2 to 2 seven innings tie with the Mills. The schedule:

House of David vs. Mills at Mills stadium [2].
Chicago Firemen vs. Logan Squares at Logan Square park [2].
Colored All-Stars vs. Florals at Shewbridge field [2].
Madison at Sheboygan, Wis.
Chicago Giants at Milwaukee [2].

Gorilla Jones Fouls His Title to Thil in Eleventh Round

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 11.—Marcel Thil won the middleweight championship of the world before 60,000 yawning and disgusted fans tonight when Gorilla Jones was disqualified in the eleventh round for irregular boxing.

Jones was waved and pushed to his corner for the following reasons:

1. He hit his adversary when the referee, Señor Casanova of Spain, calling "Break," stepped between the fighters.

2. He did the same thing again, hitting over and around the unfortunate Spaniard who refereed the fight.

3. He landed three blows successively below the belt, albeit well above the knees.

It appeared that Jones, knowing he was well whipped on points, tried deliberately to get himself disqualified. The crowd booed loud and long when the ex-champion left the ring.

The fight was the worst ever seen in Europe when a championship was at stake. Although Thil won eight out of ten rounds, he was anything but a high class fighter.

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, trans-Atlantic flyer, was among the spectators. She was recognized by the crowd, which shouted and insisted that she mount the ring. Too shy to climb the ropes, she made her bows alongside the ring blushingly.

Thil was not satisfied and wished to continue the fight, but the referee gave no option. Jones declared afterwards, "I didn't mean to foul Thil."

RIDE 'EM! GREAT JOCKEYS HEADED FOR ARLINGTON

McAtee, Fator, Ensor Are Among Stars.

Racing at Arlington Park this season not only will bring together the country's finest horses but also the outstanding jockeys from the east and west, according to Racing Secretary Joseph McLennan, who is back from New York where he talked with leading trainers and riders planning to participate in the sport at Chicago's great north side course.

One of the riders local racing fans will see much of during the 30 day meeting is Linus [Pony] McAtee, who commands the highest retainers of any jockey. First call on McAtee is held by George Odom and second by George D. Widener, but as the Odom horses do little campaigning during July McAtee will be able to do much of the riding for the stable headed by Jamestown and Evening.

Tod Leischman, nephew of Tod Sloan, international riding star of another generation, also is attached to the Widener establishment. McAtee's appearance on Chicago tracks have been few and he is best known to racing fans of this section through his Kentucky Derby victories with Clyde Van Dusen and Whiskery.

Fator, James Here.

Laverne Fator, who in the heyday of the late Sam Hildreth was heralded as the "best horse" in the Rancocas stable, but who is now first string jockey for Edward R. Bradley, will accompany the latter's large stable here as will Eugene James, flashy Louisville youngster who guided Burgoo King in his Kentucky Derby and Preakness triumphs.

The coming to the north side track of the C. V. Whitney, Mrs. J. H. Whitney, and Greentree stables also means that Jockeys Raymond [Sonny] Workman, Alfred Robertson, Lavelle [Buddy] Ensor, and Charles Kurtsinger will be at Arlingtotn.

Coucci, Mills Come West.

Some of the other well known eastern jockeys who will be at Arlington are Mack Garner, who won the first Classic with Blue Larkspur and missed by a nose of winning the Post and Paddock Stakes with Morfair last summer; Buddy Hanford, attached to the stable trained by Preston Burch; Sylvio Coucci, leading rider at Agua Caliente last winter whose contract was recently purchased by the Greentree stable; also Tommy Malley and Hank Mills, the latter under the wing of James Fitzsimmons. Malley rode Faireno to victory in the Belmont a week ago and Mills startled the racing public with his consistent triumphs in Florida during the winter.

That the invading saddle stars will not steal all the glory is the determination of the lads who have been seen in action here day after day for several seasons. The western jockeys are led by the veteran Johnny Maiben, who used to be in the east and knows all about it. Other smart riders with local reputations who will perform at Arlington are Charley Corbett, Charley Allen, Jimmy McCoy, Bobby Jones, Jimmy Smith, Bill Fronk, and Charlie Landolt and the rising apprentice stars, W. Wright, C. King, T. P. Martin, and W. Saunders.

the late Phar Lap, saddled Sun Archer in the stake for Willis Sharpe Kilmer. Woodcock evidently is bringing Sun Archer up to be a distance runner. The son of Sun Briar didn't show much in the early going, but he closed an immense gap running down the stretch. Better look out for Sun Archer when he starts going a longer route.

A sensational victory was scored by Polydorus, owned by Abe Bartelstein, in the South Shore Country club handicap, which was a dash at six furlongs. Old Johnny Maiben was in the pilot house on the winner, and he gave the greatest exhibition of taking the overland route of his long and illustrious career. Maiben took Polydorus to the extreme outside on the lower bend and rode him far out in the middle of the track the rest of the way home.

A sixteenth of a mile out Maiben applied his magic. He made Polydorus run like a wild horse. He pulled up from far back and passed the pacemaker, Supreme Sweet, as if she had been standing still.

Silverdale Can't Stand Pace.

He won on Polydorus by four lengths in the sensational time of 1:10 4-5. The official time hung out was 1:11 2-5, but twenty private clockers caught it in 1:10 4-5, which shaded the track record of 1:11. But, of course, Polydorus and old Maiben will not get credit for a track record. The official timers' mark will stand, or, at least, it always has.

Silverdale ruled as the favorite in the early betting, but near post time there came a plunge on Polydorus which drove his price down until he was an even favorite with Silverdale. The pace was too fast for Silverdale, for the half was run in :45 3-5 seconds. Silverdale tried to keep up but couldn't. So Supreme Sweet got second money and Sundot was third. In the betting Polydorus paid $5.54.

The crowd cheered old Maiben when he came to unsaddle as if he had been a favorite son.

DALRYMPLE GOES HOLLYWOOD; TO APPEAR IN FILM

New Orleans, La., June 11.—(AP)—Jerry Dalrymple, star football end of Tulane university, is going into the movies.

He disclosed today that he has signed a contract with Carl Laemmle Jr. to play in a football picture which will be produced in Hollywood soon.

Dalrymple, captain of the Tulane team last year, led the Southern conference champions to the Pasadena rose bowl for the New Year's day game with Southern California.

WHEN 500,000 FOUGHT FOR GLIMPSE OF GREAT ENGLISH RACE

The finish. April the Fifth, 100-6 shot, owned by Tom Walls, British actor, wins Epsom Derby, England's greatest racing event, on June 1. Dastur was second and Miracle third.

Lay yer bets, gents! Bookmakers at their stands before the Epsom Derby. Sometimes, it's whispered, you can't find Mr. Bookie after race.

Still bunched after a mile. The field in Epsom Derby, with half a mile to go, thunders over the turf to the roars of 500,000 spectators.

Derby day and its carnival atmosphere is unlike that of any other horse race in the world. Here is a row of buses which brought part of the mammoth crowd to the course.

Four Stables Added to List at Arlington

The eastern invaders have sent along the advance guard to Arlington Park's stake-a-day season. Four stables reached the Arlington course yesterday morning, coming from Belmont Park. They included the horses owned by Mrs. John Hertz, Warren Wright, W. R. Coe and Morris Vehon.

Trainer Bill Knapp supervised the unloading of the 22 Hertz horses and the four which will sport the silks of Mr. Wright. Louis Feustal, trainer for the late August Belmont, came in charge of the Vehon representatives. Ben Creech was in charge of the Coe band.

Both the training track and the main course are in excellent condition at Arlington.

The railbirds watched a lot of American Derby candidates speed through their training drills at Washington Park yesterday. Marmion reeled off a mile and an eighth in 1:53 4-5. Osculator speeded five furlongs in about a minute flat. Adobe Post went seven furlongs in 1:27 1-5 and Mad Pursuit was only cantering when he finished six furlongs in 1:19.

Maybe business isn't so bad after all. The sale of box seats and reserved seats for the American Derby is quite a bit ahead of last year's sale, according to William Dennes, who is dealing out the tickets.

The stewards caught Jockey E. Arcaro engaging in some rough stuff while aboard Hot Shot in the first race yesterday and handed him a 10 day suspension.

Horses which Starter Morrisey has barred until they show better manners at the barrier are Back Log, Nora D, Semester, Scimitar, Bob's Luck, The Dago, Wacker Drive, Lady B, and Open Go Shut. Morrisey is a patient guy and schools all the bad actors at the barrier every morning.

Jockey Bill Garner is looking for a job. He quit Dick and Pat Nash's Shandon Farm stable yesterday after a term of 18 months with them. Several large establishments have offered Garner employment.

There were many convention visitors in the crowd yesterday. Most of the delegates from far away California, Florida and Maine were picking the winners. The Illinois Republicans didn't do so well. They heard too many tips.

The word went the rounds that Bronx Park couldn't lose the second race, which was fashioned for 2 year olds. And he didn't, but Jockey Bobby Jones almost broke his good right arm applying the leather long enough to have him up in time to trim Lovely Hills. Bronx Park paid $3.70 and was the shortest priced favorite of the day.

Theft of Home Wins for American Giants, 4 to 3

Malarcher's walk, Radcliffe's sacrifice and a steal of home while the second baseman held the ball gave the American Giants a ninth inning victory over Memphis in the opening game of their series yesterday afternoon, 4 to 3, at the Giants' park. The teams play again today.

Schneider Most Valuable Illinois College Player

Jacksonville, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Edward Schneider of Hopedale, who spent his first two years at Lincoln Junior college, will be awarded the trophy given each June to the baseball player of greatest value to Illinois college.

LOTT DEFEATS GRANT FOR CLAY COURTS TITLE

Memphis, Tenn., June 11.—(AP)—George Lott, Chicago star, won the national clay courts championship here today, defeating Bryan Grant of Atlanta, 3-6, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Grant's backhand shots and lobbing caught Lott off guard in the early part of the match. The lead see-sawed back and forth. Grant, the 1930 champion, took the first set, but lost the second. He trailed, 1-3, and then he won five straight games to take the third set, 6-3.

Lott came to the net more often toward the end and scored repeatedly.

Halcyon Wins by 4 Lengths at Aqueduct

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Halcyon, winner of the Queens county handicap last year, repeated his victory today before 10,000 at the Aqueduct course when he ran in front almost from start to finish of the mile test. At the end, timed in 1:38 over a fast track, he was four lengths to the good over W. R. Coe's Pompelus, which led the Belair stud's Ormesby by two lengths.

It was the fourth victory for the Whitney silks in the stake, as the late Harry Payne Whitney's John J. Gries scored in 1921 and his Macaw won in 1926. Halcyon's name now will be placed on the roster with those of Old Rosebud, Roamer, Grey Lag, Zev, and Mad Hatter, all former winners of this old test, which was inaugurated in 1902.

Winner Is Favorite.

The son of Broomstick and Prudery, now 4 years old, was made the favorite in the betting at 13 to 5. Hank Mills was in the saddle and by the victory began a triple, which he completed with Charon in the fifth and Crimson Rose in the sixth. Apprentice jockeys swept the card, all six events, including the steeplechase, falling to the young riders. John Gilbert won the first with Illusive, the Bayside steeplechase went to Canandaigua, ridden by A. Scott; Silvio Coucci won the Accelerator with Gusto and Mills captured the last three.

Halcyon's victory was scored under 108 pounds, and Mills got his opportunity to ride due to the suspension of Jockey A. Robertson. When the break came, after only three and one-half minutes at the post, Mills almost immediately sent Halcyon to the front. Pompelus was the first to leave the barrier but he was allowed to drop back almost immediately and Halcyon sped along in front.

Ormesby Comes Up Fast.

Ormesby was quick to ride up with the pace and was accompanied by Microphone for the first half mile. Pompelus dropped back to fourth place, his great early speed being conserved for the stretch run. In the dash around the bend Ormesby made a run at the leader which brought him to Halcyon's saddle cloth, but Mills asked for more speed from his mount and beat off the challenge.

That was the last severe threat which the Whitney color bearer sustained. Once safely turned for home and heading down the home stretch, he was kept under a hand ride by Mills and never was fully let down.

In the Wake of the News

GOLDEN GLOVES BOUTS.

WHAT very probably will prove the greatest international amateur boxing bouts ever held will take place at Soldiers' field July 26. On that occasion a picked team from Germany will meet Chicagoland mitt swingers in contests where the will to win will coördinate with sportsmanship. In fact, the will to win no doubt will be stronger than mere sportsmanship itself, but we've become so accustomed to and so imbued with sportsmanship in these amateur affairs that it is accepted without question as something inherent.

German boxers, according to our best information from abroad, are coming here with no underdog complex. They expect to win. Max Schmeling is world heavyweight champion, is he not? He's the first foreign fighter to enjoy that honor. Whatever loss of personal popularity he may incur here by his return to the fatherland after his yearly title battles, there is no question Schmeling has proved a stimulus to German amateur boxing. These German boys coming to Chicago all have dreams of becoming Schmelings in their respective classes.

So coaches and trainers of the Chicagoland squad view the task of preparing our defenders as an entirely different task from that of a year ago when a French team came to Chicago for the first international tourney. Then some of us really were concerned lest the bouts be too one sided because we feared the French—perhaps remembering Georges Carpentier, skillful but fragile—might be soundly defeated. Those French chaps lost 5 bouts to 3, but they gave a great exhibition, enjoyed by the largest crowd which viewed any fistic issue in 1931.

We have no such misgivings about these Germans. They may not wear steel helmets but they are said to have steel arms and steel chins. This respect for their prowess is enhanced by the fact that a German amateur squad defeated a picked Yankee team from New York and Boston, 10 bouts to 6, in Berlin last fall. That gave the Germans added confidence in their prowess.

Conceding that the Germans are a distinct menace, does the Chicagoland contingent view the invasion with alarm? No, not with alarm, but with added determination. So rugged is that determination that The Wake is informed several of our amateurs who had intended to compete in the Olympic bouts at Los Angeles now wish to battle in behalf of Chicagoland against Germany. The issue is all Germany against this section of the country known as Chicagoland. Our representatives do not quail despite advance tales of Teutonic prowess.

Chicagoland's team which met New York in the Golden Gloves intercity tourney will be revamped. Champions will be asked to prove they are still champions. The strongest squad possible will be gathered for the purpose.

Any lover of amateur boxing who fails to attend these Golden Gloves international bouts at Soldiers' field July 26 will miss something, probably the greatest international amateur bouts ever held up to this time. Prices of admission are low, in keeping with the times.

Harvard, with a two goal handicap, overcame Princeton, 11 to 7. Harvard held the lead throughout, but toward the middle of the game saw it cut down by fast Princeton riding and accurate shooting.

WESTERN JUVENILES TAKE ANOTHER BEATING AS W. J. SALMON TWO YEAR OLD RUNS OFF WITH CURRAN MEMORIAL STAKES BEFORE 15,000. Projectile, the second choice in a field of fourteen, wins Washington Park feature by a length, treating Red Whisk and other western 2 year olds to more humiliation. The eastern horse's time wasn't fast for the five and a half furlongs, but there was no doubt of his superiority once the field hit the stretch. Broad Bill is getting second money by a nose from In High. Metaurus also is finishing ahead of Red Whisk, the favorite. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

HELPS INDIANA U. WIN COLLEGIATE MEET. Henry Brocksmith finishes second to Shugert of Miami in two mile run at Stagg field. He also ran second in the one mile. His ten points were a valuable contribution to the Hoosiers' winning total of 56. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

RACE IN WHICH ODDS ON FAVORITE JUST STUCK HIS NOSE IN FRONT. Bronx Park and Lovely Hills are leading the field into the stretch in the second race at Washington Park. Jockey R. Jones, on Bronx Park, had to ride his horse out to win by the narrowest of margins at the end of five-eighths of a mile. It was a head and head battle all the way. Hernando saved third place. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

TRACK RECORDS FALL WHEN THESE SPEEDY FELLOWS GET TOGETHER. Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette, Jack Keller of Ohio State, George Saling of Iowa, and Glenn Cunningham of Kansas. Five world marks, as well as six meet standards, were broken yesterday in the national collegiate championships. This quartet was largely responsible for these super performances. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

UP THE BACK STRETCH AND STILL A LONG WAY TO THE JUDGES' STAND. It's anybody's race at this stage, but if you want a hot tip, take Chicsu. You're right—Chicsu was the winner of the third at Washington Park and a ten to one shot. Ervast, which finished second, is in a contending position, but after taking the lead in the stretch, couldn't withstand Chicsu's fast rush. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

WORLD'S HURDLE AND DASH MARKS FALL ON MIDWAY

Metcalfe, Keller, Saling Star in N. C. A. A. Meet.

seen in a single afternoon since Charley Paddock flashed across the sports horizon back in 1921 by breaking the world's records in both the 100 and 220 yard races.

They'll Count Records.

A perfect track, fast and firm, with accompanying sunshine and warm weather formed the ideal setting for Metcalfe. The slight wind, quartering the track, did not help him, and last night officials said there were no reasons why the records should not be accepted.

While Metcalfe dominated the meet, George Saling of Iowa and Jack Keller of Ohio State were none the less brilliant. Each pushed the other to new all-time performances.

Saling's came first. In the 120 yard high hurdles the Iowan moved mechanically down his chalk lined lane, bobbing at each hurdle and breaking the tape in 14.1 seconds. This time was the fastest ever run under weather condition suitable to acceptance as a world record. And when he finished, Keller, who had beaten Saling for the Big Ten championship, was scarcely a yard behind.

Saling's time supplanted the official world's mark of 14.4 seconds, first set by Earl Thomson of Dartmouth 12 years ago, and which Saling tied at the Drake relays last April. He also bettered the official national A. A. U. record established last summer by Percy Beard of the New York Athletic club.

Then came Keller's bid. Jack sprinted over the 220 yard hurdles in 22.7 seconds, an almost unbelievable speed, and again, as in the high hurdles, the champion won by less than a yard.

Keller's time was three-tenths of a second faster than that of Charley Brookins when the former Iowan hung up the world record eight years ago.

There were other heroes in yesterday's games. The one mile and two mile distances brought forth three men who undoubtedly can hold their own with all comers, Glenn Cunningham of Kansas and Charles Shugert of Miami, and Henry Brocksmith, Big Ten title holder at both distances.

Others Starred, Too.

Cunningham defeated Brocksmith in the mile in 4 minutes 11.1 seconds. Not only was it Cunningham's best performance, but it set an American outdoor record. The national collegiate record, 6½ seconds slower, previously was held by Ray Conger and Rufus Kizer. Cunningham's time was only 7-10 of a second from Paavo Nurmi's accepted world record.

After his gruelling effort in the mile, Brocksmith came back on the track less than an hour later in the two mile. He lost, but his conquerer, Charles Shugert, had to run the eight laps in 9 minutes 16 7-10 seconds, a new N. C. A. A. record.

Hugh Rhea, giant football player from Nebraska, deserves honorable mention. He pushed the 16 pound shot 52 feet 5¾ inches for an N. C. A. A. record, more than a foot better than Rothert's winning throw two years ago and less than two inches short of the official world's figure.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

THE Eastern Intercollegiate Golf league has accidentally hit upon a unique idea which may be helpful to tournament committees until such time as money becomes more plentiful. The association has presented Yale with an imaginary golf cup, an elaborate symbolic nothing, for permanent possession, because the Yale team won the league championship three times.

YALE'S IMAGINARY GOLF CUP.

There was to have been an actual cup, but back when the league began some one forgot to buy one, and after that the boys continued to put it off until finally, when Yale won permanent possession, and some one thought to ask for the cup, there was no cup. So the imaginary cup will be placed in a position of honor, along with the other cups, the gilded statues, and the gold plated footballs in some trophy room and forever pointed out to succeeding generations of Yale as the rarest prize ever taken in athletic competition—the cup that isn't.

How About a Good Old Hypothetical Spree?

Yale golfers might even go so far as to institute a custom of filling the non-existent cup with hypothetical wine and drinking the same with ceremonies. Thus stimulated, the boys might go down town and amuse themselves pulling imaginary fire alarms to watch the figurative engines roll, and get into some old fashioned free-for-all rows, strictly figurative, of course, with a squad of illusory New Haven policemen. Then the boys could carry home some hypothetical police caps to adorn their walls and glory in painless imaginary black eyes, thus avoiding all the usual inconvenience of the old fashioned free-for-all.

At the present time, treasurers of various sorts of tournaments probably would be very glad to substitute the imaginary cup or medal for the actual, substantial kind, which are more expensive. Tex Richard probably was the originator of the idea, because Gene Tunney related in his memoirs that his diamond belt, emblematic of the light heavyweight championship of the United States, which he won in a bout with Battling Levinsky, was of the nonexistent kind. It was regrettable that of all the diamond belts which Richard presented to various champions when the prizefight business was reviving just after the war the only imaginary one was the one he gave, or forgot to give, to Tunney. Tunney would have given the belt a good home, but there were others who received actual belts who lost no time tweezing out the settings and panning the structural work which contained them. The belts were actual, but whether the diamonds were actual I am not prepared to state, there being much that is phoney in pugilism.

A Title Belt, Minus Jewels, Is a Sorry Sight.

Most championship belts eventually find their way into the pawnshops and, such is the sentimental character of the prize fight business, most of them never come out again. There is nobody more passé than an ex-champion prizefighter and no trophy quite as meaningless after a few years as an ex-champion's championship belt, especially without the diamonds. The medallions tarnish, the red, white and blue ribbons fade and crack, and glory vanishes.

There was an old Balkan king living in a Paris boarding house after the loss of his kingdom who had a custom of bestowing figurative decorations, but his system differed slightly from that of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf league. The old king used to summon rich tourists for audiences in his throne room at his boarding house, and when they were leaving he would decorate them with a distinguished order. Sometimes it would be the order of honesty, second class, and sometimes the grand cross of the order of Philip the foolish. But always he decorated the departing rich tourist with some distinguished order.

However, he would explain that owing to the flattened condition of the royal treasury, he would be unable to furnish the actual jeweled insignia, which embarrissed him very much. But he would present the fortunate party with a royal certificate of membership and an order authorizing him to buy the insignia, at his own expense, at a particular jewelry store. Whether the old king was receiving a commission from the jewelry firm for sending in all this business never was ascertained, but that would have been quite ethical in Paris and even if it were not ethical, a king must get along somehow when the royal treasury is flattened.

Ray Watches His Watches Turning Green.

Undoubtedly there are numerous athletes nowadays who wish they might turn in their old cups and medals for their original cash cost to the tournament committees which bestowed them. Joie Ray, the superannuated foot runner, who has recently become a marathon dancer on the eastern wheel, came to the end of his career with a remarkable collection of cups, fobs, medals, badges, and genuine brass watches which he had won in a long career as a star of the indoor track meets, but they were not negotiable at the grocery store and he was tired of looking at them. The Yales, however, will never grow weary of gazing on their non-existent golf cup, which is something in favor of the imaginary kind, because some of the veritable trophies are not objects of great beauty.

At West Point and Annapolis, the successful athlete does not receive a cup, because cups are suggestive of stimulating beverages and contrary to the good of the service, but he does receive a sword to trip over at reviews and parades when he has become a general.

They Keep Big Cups Pretty Well Locked Up.

Most of the great cups, such as the America's cup, the Davis cup, the Walker cup and so forth are held in vaults and are only rarely exposed to the public gaze and therefore might as well be imaginary like the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf cup. The America's cup, the most bashful of all these trophies, goes into competition only at long intervals and even when it is in competition, only a few privileged persons are permitted to gaze upon it. So far as the public is concerned all these famous vessels are no more real than Yale's imaginary golf cup and might just as well be called the America's nothing, the Davis nothing and the Walker nothing.

Senn, leading by 2 3-7 points before the relay event, was aided in victory by Schurz's relay squad, which nosed out Englewood, establishing a new record for the event. Four other records were broken, two by Capt. Fred Pollard of Senn, in the low and high hurdles, one by Schott of Roosevelt in the mile run, and the other by Beckett of Englewood in the 880 yard run.

Senn's juniors clinched the title early in the day, winning their second consecutive city crown with 48 points, while the next two teams, Lane and Tilden, tied for second place with only 13 points each. Evo Domenici of Senn was high point man with three firsts.

Japanese Olympic Boxing Coach Arrives for Games

Los Angeles, Cal., June 11.—(AP)—T. Shimoda, Japanese Olympic boxing coach, and three Japanese sports writers, arrived today on the N. Y. K. liner Shinyo Maru. Shimoda said his nation would enter five classes in the boxing, from the welterweight divison down. The fighters will arrive June 28.

GOSSOON II. WINS SECOND STRAIGHT IN YACHT SERIES

Perfect Day for Mariners of Three Clubs.

Chicago's mariners yesterday were greeted with a northeast wind which made for excellent racing at Belmont harbor, the downtown lake front, and Jackson park.

Gossoon II., the speedy Vail-Fauret R boat which is living up to all advance reports, increased its lead in the third race of the A series in the Chicago Yacht club race off Belmont harbor by winning its second consecutive start easily. Railton and Kimball's Nancy was second and Ned Sheridan's Ariel third.

Gossoon II. allowed Colleen, Ariel, and Jennie to lead it across the starting line and to the first mark, but on the weather leg, she stepped out in front and never was headed. The real feature of the race was in the struggle among Nancy, Ariel, and Samuel Dauchy's Varya for second place.

Continue Winning Streaks.

George Getz Jr.'s eagle boat Acquila, and Mrs. Haven Requa's pup, Ulysses, also continued their winning streaks in the series A races, the former leading all the way around to beat Orn, Altair, and Falcon, while Ulysses had little trouble in winning her third straight in the pup class.

The first race of the Jackson Park Yacht club's annual Bennett cup series was sailed over the regular club course. Two more races will be held, with the winners in the respective classes meeting in September to decide the winner of the trophy, now held by Dr. Francis Yager's Columbia. Columbia won in the sloop class yesterday, defeating Flight, owned by Fran Byrne and Art Nemeth, and John Walker's Chevron.

Flight led throughout, but was giving Columbia an eight minute time allowance, and was able to make up only two minutes of it. Other winners in the various classes included the O'Rourke brothers' Q boat Intruder; the universal schooner Fame, owned by Dunlap and Weston, and Bob Benedict's Bagheera in the cruising division.

Columbia's Big Event Saturday.

Columbia Yacht club sailed its usual club course yesterday, but the sailors from downtown had their eyes on next Saturday, when they will conduct their forty-first annual race to Michigan City. The winners in the different classes and their times were: Sydney Tozer's Pat in the star class, 1:04:30; Carl Norberg's Victory in the cruising division, :56:15; M. C. Norton's Seamanhaka sloop Caprice, 1:05:40, and the Hansen-Lotz universal boat, Swanee, :56:45.

Crowds See Canzoneri in Gym Drills

Tony Canzoneri, lightweight boxing champion, went through several rounds of loosening up exercises yesterday at George Trafton's gymnasium upon his arrival from New York for his ten round nontitle bout with Harry Dublinsky at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, Thursday. He will start boxing for the match today.

Dublinsky is the best opponent Chicago can produce in the lightweight division. Harry defeated Johnny Jadick after Jadick had snatched Canzoneri's junior welterweight title.

Tony Packs 'Em In.

The turnout to watch Canzoneri train proves he is one of boxing's best drawing cards.

Canzoneri's career reads like fiction. Tony came up from the streets of New Orleans, began his amateur boxing at the age of 14, and after turning professional battled his way to two major championships. Sammy Goldman, his manager, once piloted Pete Herman to the bantamweight title and then brought Tony to championship honors. Tony worked as a bootblack in Herman's shoe shining empiroum in New Orleans. It was from Herman, and particularly Herman's title battle with Kid Williams, that Canzoneri got the ambition to become a boxer.

Wins Featherweight Title.

After several seasons of success among the amateurs, when he weighed scarcely more than 100, Tony turned pro. Herman was his first instructor and Goldman always has handled his business affairs. Canzoneri first appeared in Madison Square Garden, against Benny Terris, Sid Terris' younger brother. Winning that fight on points and a rematch by a knockout, Tony found he was in the money.

His parents in the meantime had moved to Brooklyn, and the family was well represented the night Tony won the world's featherweight crown from Benny Bass. That title was lost six months later to André Routis.

Conventions to Emphasize Traffic Needs

BY HAL FOUST.

The political conventions this month in the Chicago Stadium on the west side will emphasize the need for additional traffic facilities westward from the loop. The heavy traffic during the weeks that the delegates are in session won't create an argument for more pavement in that section of the city, but the congestion attending the meetings will be effective in calling the attention of the public and their officials to the inadequacy of the west park boulevards under normal as well as abnormal conditions.

The north and the south sides, with their outer drives free from cross traffic, enjoy motor transportation that is above comparison with travel on the two boulevards to the west, Jackson and Washington. Furthermore, residents of the lake shore have promise of additional improvements in the near future, whereas the hope of the west side lies in the eventual construction of an elevated highway.

Outer Drive to Be Extended.

This year or next the state highway department will coöperate with the Lincoln park board in extending the outer drive farther north. Lincoln and south parks have an outer link bridge under construction and the span will be finished as soon as the market improves for the sale of bonds. Negotiations are under way for a new railroad terminal, so that four more streets can be opened south from the loop.

When these improvements are completed the north side will have twenty-six lanes for free movement of traffic. The south side will have thirty-eight clear lanes. The west side has four lanes of pavement not occupied by parking or street cars. And a count of traffic at the city limits shows more cars enter Chicago from the west than from any other direction.

In the present condition of public finances the construction of an elevated highway will probably have to await better times, notwithstanding the fact that a study by the Chicago Plan commission shows that it is an extravagance not to build the structure. While the speedway, with continuous grade seperation, would be expensive, approximately $22,000,000, the delays and hazards of congestion on the inadequate surface streets are more expensive.

Seek Other Relief.

However, officials believe it will be a few years before the public treasury can stand an expenditure of $22,000,000 on a single project. So the motorists are turning their minds toward less expensive improvements for temporary relief from west side congestion.

The most obvious project for the west side is the extension eastward and westward of the Warren-Washington one-way system that is aiding traffic between Garfield and Union parks. At present the fast traffic from these two streets is crowded onto one pavement east of Union park and west of Garfield park, creating blockades and accidents.

Randolph street is looked upon as a logical eastward extension of the one-way system, reserving Washington for west bound traffic only. Randolph is 100 feet wide for most of the distance from the river to Union park, but it is unsuited for travel because cluttered with produce wagons and trucks. There is plenty of room in the new municipal market for these commission merchants to move from their dilapidated old buildings.

A narrow section of Randolph, between Canal and Des Plaines streets, could be widened at an estimated cost of $1,500,000. The connection between Randolph and Washington at Union park would be at a nominal cost.

One-Way System.

West of Garfield park Maypole and West End avenues have been surveyed as an artery for west bound traffic only, leaving Washington for eastward travel only. Some small street openings would be necessary, the pavement widened in places and some curbs cut back at jogs to flatten curves, but the total cost, according to engineers' estimates, would not exceed $1,400,000. This would include a realignment of drives in Garfield park.

For $3,400,000 an efficient one-way system could be established from the city limits at Austin boulevard to the loop. With some inexpensive resurfacing in Oak Park, Forest Park and River Forest the one-way system could be extended through the suburbs.

The Chicago Motor club advocates that the state highway department undertake this job and pay the entire cost from the gasoline tax revenue. It would connect with the concentration of state highways entering Chicago on the west side, Lake street, North avenue, St. Charles road, Butterfield road, and Roosevelt road.

Another east and west route due for improvement is Augusta boulevard, a wide pavement in good condition between the city limits and Elston avenue with the exception of a jog for a projected grade separation under the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad. Westward it could be connected with the North avenue forty foot highway. Eastward, pending expensive street openings, traffic could be routed over Noble, Erie, Orleans, and Ohio streets to Michigan avenue and the outer drive.

Augusta Boulevard.

Augusta has been designated as a state aid road, subject to improvement by the county highway department with its revenue from the gasoline tax. In its program for 1932 and 1933 construction the county includes new pavement for Erie street, from Orleans street to the river and for Orleans street from Erie street to Austin avenue.

South of the loop there are few east and west streets that could be connected for a satisfactory traffic artery without excessive cost. However, the state has designated Roosevelt road as route 6 to Michigan avenue and route 55 is being carried east on 22d street, making it legal for the state to spend gasoline tax funds on these streets. Since it would be desirable to have these carline streets in condition for automobile traffic during the World's Fair next year, the state might patch, resurface and repave rough sections of the pavement. Parking regulations will also be necessary for the World Fair traffic on these streets.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

FAVORS RURAL ROADS.

Chicago, June 8.—I note with interest your article summarizing Mr. George Barton's statement before the road commission. I feel with you and Mr. Barton, and, I assume, most of the urban automobile owners, that the continued laying of pavements costing in excess of $25,000 per mile is in most cases unjustified. I cannot agree, however, that road funds should be spent in metropolitan areas only.

Unusual care should be exercised at this time in the spending of public money. Productive public works only should be pushed; money spent for "pyramids," while temporarily relieving employment, can never give the taxpayers a return on their investment, however interesting such a structure may be.

The roads of the metropolitan areas are ample for the most part to care for all ordinary traffic. It is the occasional pleasure driver only who taxes them beyond their capacity, and then only on certain days.

Attention to Illinois' practically undeveloped secondary road system on the other hand would pay dividends from the start. We city drivers cannot help but be indirectly benefited by a material aid to our less centrally located fellow citizens.

Nor need these pavements cost $25,000 per mile; figures from our neighbor states where the "stage construction" method of building roads is employed show that roads of 300 to 800 cars per day capacity can be built for as little as $1,500 per mile and maintained at an annual cost of $250 per mile.

Nor are even these costs as low as they may be. Automatic machinery for the mixing and laying of such pavements has been developed by a number of road machinery manufacturers. One such machine recently tested was able to lay a mile per day of complete pavement.

Is it not better at this time to build 25 miles of such highway that will permit crops and our city commodities to move in and out of isolated communities than to build one grade separation which may save twenty-five minutes for a Sunday driver who isn't going anywhere?

GEORGE MARTIN.

PROPOSES TOLL ROAD.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Chicago needs an elevated highway on the west side. The question is how to pay for it. The answer—tolls.

Speaking as a resident of River Forest, I would be glad to pay for the privilege of using such a highway as the time saved would be worth it.

An improvement of this kind would not benefit adjoining property. I therefore feel that it should be paid for by those who use it.

The idea is, of course, not new, but I have not heard it mentioned in regard to the elevated highway. Expensive improvements of this kind carry tolls in other parts of the county—numerous bridges including the Delaware river bridge—also Holland tunnels under the Hudson.

Chicago could not sell bonds for such a venture with interest guaranteed by general or special taxes. It could, though, with income guaranteed by tolls.

I submit this as a means of obtaining a needed improvement without affecting local credit.

GEORGE H. JENKINS JR.

TRUCKS PASS HOMES.

Chicago, June 9.—We, as property owners, who are having a struggle holding onto our only source of revenue, tenants, are beginning to wonder why they allow heavy trucks to traverse the residential streets. I am the owner of a building in the 5800 block of Winthrop avenue, near a fine school, and have lost two wonderful tenants, due to these heavy trucks, which not only jar the building but are a menace to the children of this district.

That is why people live near a school, to safeguard their precious ones, but these heavy double trucks, coal and fruit trucks and even ash trucks and big uncovered meat garbage trucks traverse this street continuously.

Why they do not use Broadway, a business street, is more than we can understand. Why do we have to pay heavy taxes for a residential street, and make a heavy hauling street out of it, and lose our tenants? Why, we ask, also endanger children?

In one hour forty heavy trucks passed this block from Ardmore to Thorndale. Why do we have to suffer for deliveries to cross street merchants? It's bad enough to let these trucks park two deep on side thoroughfares or any place they choose.

A. F. L. SMITH.

ALL NIGHT PARKING.

Chicago, June 8.—Thanks to the editorial efforts of THE TRIBUNE, Mayor Cermak has seen the light of day and has stopped police abuse of those automobile owners no longer able to pay garage rent. Don't let Hoodlum Cockeyed Mulligan lead his garage owners into another police campaign against the all night parkers or there will be thousands of us who will have to give up our cars.

WISCONSIN BEER.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 6.—Your survey of 1932 touring prospects in Wisconsin overlooked one important item. The beer of this state does as much as the lakes, woods, fish and golf to attract thousands of visitors and millions of dollars in tourist trade. Here's foam in your eye.

MODERATE DRINKER.

O, for Shoe Full of Twisted Toes Like Metcalfe's

Milwaukee, Wis., June 11.—(AP)—Those flying feet that carried Ralph Metcalfe to almost unbelievable track glory today have their Achilles points.

So says W. E. Krauhoefer, local shoe expert who fits the Marquette university Negro sprinter with spiked running shoes. Krauthoefer says Metcalfe's feet are all bad; he has bunched up toes. Krauthoefer has said Metcalfe had better get his feet fixed if he wants to become the world's best sprinter.

That was before Metcalfe bettered the world's record for the 220 dash, the 100 meter, the 200 meter, and tied the century dash mark in Chicago today. But Krauthoefer still insists, astounded as he was when he heard today's news, that Metcalfe ought to have his feet fixed.

"If," he said, "he gets his toes straighfened he'll be able to dig in more on the start and get away faster."

"But who," asked Con Jennings, Marquette coach, "is going to catch Metcalfe so we can straighten those toes?"

IT'S SHORT DRIVE TO QUIET BEAUTY OF COUNTRYSIDE

Tribune Car Makes Tour of Exploration.

A green thicket is to the left of the road. The simple pink flowers of the wild rose are in profusion. On the far side of the tangle of thriving brush and vines is a river.

Midstream, the water ripples with its current. Nearer the banks, the surface is still and reflects the "leafy arms outspread" of trees on the far side of the river.

At a bend in the river, there's a pool blanketed with lily pads. Frogs croak from this pool. Their throaty call joins the song of birds in the thicket.

Guess Where It Is.

The tall grass of the roadside is recently cut. There's a fragrance like the new mown hay that brought youthful thoughts to the judge who saw Maude Muller on a summer day. A heavier perfume comes from the field of blooming clover to the right of the road.

There isn't any traffic. And there's a place to park under the shade of a giant maple.

Where is this place? In the remote woods of Minnesota? In the summer resort sections of Maine or Vermont? No. It's in the Chicago metropolitan area, about forty miles from the loop.

Must Get Off Beaten Track.

Within two or three hours' drive of the city are dozens of such beauty spots. They aren't found in the main highways where the billboards litter the landscape and where the traffic is too fast and heavy to permit sightseeing. They're on the gravel byways.

THE TRIBUNE roadster last week, after bumping over the rough and congested Chicago streets, reached the forty foot pavement of Ogden avenue for a sixty mile an hour spin to Naperville, 30 miles from the city. At this village, more than a century old and with a population of 5,118, the main highway was abandoned for Washington street just after crossing the ornamental concrete bridge over the Du Page river.

Washington street leads into a gravel road that bends with the course of the stream. The rapid flowing water looks clean and cold. Grass grows to the water's edge like on the banks of the Lincoln park lagoon. At places, the stream has planted seeds on its edge and shrubs border the river.

The speed of the car is slackened not only because of the occasional rut in the gravel but also to enjoy leisure behind the wheel. The loafing motor is silent and sounds of the outdoors drift into the car, the song of a meadow lark, the distant bark of a dog, the chirp of a cricket and the low moo of a cow. A robin with a worm in its mouth for some hidden family sits on a fence post.

Farmers, with heads heavy like Rodin's Thinker, ride cultivators through fields behind deliberate horses with heavy rumps. The corn is about hand high, with a long way to grow to reach the jingle measurement of "knee high by the Fourth of July."

The green blades rise from the dark soil in rows aligned with mathematical precision. Gazing across the field from the moving car gives the illusion that the planted ground is rotating.

Just Use Tribune Map.

The roadster is zig-zagged southward, bearing slightly to the west to stay close to the Du Page river. There isn't any marked route and there aren't any road signs, but it's easy to find the way about with the aid of the detailed and accurate Chicagoland map published by THE TRIBUNE public service.

Ten miles south of Naperville, two or three miles below the confluence of the east and the west branches of the Du Page river, is the place described at the opening of this story. There are other views in northern Will county just as attractive.

There are farm yards with large and well painted barns reflecting the prosperity of the owners. There are other farms where the paint has faded and where the family automobile in the back yard is an antiquated model. But there are flower gardens, regardless of whether the places are well kept or run down, and the men are employed in cultivating the soil and caring for stock regardless of what profit results from their labors.

New Highway Little Used.

The gravel road led on to the clean pavement of Ill. 59, one of the new highways being built by the state to circumvent Chicago. There aren't enough stains of traffic on the year old pavement as yet to justify the public expenditure.

The pavement, with a gap at an aged and decrepit bridge over the Du Page river, was followed into and through Plainfield. A heron, with legs like stilts, stood as still as a taxidermist's model in a bed of water lilies, and with one eye watched the car cross the bridge.

More gravel was followed on southward in the valley of the Du Page. Fallow fields were yellow with wild mustard. At the confluence of the Isle La Cache creek the road crossed the river on a quaint bridge of rock masonry and rusty iron. The rattle of floor boards frightened a flock of white ducks on the water below.

Passes Forest Preserve.

After passing a Will county forest preserve, with shaded camping places on the river bank, the road reached the pavement of Illinois 69. The speedometer showed 22 miles from Naperville.

There are other gravel roads that could have been followed on south or taken back north. With time limited, THE TRIBUNE roadster was turned east on Illinois 69 and, after passing a modern airport and a well kept golf course, was driven into Joliet. Traffic in Joliet was tangled due to three bridges under reconstruction for the Illinois waterway, but after getting on the forty foot pavement of Joliet road it was little more than an hour's trip for the 39 miles back to Chicago.

U. S. CAPTURES WIGHTMAN CUP FOR SIXTH TIME

Helen Moody Saves It; British Win 3 Matches.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 11.—(AP)—The United States women tennis players completed their triumph over England in the 10th Wightman cup matches today, but only by the narrow margin of four matches to three and after the British team had rallied stubbornly to capture the final three matches.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody saved the situation and clinched the series for the invaders by defeating Dorothy Round of Great Britain in the day's first match by scores of 6-2, 6-3. Her victory, the fourth straight for the United States after yesterday's clean sweep, settled the issue and apparently presaged a rout for the British team, but in the end it turned out to be a lifesaver.

British Win Last Three.

Certain of defeat, but determined to go down fighting, the British stars about faced and swept the remainder of the program, consisting of two singles and a doubles match.

Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall broke the succession of American victories by defeating Helen Jacobs, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1, and Mrs. M. R. King promptly made it a pair by subduing Mrs. Lawrence Harper, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1.

The concluding doubles match saw Betty Nuthall team with Mrs. Whittingstall to defeat Mrs. Moody and Sarah Palfrey, 6-3, 1-6, 10-8.

First Wimbledon Victory Since 1926.

Thus Mrs. Moody's brilliant play enabled the United States to win its first Wightman cup victory at Wimbledon since 1926 and to take a lead of six team triumphs to four in the decade of competition. The American champion forced Miss Round to play a baseline game nearly all the way in the decisive match and was too steady for the English girl. When Miss Round did attempt to rush the net she was passed prettily.

U. S. SWEEPS CUP PLAY

Forest Hills, L. I., June 11.—[Special.]—With victory already certain in the first three matches, the United States Davis cup team defeated Brazil in the remaining two contests of the American interzone final at the West Side Tennis club, Forest Hills, today to complete its campaign on this side of the Atlantic with a perfect record.

Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn of East Orange, who sewed up the series yesterday in winning the doubles, turned in the final two victories by defeating, respectively, Ricardo Pernambuco and Ivo Simone in singles. Both matches were processions for the Americans, though not for any want of effort on the part of their opponents.

Allison gave a masterful exhibition of the drop shot and lob in defeating Pernambuco, 6-1, 6-2, 6-10. Van Ryn beat Simone, 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

ITALIANS, SWISS SPLIT.

MONTREUX, Switzerland, June 11.—(AP)—Italy and Switzerland broke even in their first two Davis cup matches today. H. C. Fisher, Swiss tennis ace, won the opening match from Palmieri, 6-8, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3, but George de Stefani put the Italians back in the running, defeating C. F. Aeschliman, in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5, 8-6.

ENGLAND WHIPS POLAND.

WARSAW, Poland, June 11.—(AP)—Frederick Perry and Pat Hughes of England teamed today to defeat Josef Hebda and Ignazy Tlozynski of Poland, 6-0, 8-6, 6-0, in the deciding doubles match of the Davis cup series between the two countries.

The English team swept yesterday's two singles matches.

GERMANS LEAD IRISH.

BERLIN, June 11.—(AP)—Germany went into the lead in its Davis cup series with Ireland today when its doubles team, Daniel Prenn and Von Cramm, defeated G. Lyttleton Rogers and E. A. MacGuire, 6-4, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6.

As the teams divided yesterday's two singles matches, Germany can clinch the series by winning one of the remaining singles tilts tomorrow.

CHICAGO RENEWS ITS GOLF RIVALRY WITH DOWNSTATE

Pros, Amateurs Play at Champaign Tomorrow.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The golfing rivalry between Chicago and the rest of the state will be renewed tomorrow with the opening of the second annual Illinois amateur and professional championships at the Champaign Country club, Champaign, Ill. The fight will continue throughout the week. Chicago holds the edge, Warren Dawson of Glen Oak and Abe Espinosa of Medinah having come away champions at the end of the inaugural tournaments at Quincy last year.

The professionals, whose number has been agumented by several star entries this year, will have their innings first, opening play tomorrow afternoon with eighteen holes, and concluding with another eighteen on Tuesday morning. They will then join with the simon pures in an 18 hole pro-amateur event on Tuesday afternoon. The amateurs will begin play with a 27 hole qualifying round on Wednesday, and continue at match play, 18 hole rounds, in five flights—championship, consolation, and three others. The 36 hole final will be played on Saturday.

Entries to Exceed 100.

More than 100 are expected to start in the quest for the two titles, a number which may go higher due to the fact that the Chicago District Golf association, which is conducting the tournaments, has decided to accept tee time starters, although entries originally were to have closed last Monday.

ZABALA BREAKS NATIONAL RECORD IN 15 MILE RUN

Juan Carlos Zabala of Argentina established a new American record for 15 miles in winning a pre-Olympic trial for the marathon at Soldiers' field yesterday. Zabala, who defeated Whitey Michelson of the Melrose A. C., New York City; Paul DeBruyn of Germany, winner of the recent Boston marathon, and other stars, covered the route over the outer drive in 1 hour, 20 minutes, 37.4 seconds.

The old record was 1:23:24.4, and was established by Charles Pores of New York in 1909. The South American failed by 37 seconds to equal the world records set by F. Appleby of Great Britain in London in 1902.

An error in timing probably robbed Zabala of a new world record. The officials, who clocked the run with an automobile speedometer and a stop watch, advised him at the end of the fourteenth mile that his time was 1:11.11, and Zabala, believing he was well ahead of the record, loafed the last mile.

At the finish it was announced that his total elapsed time was 1:16, but the official timer, located at the start and finish line, placed it at 1:20:37 2-5.

Michelson was second in 1:26:49.8, and DeBruyn was third in 1:28.

Cooper, Smith to Play in Golf Exhibition Today

Harry Cooper, Glen Oak Country club professional, and Tommy Meehan, St. Charles pro, will meet Horton Smith, Oak Park, and Don Armstrong, Aurora, in an exhibition match at the St. Charles Country club this afternoon.

TRIES AGAIN

Ira Hall, a pace setter in the Indianapolis 500 mile race until his machine struck a retaining wall, enters 100 mile event to be run at Roby speedway next Sunday.

Star Pilots Renew Feud in Roby Race

Stars of the Memorial day 500 mile race at Indianapolis will compete in the championship 100 mile event at the Chicago-Roby Speedway next Sunday.

Points in the championship standing of the American Automobile association, deciding the title bearer for 1932, are to be awarded. Fred Frame, Indianapolis victor and leader in the standing, will have to finish well up if he is to maintain a commanding grip on the champion's diamond studded medal.

To Qualify on Friday.

Unlike the more recent races in the Chicago area, when race cars and drivers arrived at the trackside an hour or two before a race and took to the starting line with little ceremony, more than twenty entrants must be here Thursday and qualifying trials to decide the twelve fastest cars which will face the starter on Sunday will be held Friday.

Many of the cars and drivers now quartered at the Indianapolis Speedway will begin to arrive tomorrow and Roby will be a scene of activity throughout the week.

Fourteen May Start.

Although the entry blank states that the twelve fastest cars of the field entered will start the 100 mile race, it is within the province of B. Ward Beam, promoter of the race, to permit fourteen cars to start. Many race followers maintain that fourteen cars on a mile track are too much of a hazard for the pilots. Beam had not reached a decision last night whether to send twelve or fourteen cars away.

Oak Brook Polo Teams Clash Today

The Freebooters will oppose this combination with Frank Schaefer and Roy Keehn Jr. at No. 1, Frank Schaefer and John Bowers at No. 2, James Hannah at No. 3, and Barney Balding, captain, at back.

Onwentsia Country club's polo team will meet Fort Sheridan this afternoon at Fort Sheridan, Ill. It will be the opening game of the season for both squads. Three six goal players will appear in the game. They are Maj. C. C. Smith and Capt. C. A. Wilkinson of the army team and Carl Crawford of the Onwentsia squad. The probable lineup:

CUBS TURN BACK BRAVES, 2 TO 1; RETURN TO LEAD

Warneke Allows Only Six Hits in Eighth Win.

permit Moore to dash home after the catch.

Gudat led off in the second with his three bagger, a line drive between left and center. He hugged third while Maranville was tossing out Grimm and Hartnett was popping a foul to Spohrer. Jurges then filled the bill satisfactorily by booming a single over short, Gudat sauntering home. Warneke tried to keep the rally moving by lining to right but Schulmerich flagged it.

There were only four times in the first six innings that the Braves could boast of having a runner on base. One of these was in the first inning when Urbanski singled with one out. He was forced by Leach and Worthington grounded to Herman. The next to reach first was Schulmerich, who singled to open the second, but a double play and a fly ball followed. Betts walked with one out in the third and was doubled trying to steal on Knothe's third strike.

In the fourth Warneke finally was confronted with a trace of trouble, for which he was only partly responsible. Urbanski looked at a third strike to start this session and Leach, the ex-Giant, singled to right. Gudat was a bit too hasty about picking up the ball and it hopped through his hands, permitting Leach to reach third. Worthington tapped to Grimm but Leach preferred not to make a break for the plate. Schulmerich's fly to Moore closed the incident. After this the Braves didn't see base again until the seventh.

Braves Get Their Run.

One Brave was deposed in the seventh before Boston started its only rally of the afternoon. Worthington crashed a double into right center and slipped across the plate on a single to center by Schulmerich. Mr. Arthur Shires, who previously had been too embarrassed for words by bouncing into a double and fanning, scratched a single off Herman's glove and Schulmerich went to third. Maranville grounded to English, whose throw to Hartnett nipped Shulmerich at the plate. Then Randy Moore, batting for Spohrer, rolled to Herman and in the two remaining sesions the Braves fell in order.

Here's Where to Find Those Hungry Bass

BY BOB BECKER.

Mr. Bass Fisherman, here are some suggestions on a few Wisconsin bass lakes for the opening day of the season, June 20. There are so many worthwhile bass lakes in Wisconsin that it would take a book to describe all of them. Therefore the following notes on a few lakes are just samples of what one can find in the state. With but one or two exceptions, we have fished each lake in the following memorandum:

Wisconsin - Michigan boundary. Going west from the town of Land o'Lakes, you find a string of good bass lakes where one ought to have pretty good luck. Using Black Oak, Mamie, or Tenderfoot as your base, you can cover a lot of country on both sides of the boundary line. The stunt is to have both a Michigan and Wisconsin license. Many small bass lakes way back in the woods. One of the best casting lakes that we found up there was Cisco lake. We hooked both small and large mouth bass in the course of one day's fishing.

Butternut - Franklin and Kentuck lakes. We have had some fine sport in the big timber country which surrounds these bass lakes in the northwest corner of Forest county. We drove in from the town of Three Lakes. Beautiful ride through the timber. Just a narrow neck of land separates Butternut and Franklin. Both small and large mouth bass. Early in the season we found the bass in shallow water along the shore, where we got them by casting. Later we had to fish the bars in deep water.

The Sayner group. With the town of Sayner in the center, draw a big circle, and you get a number of good fishing holes within the imaginary line. Little Ballard lake has produced some fine strings. It's northeast of Sayner. Also good pike and muskie country, especially in the lakes south of Sayner.

The Winegar to Boulder Junction area. Using Winegar as our base, we have portaged into all kinds of small bass lakes that are in the woods south and east of that little town. However, it's impossible to travel without wall eyed pike tackle the farther south from Winegar you get, as Wildcat and adjacent lakes have some dandies in them.

Both in the Flambeau country and near Mercer we have taken many a long ride and also hikes to reach small lakes back in the woods. Once near Mercer we were taken to a forgotten bass lake that gave us a world of sport for about an hour. Then the large mouths stopped hitting. It was a clear water lake, hard to fish, and when the bass quit they quit in earnest.

In the Flambeau country the big lakes belong primarily to the pike and muskies, but once back on the winding old tote roads you find a number of small bass lakes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 11.—Guy Bush will swing into action for the Cubs in the second of the series with Boston tomorrow. The Braves may trot out old Tom Zachary on the strength of the showing he made against the Cubs in Chicago recently.

Wallie Berger, the Braves' long distance slugger, is out with a twisted ankle resulting from changing his mind after starting a slide into second base. He tried to play yesterday, but Manager McKechnie didn't like the idea of having a one legged outfielder, so put the youth back on the bench this afternoon.

Bill Jurges, who was punched by Mickey Finn at Brooklyn yesterday, received notice this morning of a $100 fine. President John Heydler probably made the assessment on the grounds that it was a bum fight.

Two of the Cubs' casualties in the four days of warfare at Brooklyn were back in the front line trenches today. Charley Grimm, whose wrist was dislocated when O'Doul slid into him, was able to return to first base and Catcher Hartnett, who was plunked on the left arm by a bean ball, occupied his usual post.

After Warneke had walked Betts in the third inning he ran the count down to 3 and 2 on Knothe and then curved over a called third strike. Thus Warneke kept intact his record of not giving passes to two successive batters in any of the eleven games he has started.

Two plays in particular helped Warneke keep down the Braves' total of hits. In the first inning English made a one handed reach for a low liner by Knothe. In the ninth Jurges scooted over behind second, picked up a grounder with his glove and threw out Worthington.

BUILDING IN SUBURBS SHOWS $400,000 DROP

Hope of a Steady Gain Fades Away.

BY AL CHASE.

Hope of a steady gain in the suburban construction situation, which rose considerably when the April figures showed a substantial gain over the preceding month, fades away in the face of the decline in May figures just made public through the S. W. Straus & Co. building survey.

FRED H. NEMITZ.

Forty-eight suburbs report for May a total of new permits amounting to only $311,083, a drop of more than $400,000 as compared with April, when the total was $715,180. The May figure is nearly as bad as that of March, which was $291,611, and not a great deal better than that of January, $270,837, the lowest in many years.

Percentages of comparison emphasize the extent of the decline, for the May figures show a loss of 56½ per cent as compared with April and a loss of 82.6 per cent as compared with May, 1931. Putting the latter comparison in another way, building in May, 1932, was only 17.4 per cent of what it was in May, 1931.

Two Show Gains.

Only two communities in the entire suburban region show gains based on a volume worth talking about. These are Oak Park and Elgin with an increase in Oak Park of 85 per cent over April, the permits issued in May amounting to $48,425; and in Elgin an increase of 46 per cent and permits amounting to $37,065.

In recent months the building commissioners have been requested to report not merely the amounts of their permits but also the names, amount and progress of important building projects about to be undertaken or actually under construction. A picture of the situation is found in the fact that for the month of May only two commissioners give the survey news of importance. One is Richard Davis of East Chicago, who states that the Linde Air Products company took out a permit for $10,000 in alterations for the purpose of increasing the production and efficiency of its plant.

Financing Difficult.

Fred H. Nemitz, building commissioner of Waukegan, says: "Building construction in Waukegan for the month of May was a little disappointing, but from the number of inquiries during the month, mostly from families in moderate circumstances interested in building homes, this city soon should have at least fifteen new homes under construction. The difficulty is in the financing. Most of these families are living in quarters with one and sometimes two other families. When families double up in this way there is likely to be strife and such living soon becomes irksome.

"For this reason families that have accumulated a small surplus and own a lot are seeking homes of their own, not pretentious, of course, but built for service and comfort and moderate in price. A demand of this kind, together with the present reasonable cost of construction and low prices of materials, should make the financial risk a small one. It is my hope that some plan will be devised shortly to take care of such needs. There is no question that as conditions become more normal there will be a shortage of homes in Waukegan."

Mr. Nemitz also states specifically the new building that may be inaugurated in Waukegan within the next month. "Bids have been taken on our new postoffice," he says, "and this should be under construction within thirty days."

Finished goods continued to sell for nearby delivery at irregular prices. Wool goods were quiet. Silks are arousing more interest for fall delivery. Rayon fabrics were quiet. Burlaps were dull.

EARLY ADVANCE IN WHEAT PRICE FAILS TO HOLD

Close Nearly a Cent Below Top for the Day.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The market made a poor response yesterday to the strength in stocks and also to the pronounced firmness in Liverpool. Shorts covered early and advanced prices around 1c over Friday's finish, with the July touching 52¼c on the bulge.

There was considerable wheat for sale at that figure by commission houses and the failure of outside buying to develop discouraged the local bulls. Later there was increased pressure, part of which came from commission houses believed to be acting for either the coöperatives or western traders.

The market weakened with some of the early buyers turning to the selling side on the way down and prices dropped over 1c from the high and to below the previous finish.

Resting orders to buy and profit taking on weekly bids checked the decline around 51c for the July and the finish was unchanged to ⅛c higher with old July, 51¼@51¼c; old September, 53⅝c, and December, 56½@56⅝c.

Sentiment Less Bearish.

Sentiment among wheat traders was somewhat less bearish yesterday than for some time past, but considerable caution was shown in taking the buying side, except for a quick turn.

While the shortage in winter wheat is admitted, the outlook for the spring crop in the American and Canadian northwest is distinctly favorable, and there is a disposition now to keep a close eye on conditions in the northwest. Additional moisture was received in parts of the prairie provinces over night, although not shown on the weather map. Kansas City July gained around ⅛c on Chicago yesterday, while Minneapolis lost ground, the changes being regarded as a reflection of crop conditions in the various parts of the country.

A period of dry and warm weather would now be beneficial for the new winter wheat crop in the southwest, according to reports received from that section. Harvesting is progressing except where delayed by recent rains. The latter have caused no concern and prospects of a wet harvest have scarcely been mentioned as a market factor so far.

Foreign crop comments continue decidedly mixed. Broomhall cabled indications were for a French wheat yield well in excess of domestic requirements, which were placed at 300,000,000 to 320,000,000 bu. Farmers have made a proposal that the government accumulate a stock of 72,000,000 bu.

Crop News Not a Factor.

Action of the wheat market of late has thoroughly convinced a number of operators that crop news is not a market factor of consequence. It was pointed out that there have been three successive extremely bullish government reports on winter wheat so far this season. At the close yesterday the July delivery was around 7c per bu under the price which prevailed on April 8, or the day the official returns were given out showing a prospective yield of 458,000,000 bu. The crop has been reduced 47,000,000 bu since that time to the smallest total with two exceptions since 1907, and 378,000,000 bu less than last year.

A fair export demand prevailed for Manitoba cash wheat with sales estimated at 400,000 to 500,000 bu in all positions. A little interest was claimed in hard winter. Liverpool reported a scarcity of sellers and closed 1@1½c higher with July at 53⅝c. Winnipeg showed a firm undertone and was ⅜@½c higher at the close with July at 56⅛ in Canadian funds.

Corn Has Narrow Range.

Corn held within a range of ⅛@⅜c, firming early with wheat and on local buying, but reacted later and closed at the bottom with prices unchanged to ⅛c higher. July was 29⅝@29¾c; September, 31⅝s, and December, 32⅜c at the last. There was little in the general run of the news to encourage operations on either side of the market and the bulk of the trade was of a professional character.

Oats developed independent strength and closed ⅛@⅜c higher with July at 20⅛c; September, 20⅝, and December, 22⅛c. Lack of pressure rather than aggressive buying was responsible for the upturn, but the possibility of the actual crop harvested as grain being materially under the official estimate as to the yield is having some effect on sentiment.

Buying against weekly bids prevented any decline of consequence in rye. Final trades were ⅛@⅛c lower with July 31⅛c; September, 34¼c, and December, 37⅜c.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Traders who expected the wheat market to do materially better had only a short inning yesterday. That appeared to be due to the limited outside buying. Traders said the absence of follow-up orders on the advance was quite noticeable; that the market is too narrow to expect bulges to hold any length of time. The failure to sustain prices in the face of the most bullish crop report on winter wheat that the trade has known has been a big disappointment to those who expected a better market.

There was a profit of 2c bu on part of the weekly bids and buying of this character afforded fair support to the market. Bids were favored among buyers after the close, although there was no news on which to base their purchases. Crop news has lost its influence for the time being, as it is assumed by many traders that final returns will show higher crop yields.

The Updike Grain company, who recently was denied clearing house privileges by the Board of Trade directors, finished transferring its open trade yesterday as its suspension became effective with the close of business Saturday.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

A fair foreign demand was reported for Canadian wheats, with sales of 400,000 to 500,000 bu indicated in all positions, including some durums. There were inquiries in the market for American rye, but no sales were claimed.

Chicago handlers did a light domestic shipping business Saturday, with sales of 8,000 bu wheat, 6,000 bu corn, and 30,000 bu oats. Only 6,000 bu corn was reported as having been booked to arrive.

Only one car of cash wheat was reported as having been sold in the local market yesterday. The basis was nominally unchanged, with No. 2 red ½@¾c over, No. 2 hard ¾@1c over, and No. 2 yellow hard and No. 2 mixed ¼@½c over the July. The Kansas City basis was reported as steady.

A firm undertone prevailed in the local cash corn market. Offerings were distinctly limited. No. 2 mixed was ¾@1¼c over and yellow and white 1¼@1½c over July, while No. 3 mixed brought ¼@½c over, yellow ¾@1c over, and white 1@1¼c over the future.

BOND MARKET QUIET, STEADY; U. S. LIST FIRM

Investors Relieved as Congress Wanes.

New York, June 11.—(AP)—A quiet, steady and practically uninteresting bond market closed the week's proceedings today without indicating any definite trend. Outside of the United States government list, which was firm, most corporate loans confined their movements to fractional territory.

Gains up to half a point were recorded by federals, the treasuries being in the greatest demand. This group barely held its own during the week. The buying today was attributed partly to the belief that congress would adjourn next week without passing any legislation that will seriously affect long term government securities.

At the same time investors were inclined to hold to a cautious program. This was especially true regarding the corporate categories. While there were slightly better reports of business in some localities, it was believed that a number of economic problems have yet to be solved before any unusual activity comes into the market.

Railway Bonds Irregular.

Gainers of a point or more among the railways included some issues of Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Northern, Chicago & Alton, Erie, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, and Wabash. Fractional losses among other carrier loans, however, evened up the score.

Improvement was shown by bonds of Armour & Co., Chile Copper, Dodge Bros., Liggett & Myers, Metropolitan Edison, Morris & Co., National Dairy Products, New Jersey Power and Light, North American Edison, Pan-American Petroleum, Rochester Gas, Texas Corporation, and Tobacco Products.

The foreign list was mixed. Hungarian land mortgage 7½s gained from 2½ to 5 points. German issues continued their recovery and the Argentines and British firmed. French bonds again declined moderately. Japanese loans were soft.

Several Small Issues.

Six state and municipal issues, aggregating $7,180,673, comprised the new bond financing this week.

This week's financing ranged in size from the issue of $4,000,000 state of Michigan 5 and 4½ per cent bonds, due 1933 to 1936, to an issue of but $200,000. However, a few new municipal issues awarded this week will not be offered until Monday, among these $410,000 town of Southampton, N. Y., Union free school district No. 6, and $232,983 town of Mamaroneck, N. Y., bonds.

Offerings of bonds in the New York market, by groups, for this and last week, follow:

	This week.	Last week.

NOVEMBER BUTTER EASY

A steady tone prevailed in the butter and egg futures at the close of the week on the Chicago Mercantile exchange, butter showing a net loss of ⅛c for the Saturday session, October eggs dropping back after an early gain, closing unchanged. Mixed statistical reports held the egg market. Receipts were heavier but the four markets stored 4,000 cases less than last year. Butter continued quiet. The storage movement in the four markets was heavier than last year and a slight increase in selling at the close brought in the price drop. Sales: Butter, 9 cars; eggs, 45 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 1 car. Prices follow:

POLITICS ACTS AS CURB UPON LONDON STOCKS

While Herriot Puzzles the French Traders.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 11.—Business is stagnant these days on the London stock exchange. The international political situation is influencing the market. The chief consideration appears to be uncertainty of the outcome of the approaching Lausanne conference. After recent pessimism, expectations as to some favorable result ensuing are now reviving, although hopes are not placed unduly high.

Most of the gilt edged securities, including British government issues, reflected this political uncertainty, assisted also by a mild weakness of sterling. Noticeably there has been some steady foreign selling of gilt edged securities.

Stream of Selling.

Late Tuesday evening dealers experienced the beginning of a stream of selling which increased the following day. Lines of British government stocks sold in blocks of $5,000,000 at a time, but considering the amount changing hands prices stood up remarkably well.

Various institutions apparently are turning out their holdings or exchanging them into other high class stocks, the change in sentiment being due principally to foreign realizations and combined weakness of the sterling-dollar rate.

The market, however, considers the repatriation of funds a normal incident.

Unemployment Grows.

Apathy spread through the home and international industrial sections, increasing unemployment figures checking the recent incipient bullishness of the former.

Oil and mining were the market's brightest spots at the close of the week's session, oil dealers being favorably impressed with the news that the New York oil conference will reconvene in Paris shortly with hopes that an agreement with Russian interests will be concluded.

Contrary to the gilt edged market, general improvements occurred in European loans, apparently on renewed hopes of the outcome of international conferences. German sterling loans rallied, Austrian 7s recovered sharply, while Rumanian issues, Czechs and the Poland 7 per cent loan proved readily responsive to the little speculative support.

South American loans, chiefly Brazil and Sao Paulo, were better, but Chilean and Argentinean loans fell away. The Japanese, after an early rally, met with renewed selling on fears of the far eastern political situation and weakness of the yen.

Low records were reached by home railway and a big group of stocks on the continued drop of traffic and intensified competition.

PARIS, June 11.—The favorable reception of Premier Edouard Herriot's ministerial declaration before parliament was a disappointment to the bourse which fears Socialist support and intermeddling. On the contrary, parliament's stout approval of the Herriot government tended to strengthen the position of France.

The market was quieter, sterling was weaker and the dollar improved, which was attributed to the suspension of spot sales in Paris. On Thursday a sharp rise lifted the dollar well over the gold point.

COTTON DECLINES

Cotton prices weakened after an early advance and net losses at the close were 5@9 points on the board of trade. Liverpool opened 1 point lower than due and American exchanges were unchanged at the start to 2@3 points down. When stock and grain markets manifested strength cotton was quick to follow their trend but only a few points were scored before weakness set in in all commodity market and sent prices down to near the low levels for the day.

The trade anticipates a decided decrease in consumption of cotton during May to be shown in the official report due early in the week. A better tone in the demand for dry goods was shown with prices steady, and Worth Street is estimated to have sold around 500,000 pieces of print cloth during the week.

Spot markets lost 5 points with New York 5.05c, New Orleans and Galveston, 5c, and Houston, 4.90c. Prices follow:

PACIFIC COAST, DEEP SOUTH PROTEST TAXES

NewEngland's Voice Added to Chorus.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Out west sun tanned men are riding into town off the ranges. Down south hundreds of citizens are descending on a state capital by train and automobile. Back east in a quiet New England town the citizens forgather in the town hall after the evening meal is finished.

Separated from each other by hundreds of miles, but no farther apart than the breadth of a hair in the reason for their assembly are all these Americans. They are coming together for one purpose—to demand the immediate reduction of taxes which threaten to overwhelm them.

Party of the Bureaus.

So we find cattlemen from Colorado, Wyoming, and Utah assembling at Green River, Wyo., to hear President J. Elmer Brock of the Wyoming Stock Growers' association demand the adoption of a program of economy in government. Mr. Brock urges the abolition of various state departments and the consolidation of others in the interest of economy and then he says: "Our form of government is built for two and only two major parties, yet today we have an invisible third party, potent in its own behalf and more powerful than congress and the President combined. I refer to the closely affiliated personnel of national and state bureaus."

Mr. Brock cites the state agricultural extension service created in 1914 with an original appropriation of $480,000 or $10,000 for each state. In 1931 the federal appropriation was $10,413,936. Of this $1,701,080, or 17 per cent, goes to pay salaries of federal office holders. The states receive $8,672,936 which they must match on condition that at least 80 per cent of this amount be spent on salaries of various jobholders. "So in 1932 we have some 6,000 agents to look after 2,500 rural counties and nearly $2,000,000 worth of Washington office to tell them how to do it," says Mr. Brock as he asks an end of this service.

Protest in Deep South.

Last week hundreds of taxpayers poured into Baton Rouge, the capital of Louisiana, to protest against the imposition of new and high taxes by the state legislature. Throughout the state taxpayers held protest meetings. At Delhi 77 business and professional men and planters met and then sent this telegram to State Senator Gilbert: "Resolved, that unless measures for drastic economies in state and local government are passed by your body and signed by the governor, we shall advocate a state-wide strike of taxpayers."

At Winnsboro citizens meet and pass a resolution beginning, "Whereas the taxpayers of Franklin parish are in desperate condition by virtue of the fact that they are unable to pay their taxes," and then going on to demand that no additional taxes be levied, except for the purpose of relieving the present tax burden on property, that the sharpest retrenchment be put into effect and that the budget be balanced down to a sensible figure and not "up" by new taxation among other points.

Citizens of Crawley warn that their "patience and money are at a low ebb.

"We believe that the practice of economy which time and conditions demand would make unnecessary additional taxation, and we therefore demand retrenchment in every branch of state government and not expansion of the past and present extravagances and wasteful expenditures of public funds which more taxes will accentuate."

These protests are typical of the many others being made from towns throughout Louisiana, including Shreveport, Lafayette, Winnfield, Alexandria, Opelousas, and others.

Connecticut Tax Revolt.

In New England citizens of Middletown, Conn., met the other evening in the town hall to organize a taxpayers' association. The association, which elected T. M. Russell its chairman, demanded economies in the conduct of the town government. "The city taxpayers are in no position to pay increased taxes, and a reduction in the present rate will be looked for and demanded next year," a petition to be presented to the common council at its next meeting reads.

Stories of the soil in foreign lands have made popular reading in recent years, but read these poignant excerpts from a recent account of taxpayers' woes in a Fargo, N. D., paper: "Gray bearded pioneers and their stripling grandsons sat down together in Ayr Monday night to write a chapter in the book of history dedicated to the cause of tax reduction. Long after homes nearby were dark and silent, the lights of the little Ayr schoolhouse flared brightly, for the problems at hand were many.

Good Soil Now Burden.

"The good soil which brought the graybeards to Cass county half a century ago and the same soil that makes their sons and grandsons reluctant to leave it has stood all it can stand. It can no longer respond to the drain which the units of government exact for their purposes.

"His taxes cut in half means clothing for his children. That is why one man of Ayr favors tax reduction.

"It is not rebellion against the cost of government on principle, but rebellion against a crushing load which threatens to nullify the labor of years, threatens to drive men from the homes they have worked a quarter of a century for, threatens their families with privation. The soil, its products at a low ebb, is producing a living for it tillers, but not enough to withstand the drain from the outside."

John Conrad, president of the Cass County Taxpayers' association, said the farmers of Ayr cannot understand why that in 1931 it took 68 per cent of the value of North Dakota farm

Hurt to Trade Seen in Higher Income Taxes

BY SCRUTATOR.

How do the new higher taxes on incomes affect the person of modest means whose income is so small that it is not taxable or is taxed only a small amount?

How do these new rates affect the unemployed, whose chief concern is food and shelter rather than taxes?

What bearing do they have on the welfare of people who have invested in stocks and bonds and people who have no securities, but are vitally interested in the continued good standing of investments because of insurance policies that they hold?

What, in other words, is the effect on the poor man's pocketbook when an extravagant government confiscates a larger share of the well to do man's income?

Offers Clews on Taxes.

The statistical department of A. G. Becker & Co. has just published a table from which the answers to these questions can be deduced, although the compilation was made for another purpose.

This table simply shows how great a yield an individual with a given income would have to realize on a taxable investment to compensate for the tax free features that he would enjoy by investing in a government or municipal bond.

Assume, for example, that Smith and Jones both have incomes of $20,000 per year, and that Smith invests his money in tax free government or municipal bonds and Jones invests his in corporation bonds. Jones will have to get nearly 6 per cent on his investment to be as well off at the end of the year as Smith, if the latter gets 5 per cent on his tax free bonds.

As you get into the larger income classes the spread widens, and the odds in favor of the tax free bonds increase rapidly.

Burden Steadily Grows.

For instance, the man whose income is $100,000 a year under the new income tax law must realize a return of at least 11.36 per cent on his investment in private enterprise or he would be money ahead by investing in tax free bonds yielding only 5 per cent. Under the old income tax law a yield of 5 per cent on tax free bonds was equivalent to a yield of 6.67 per cent on a taxable investment for a man in the $100,000 a year group.

The man whose income is $1,000,000 or more has this choice: He either may buy tax free governments and municipals yielding 5 per cent or he may try to find a taxable investment that will yield him 13⅓ per cent. Under the old law he had a choice between tax free bonds at 5 per cent or taxable bonds at 6.67 per cent. The new law takes 63 per cent of his income in taxes.

With these facts in mind it is not hard to understand why offerings of government bonds are so quickly oversubscribed, and why the market for the securities of corporations and railroads is so weak that some of the soundest concerns in the country have to beg the Reconstruction Finance corporation for handouts.

Puts Curb on Building.

Builders do not build, corporations do not buy, employers do not employ unless they can raise capital to finance their enterprises. And people do not invest so readily in private enterprise when taxes take a larger slice of the return.

Discouraging the investment of capital in private enterprise not only contributes to business stagnation, but also affects the market for securities already sold, which are held by individuals, banks, insurance companies, and trusts. Income tax rates were high a few years ago, but then business was good and possibilities of profit were excellent.

The new income tax rates are part of the attempt to balance the 1933 budget by adding a billion in taxes.

This budget includes no billions for postoffices or other public works proposed in the name of "relief." Such expenditures would necessitate other and additional methods of tax extraction. Furthermore, the budget does assume that 270 million dollars will be received in payment on war debts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—An additional loan of $600,000 to the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad company from the Reconstruction Finance corporation was approved today by the interstate commerce commission. The money is to be used for current bills. The commission heretofore has approved loans aggregating $4,307,080 to the C. & E. I. The company has applied for a total of $7,196,436. The loan granted today is without prejudice to consideration of further loans on the original application.

MEXICAN GOVERNOR WILL MODIFY LAW ON SEIZING PROPERTY

MEXICO CITY, June 11.—(AP)—Gov. Bartole Vargas Lugo, of Hidalgo, announced today that the new expropriation law in his state would be modified to remove doubts as to its constitutionality.

His announcement followed a conference with Gen. Juan Jose Rios, secretary of the interior, after confisication of private property under the law in the state of Hidalgo had met a check in the district court at Pacnica.

The court granted a temporary restraining order to the owners of the Cruz Azul cement factory, suspending the state's attempt to confiscate the factory under the expropriation act.

The governors of Hidalgo, Vera Cruz and Michoacan had been summoned to Mexico City for conferences regarding the expropriation laws recently passed in their states. Attorneys for the federal government and for the state of Hidalgo are expected to meet Tuesday to discuss the proposed modifications, which would immediately be submitted to the legislature of Hidalgo for action.

BOARD OF TRADE FINISHES CASE AT U. S. HEARING

Soon May Be Taken to Court.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—With final arguments for both contestants concluded the controversy between the Chicago Board of Trade and the Farmers' National Grain corporation went into the hands of a federal commission of three cabinet officers today.

Out of their decision, which is expected within ten days, will come an answer to the question as to how far the government intends to regulate the operations of the grain exchange.

Ostensibly the fight had its inception in the board's refusal to admit the government subsidized coöperative corporation to membership in its clearing house. The rules of the board prohibit membership to corporations. The Farmers' National contends, however, that the rule of the board barring corporations is in violation of the grain futures act. The government was asked to revoke the open market permit of the exchange for the alleged violation.

Real Basis of Conflict.

The real issue, however, as admitted by all concerned, is the conflict between the market operators and the government sponsored coöperatives. Indications, as the commission took the case under advisement, were that the decision will be unfavorable to the Board of Trade. In that case the fight will be carried through the courts, with the United States Supreme court as the final arbiter.

The group heading the present case was composed of Secretary Lamont of the department of commerce, Secretary Hyde of agriculture, and Attorney General Mitchell.

Weymouth Kirkland, counsel for the Board of Trade, in his final argument today pressed his motion that the complaint filed by the Farmers' National against the exchange is premature. He contended that the Board of Trade expressed its willingness to investigate the Farmers' National, under the rules of the board, with a view to admitting the coöperative to the clearing house. That investigation, he alleged, has been frustrated by the refusal of the Farmers' National to furnish information requested.

Mitchell Cites Rules.

Attorney General Mitchell indicated, however, that Kirkland's motion will be overruled when he contended that the evidence showed the rules of the Board of Trade allowed no corporations to be members of the clearing house. Mr. Mitchell indicated he thought the rules of the Board of Trade were so constructed as to bar all coöperatives, which by their very structure, as coöperatives, could not comply with the requirements. With such a rule in effect, he said, the investigation would be futile.

Mr. Kirkland answered that two already are members of the Board of Trade, and that coöperatives, under the board's rules, are subjected to the same requirements as any other organization.

Cites Milnor Testimony.

Kirkland recalled the testimony of George S. Milnor, head of the Grain Stabilizing corporation and general manager of the Farmers' Mutual, to the effect that the Farmers' Mutual conducted $81,274,000 worth of business for the Grain Stabilization corporation during a 21 month period. During that same period, Milnor had testified, the Farmers' National handled $104,356,000 worth of grain for members and $69,326,000 for non-members.

Under the terms of the Capper-Volstead act, said Mr. Kirkland, coöperatives must conduct more business for members than for non-members. He contended that the Farmers' National in handling transactions for the Stabilization corporation was handling transactions for a non-member, bringing its total of non-member business to more than its member business. He denied the contention of Carl Meyer, counsel for the Farmers' National, that the Stabilization corporation could not be classed as "non-member," since it is a government institution.

AUBURN AUTO PLANT OPEN AT CONNERSVILLE JOBS FOR 1,400 MEN

Connersville, Ind., June 11.—More than 1,400 men returned to a full six day a week schedule in the factories of the Auburn Automobile company and the Central Manufacturing company, an affiliated plant, today.

Both plants have been operating on conservative production schedules since the first of the year. Today the city was humming with renewed activity. The first large contingent of men was returned to their jobs earlier in the week. Long lines of workmen formed at the gates of both factories waiting for badges and assignments, as production lines were being speeded toward capacity.

Auburn officials said production would reach 85 Auburn straight eight cars daily within five days' time and that this number would be increased to 125 daily within the next 20 days. Practically every department is now working on an overtime basis and several departments are operating night shifts. The central factory's schedule has now reached 70 automobile bodies daily and plans call to increase production to 100 daily within the next three weeks. Convertible bodies for the company are made at Kalamazoo, Mich.

PROFIT TAKERS SQUELCH RALLY IN STOCKS HERE

Over anxious profit takers killed the possibility of further improvement in stock prices on the Chicago exchange yesterday. After a feeble upturn on initial transactions prices reacted and closed the week slightly below Friday's final quotations. Not all prices in the closing list rated minus signs but the majority of quotations on the active shares did.

Trading generally was quiet, even for a week-end session, with only 15,000 shares appearing on the tape. Interest centered in three of four issues of stocks, namely Commonwealth Edison, Cities Service and Cord. The latter, which was strong Friday on the strength of Auburn's big advance, was steady at its previous closing price yesterday. Edison reacted 2 points to 54¼ as professionals sold to even up commitments for the week. Cities Service closed unchanged after an early decline.

Trading in the Swift issues was at low ebb. Both stocks were firm on the smallest turnover since the recent activity began several days ago.

Thirty representative stocks listed on the Chicago exchange at the close of business yesterday had a market value of $352,440,193, which compared with $341,260,114 at the close of the preceding week, according to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co. This represents an increase of $11,180,079 or 3.2 per cent.

CARNEGIE UNITS REOPEN PLANTS AFTER SHUTDOWN

Youngstown, O., June 11.—(AP)—Resumption of operations at about 30 per cent by the Ohio works of the Carnegie Steel corporation here will give work to hundreds of men after a two weeks' layoff. The resumption includes two blast furnaces which had been standing by, six pen hearth furnaces, the Bessemer plant, and blooming mills.

Both Youngstown Sheet and Tube company and Republic Steel corporation will reduce operations next week, but due to the Carnegie resumption the district's steel output will show a five point rise to about 20 per cent of capacity.

Production of track work for May, as reported by the American Iron and Steel institute, totaled 3,061 tons, compared with 3,340 tons in April and 7,453 tons in May, 1931.

WESTERN ROAD ASKS INCREASE IN FEDERAL LOAN

Raises Sum Sought to Over 2 Million.

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—The Western Pacific railroad today amended its application to the interstate commerce commission for a $759,000 loan and requested instead a loan of $2,264,554. At the same time the Chicago and Eastern Railway company asked the interstate commerce commission to approve a $600,000 Reconstruction Finance corporation loan.

The Western Pacific in its amended application informed the commission that it had been unable to get funds from the Railway Credit corporation and needed the money to meet past due and coming due obligations. The carrier already has borrowed $1,303,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Chicago Road's Plea.

The Chicago and Eastern informed the commission that its operating income since April 1 had been reduced to a new low level by coal strikes in the Illinois and other coal fields. The carrier has received already $4,307,080 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

The interstate commerce commission today authorized the Detroit, Toledo and Milwaukee Railroad company to abandon its line through Calhoun, Jackson, Hillsdale, Lenawee, and Monroe counties, Mich.

At the same time the commission issued a certificate authorizing the New York Central Railroad company and the Michigan Central to cease its operations over the line. These two railroads leased the Detroit and Toledo. The line is 88 miles long. A number of villages intervened in opposition to the application.

Passengers Departed.

The commission said the area served had been described as one of the best farming sections in Michigan, but during the last six years farm produce has formed barely 15 per cent of the traffic. There has been no passenger train service on any part of the line since 1922.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad applied to the commission for permission to abandon the 11 miles of its branch line running from Oregon to Forreston, Ill. The road explained only two towns were served by the branch and that it could not be operated without an annual loss.

National Biscuit Alleges Unfair Methods by Kellogg

Wilmington, Del., June 11.—(AP)—A suit alleging unfair competition was filed in federal court today by the National Biscuit Company of New Jersey against the Kellogg company of Battle Creek, Mich. The National Biscuit company charges the Kellogg company with unfair competition in advertising and putting on the market a shredded wheat biscuit which it alleges is similar to its biscuit. The court was asked to enjoin the Kellogg company from manufacturing and selling whole wheat biscuits made in imitation of the National Biscuit company's biscuit and to enjoin the Kellogg company from using the words "shredded wheat" in its advertising.

FIFTEEN NATIONS USING BARTER TO MOVE GOODS

League of Nations Gives Trade Report.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, June 11.—Barter already has replaced normal trade in certain products among fifteen European countries. Since last July agreements to exchange goods in kind have been concluded between Germany and Hungary, Austria and Rumania, Bulgaria and Greece, Bulgaria and Switzerland, France and Latvia, Norway and Russia, Poland and Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, and Estonia and Jugo-Slavia.

The economic section of the league of nations so reports with facts and figures how under the stress of the depression trade currents not merely have declined "but are now different in character from what they were only a few years ago."

National Trade Monopolies.

The league's data show that Persia has adopted a foreign trade monopoly and another of Russia's neighbors, Esthonia, has established an import trade monopoly, while two others, Latvia and Turkey, reach about the same end through quota systems covering all imports.

France has already gone far in the same direction, with quotas on fifty-three important articles. Like most of the sixteen other European countries that have established quotas, she is "continuously intensifying" this method of state control of foreign trade.

In the last year twelve countries have resorted to state control of foreign exchange dealings, while in the last few months sixteen states have raised their tariffs. Eleven have tried to save themselves by inflation of currency to stimulate exports. Instead, devaluation has led to reprisals, with the result that "it is not certain that it has in practice stimulated trade" and "there is even reason to believe that by adding to the present disorder of international trades it has ended by restricting it."

Show Losses of Billions.

The extreme fall of trade was brought out in a table showing that whereas the value of world trade fell $11,500,000,000 in 1930, it fell $13,716,000,000 more in 1931. While the total setback between 1919 and 1931 was 42 per cent, it is 60 per cent in comparison between January, 1932, and January, 1929.

A few countries have been hit fairly equally on imports and exports in the last two years. France lost 51 per cent in each, while the United States, despite her higher tariff, lost in exports 63 per cent and in imports 58 per cent. Figures showing the losses of other countries follow:

	Exports.	Imports.
Germany	49	66
Austria	54	37
Great Britain	48	39
Canada	49	60

POSTAL TEL. & CABLE ISSUES FORMAL REPORT

New York, June 11.—(AP)—The pamphlet report of the Postal Telegraph and Cable corporation for the year ended Dec. 31, 1931, discloses in its balance sheet current assets of $11,331,713 and current liabilities of $6,455,976. As of Dec. 31, 1930, current assets and liabilities were respectively $21,344,857 and $5,625,081.

The income account, published previously, showed a net loss for the year of $1,764,031 compared with net income of $96,769 in the preceding year. Total operating revenue of the corporation from all sources, including telegraph, cable and radio, declined by 10 per cent as compared with 1930, the report stated.

In his report to stockholders, George S. Gibbs, president, said that the "drive for economy was intensified as the year progressed." The full effects, he added, were not shown in the 1931 report.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS FOLLOW LISTED MART; DECLINE MODERATELY

Trading in Chicago bank stocks followed listed markets last week. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust, which opened at 72, eased off to a low of 68, and with the announcement of the regular quarterly dividend rallied to high sales of 72 and closed 69 bid, 71 asked; off 3 points. Central Republic Bank and Trust sales ranged between 50 and 58½, closing 52 bid, 54 asked; up 1.

First National reacted to low sales at 144 and then rallied to 146 bid, 150 asked, off 4 for the week. Expect Gold to Flow Back in Short Time

New York, June 11.—(AP)—Gold transactions, as reported by the Federal Reserve bank of New York today, indicated a net loss of only $2,985,500 to the country, the smallest in some time. An export of $5,998,900 was announced, but of this amount $3,000,700 came from stocks already under earmark for foreign account. There was an import of $12,700 from Mexico.

Foreign Exchanges Better.

Foreign exchanges showed considerable improvement in quiet trading today. Lifting of pressure against gold currencies was reflected in an advance of 5-16 net in French francs, which closed at 3.94 1-16 cents, still under the gold export point. Dutch guilders, up 3 points to 40.51 cents, were just at the gold level. Swiss francs and the belga improved less extensively. Sterling cables rose half a cent to $3.68.

Exceptions to the advance were the reichsmark, which dipped 6 points, and the Japanese yen, off slightly. Canadian dollars were steady.

GOLD OUTGO NEAR END

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—The outflow of gold from this country, which, since last September has reduced the monetary gold stocks of the United States by more than 20 per cent, is expected to come to an end this week. In well informed banking circles, the prediction has been made that before autumn the movement will have reversed itself. Gold may be flowing back to this country from France by mid-summer, according to some bankers.

The belief that the long drain upon the gold reserves of the United States is over is based on two circumstances, first, foreign short term balances, particularly those of foreign central banks and governments, have been virtually exhausted; second, the passage of the tax legislation by congress has strengthened the dollar in the foreign exchange market so that by the close of last week only the Swiss franc remained above the gold export point and the margin of profit on shipments to that country had nearly vanished.

A return movement of gold is almost certain to develop, bankers believe, because Europeans, in their anxiety to withdraw their funds from this market have, in many instances cut them down to levels that will be insufficient to meet the autumn requirements for dollar exchange.

Gold Supplied on Demand.

Still another factor which makes it likely that gold will soon flow back to this market is the extraordinary demonstration of strength given by the banking system here in repaying all foreign short term balances in gold as rapidly as payment was demanded since last September. When it becomes apparent that this repayment has been completed without shaking the strength of the dollar, funds are likely to flow back here for safekeeping once more.

All foreign short term balances in this market had been reduced by the end of last week to about 765 million dollars, according to estimates based on the movements of gold.

Of the total of such balances approximately 496 million dollars represented European balances and about 269 million dollars Canadian, Latin American, far eastern, and other balances. French balances in this market had been cut down, it was estimated, to less than 135 million dollars, while British balances, estimated at about $166,500,000, were the largest foreign holdings here.

French Balances Low.

According to dispatches from Paris received at the close of the week, the Bank of France balances here have been cut so low that only ten more days will be required to liquidate them completely. In view of the fall of the franc below the gold point, it is possible that the withdrawal of the last of these balances will be made through the exchange market instead of by shipment of gold.

The extent of the redistribution of monetary gold stocks which has been accomplished by the withdrawal of European balances from this market may be seen from a comparison of the gold holdings of leading European central banks at the end of last August and on the latest available date.

Large Gains in Gold.

Gold holdings of the Bank of France have risen between the close of August and the beginning of this month from 58,563,000,000 francs to 80,169,000,000 francs, a gain of 21,606,000,000 francs, or about $864,240,000. Holdings of the National Bank of Belgium had risen up to May 19 last from 1,588,000,000 belgas to 2,532,000,000 belgas, a gain of 944,000,000 belgas, or $131,216,000. The Bank of the Netherlands showed an increase in its gold holdings between August and May 17 last from 648,000,000 florins to 937,000,000 florins, the gain of 289,000,000 florins being equal to about $115,600,000. The Swiss National bank, between August and May 23, showed a rise of gold holdings from 1,189,000,000 Swiss francs to 2,541,000,000 Swiss francs, equal to 1,352,000,000 Swiss francs, or about $260,936,000.

In all the increase of gold holdings shown by these four banks in the period covered amounted to $1,371,992,000. Not all of the gain was drawn directly from this country.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—Profit taking checked another sharp rise in the stock market today.

The day began with a quiet opening, but trading began to pick up in the first hour. Virtually the entire list advanced into new high ground before the second hour.

The rise first was halted by a reaction of seven points in the fast spinning Auburn Automobile stock. Auburn, however, rallied later and closed virtually unchanged.

There were erratic gyrations in a number of other issues harboring short positions and sensitive to demand because of their small capitalization.

Expects Congress to Quit.

For the most part sentiment was cheerful. Wall street expects congress to pack its bags soon and clear out. It does not believe any of the disturbing legislative projects will be passed. Fear of passage of a bonus bill, for some reason, has faded and the better tone of the market reflected this change in sentiment.

The further sensational movements in Auburn Automobile provided the basis for numerous rumors relative to the situation existing in that stock. The screws were turned with added severity today and for a time the stock sold ten points above yesterday's close. Then it slipped back almost as much.

Toward the close there were a fresh forward movement which brought it to 66¾, compared with a recent low of 28¾.

Steel Makes Sharp Gain.

Sharp gains were registered by United States Steel common, American Telephone and Telegraph, American Tobacco B and Allied Chemical. They were not held, however, Steel slipping back to close unchanged, American Telephone fading badly and closing fractionally off and the others faring even worse.

In the railroad division of the market New York Central and Union Pacific were leaders. In the first half hour 300,000 shares changed hands, compared with 100,000 in the first half hour Friday.

The swift pace of the rise through the first half of the session took its toll of technical strength marketwise and paved the way for something of a setback in the closing hour. At midsession the market was back within striking distance of the highs for the movement reached just a week ago today, with numerous of the speculative leaders having bettered their previous top levels for the advance.

Under the circumstances, it was logical, in view of the impending week-end recess, to anticipate the realizing which developed in goodly volume in the final half of the morning.

MORATORIUM DEBTS FUNDED WITH U. S. BY 4 EUROPEAN NATIONS

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—The treasury announced today that agreements had been signed with four European countries, including France, providing for funding over a ten year period of $59,000,653, postponed by the Hoover moratorium. Signatory nations were France, whose postponed payments amounted to $50,000,000; Belgium, $7,950,000; Rumania, $800,000; and Latvia, $250,653.

The department said payment for all postponements had been arranged except for a total of $8,374,763 owed by Poland, Esthonia, and Austria. These nations are expected to sign the funding agreement early next week.

crops to pay taxes, whereas in 1926 it took little more than 11 per cent.

"I doubt if very many tax levying boards ever took into consideration what the taxpayer could pay," Mr. Conrad said. "They have only estimated what they needed and then proceeded to go get it. "We've come to a point where the first thought has got to be what we can pay, not what the boards have got to have."

And so it goes. In Portland, Ore., desperate taxpayers demand on billboard signs reduction in the school costs and sound a threat of a taxpayers' strike unless they get relief. At the same time their presidents proclaim that they are not bolsheviks, but merely sorely pressed taxpayers. Citizens of New Mexico are planning for a state-wide meeting not later than September to recommend tax reform. In Phoenix, Ariz., Frank Brophy, president of the Maricopa County Taxpayers' association, assails the high cost of government.

Effort Must Not Cease.

All the nation's leaders in the fight to reduce governmental costs and thereby reduce taxes emphasize this—if success is to be achieved there must be no letup in the demands on public servants in office for economy. They urge that citizens continue their protests to members of congress relentlessly, month in and month out.

That results can be accomplished are seen in reports of reductions in expenditures effected through organization. For instance, C. M. Thompson has just outlined to the Illinois Chamber of Commerce some results obtained with the help of that organization. In Streator the taxation committee has reduced the township levy 6½ cents. Centralia has cut salaries. Champaign has cut its budget by $79,000. Danville has reduced its budget appropriation 20 per cent and its school district is reducing expenditures 10 per cent. A saving of about $100,000 has been made in the cost of government at Jacksonville and East St. Louis has sharply cut taxes.

Some Other Savings.

In New Jersey some sharp savings have been effected through salary reductions. In St. Paul, Minn., a saving of $150,000 a year is expected to result from economies. St. Louis, Mo., has reduced its budget for the coming year by $3,600,000. Greenville, S. C., expects to save $200,000 on its school expenditures. Atlanta, Ga., is planning to save a considerable amount through easing the size of its pay roll.

And we find Gov. Meier of Oregon and Gov. Balzar of Nevada talking about the necessity of cutting government costs in their states. Down in Florida we find candidates for office in St. Petersburg and Tampa appealing to the taxpayers especially in trying to win votes.

Here in Chicago the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures last week sent resolutions to the committeemen of both the Republican and Democratic parties on the subject of tax reduction and on Tuesday or Wednesday it will present the platform makers of the first named party with copies of its demands for economy.

DEBTS OF CITIES GROW STEADILY, SURVEY SHOWS

33 Owe Total of Over 4 Billion.

New York, June 11.—The trend of municipal bonded debt continues steadily upward, with the increase for the larger cities of the country more than offsetting the reductions accomplished by smaller communities, according to C. E. Rightor of the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, in his tenth annual tabulation and analysis for the debt of 289 cities of the United States and Canada, as of Jan. 1, 1932.

This report, prepared for the National Municipal league shows that the per capita debt of 219 comparable cities rose from $109.04 in 1931 to $114 for 1932, an increase of $4.96. The increase a year ago was $4.92.

The debt of 33 of the largest cities of the country increased from $2,608,000,000 to $4,633,000,000, or 77 per cent, in the last ten years, while the population of these communities during the period increased but 20 per cent. The per capita debt thus increased from $119.27 to $176.82 for the period.

Largest City, Largest Debt.

New York, the largest city, also has the largest debt, a total of $1,145,054,815, excluding debt incurred on self-supporting enterprises, or $1,644,054,815 net debt. New York's per capita figure, excluding self-supporting works, was $165.22, third highest of 13 cities studied with population of more than 500,000. Philadelphia had the greatest big city per capita debt at $213.72, while Baltimore was second with $165.31, nine cents above New York. St. Louis with $70.50 had the lowest debt in this group.

Other big cities ranged as follows: San Francisco, $151.28; Detroit, $150.61; Buffalo, N. Y., $133.53; Cleveland, $112.08; Milwaukee, $110.93; Pittsburgh, $108.30; Chicago, $107.86; Boston, $83.30; Los Angeles, $78.41.

Atlantic City, N. J., had the highest per capita debt at $375.61. The low record was held by Springfield, Ill., with only $6.07 per head.

Dearborn, Mich., High.

Other high debts included those of Dearborn, Mich., $340.52; Wichita Falls, Tex., $192.26; Phoenix, Ariz., $169.76.

Other low debt records included: Rockford, Ill., $13.14; Berkeley, Cal., $14.30; Bellingham, Wash., $18.33; Quincy, Ill., $8.41; Bloomington, Ill., $7.40; Sioux City, Ia., $15.32; Salt Lake City, $53.28; Kansas City, $43.68; Spokane, Wash., $31.03.

Mr. Richtor observes that a highly critical bond buying market, extensive unsold bonds and short term notes, and increasing debt charges, coupled with growing tax delinquency, constitute serious problems to the public officials who are charged with the responsibility of continuing the essential services of the government.

AMERICAN AUSTIN CAR.

Statement for the twelve months ended March 31 shows net loss of $645,286 after expenses, interest, inventory adjustments and other charges. Accumulated deficit on March 31 last amounted to $3,748,590.

Malleable Figures.

Out of the experiences of the last three years has come the realization that figures in income accounts and balance sheets are variable factors and that an expert accountant can—and often does—remain technically honest and yet make the figures show what he wants them to show.

This elasticity of figures was not fully appreciated by the ordinary investor back in '28 and '29 and it got him into a lot of trouble. It was window dressing. It was the art of laying the rotten strawberries on the bottom of the box and the big juicy ones on top. It was ballyhoo.

Back in the boom days three years ago the little fellows were willing to believe anything. As for figures the mere fact that they were lined up in nice vertical columns was convincing. Assets balanced liabilities, and that was sufficient.

Investors are more skeptical now, although attempts are still made to make figures convince them that things are not as they are.

We ran across a company the other day that was careless enough to reveal that it had made up two separate income statements for 1931—one for the internal revenue collector and a second for people to whom it hoped to sell stock. We have encountered a number of companies that is not to be conservative or unconservative, but simply accurate in order that the investor may have adequate and accurate information.

The report criticizes the handling of reserves in financial statements. In discussing "hidden reserves" it points out that the accountant's job simply didn't show what they paid in federal income tax and so made it impossible to determine whether they had made the same report to the internal revenue collector that they made to the public. Another concern neatly dodged the issue by including in its income account "reserve for federal income tax" instead of showing exactly what it paid.

This is only one way in which figures can be managed to serve a purpose. There are many others.

Not all the confusion and misunderstanding is due to dishonesty. Much of it is due to lack of uniformity in accounting practice.

Some progress was made two weeks ago when the industrial securities committee of the Investment Bankers' Association of America strongly recommended the development of uniform methods of accounting for industrial enterprises. The committee's report, which is a preliminary draft, aims at the eventual development of a general schedule of industrial accounting that will meet the approval of the American Institute of Accountants, the New York Stock exchange, and the Investment Bankers' association.

Accounting practices that the report pointedly discusses include the method of reporting a company's ownership of its own stock and bonds in its balance sheet and the treatment of income therefrom in earnings statements.

Men-Something Unusual

THERE IS ALWAYS AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS THAT DOES NOT NEED TO ASK WHAT THE MARKET IS TODAY OR THE STATE OF GENERAL INDUSTRY!

Under all conditions, in all times, there are some services and products in growing demand, and the unquestioned superiority of our invention is the basis of this offer of free instruction and immediate employment to men living in North Side or Lake County.

From the first idea back of this remarkable specialty, that had its origin in America, but which was developed in Europe, where there are now five large factories supplying these specialties that far exceed the sale of all others, and with an aggregation of corporations with unlimited resources to insure the abundant development of this work, this business has grown unbrokenly! World leadership has been established, and it is freely predicted that our American factory will outstrip all others.

The founders did the first selling and the first training. Ever since then the most successful salesmen have been trainers of new men, who receive the same practical kind of help, plus the advantage of intensive merchandising research. With direct examples of successful methods to guide you it does not take long to master the tasks required, but genuine character must be applied. This work calls for manhood expressed in its best terms, for the assumption of responsibility and intelligent, sustained effort. It pays far beyond the ordinary average of success! Our 1932 federal income tax report revealed one group of 65 men whose average cash income for 1931 was $7,488.51 apiece. Typical examples of individual earnings in this group are as follows: $7,885.00, $7,676.50, $7,560.00, $7,401.50, and $7,219.50. Many made more! Yet they began as you would, with initial earnings of $125.00 to $200.00 per month, while practicing and learning, although some men qualify for the higher incomes right from the start.

Our successful men come from every trade and profession, therefore past experience is not so important as character and adaptability. We prefer married men, between 26 and 45, and they must be neat, of good character, and real workers! There will not be any layoffs. This is not a seasonal business.

A limited number will be selected at this time. But the first step must be an interview, so we can determine how we like you while you decide if you wish this work—there must be accord and understanding from the outset. For personal interview apply Monday morning, 9 to 12, 215 McGrahan Bldg., 1046 Wilson-av.

The new Electrolux invention [not refrigeration] is amazing!

GET OUT OF CHICAGO

and enter the selling field where little competition exists, where people have more money. Get a real kick out of life by associating yourself with an aggressive sales organization. No experience necessary. Must be able to leave city at once. Man with car preferred.

Address L Y 104, Tribune.

A Rare Opportunity

is presented 3 men desirous of a permanent connection with a large, well rated corporation. A client of ours, established on La Salle-st. for over eighteen years, is increasing its sales force. The men chosen will have a good record, and be of good appearance. They should be between 25-35 years old and anxious to make a real place for themselves with this institution. Careful schooling will be given and they will benefit by the reputation developed through a steady year 'round advertising campaign. If you think you can qualify, write us and we will arrange an interview for you.

Commonwealth Customers—PAY LESS—for Loans

$2.93 is the average Monthly Cost of a $225 loan under COMMONWEALTH'S Reduced Rate. This allows 25 months for repayment. There is no lower cost than this in Chicago.

COMMONWEALTH'S rate on amounts above $100 is substantially lower than the lawful rate usually charged.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signature of husband and wife enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.

NO FEES. You get full amount of the loan and up to 25 months to repay. Interest at the Reduced Rate is charged only while you keep the money.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 14,000; hogs, 30,000; sheep, 12,000.

Small supplies of hogs on the week-end session were disposed of at fully steady prices considering the quality of offerings, but the larger share of plainer kinds in the receipts pulled both the extreme top and the general average prices down a trifle.

In the absence of fancy light, which is usually the case on Saturdays, the trade carried a nominal top quotation of $3.60. Nothing here yesterday was good enough to sell above $3.50, however. The poorer quality also lowered the general average 5c to $3.30. All cattle and sheep in the yards yesterday were billed direct to packers from other points.

Hog receipts at Chicago during the week were lightest since March. The decrease in numbers was partly offset by a gain in the proportion of heavy hogs in the run, the average weight for the week being heaviest since last September. The tonnage was about equal to the preceding week. The market swung slowly back and forth until midweek, when prices tilted upward and held that way long enough to hoist the general average for the week 10c to $3.30. This is the highest weekly average since May 21. Outside demand for hogs increased early in the week, but at the close buying on shipping account dropped below normal. During the whole week shippers bought 13 per cent against 21 per cent in 1931 and 19 per cent in 1930.

Helps Cattle Prices.

A rise in the wholesale market for beef gave strength in the cattle market last week that offset a slight increase in receipts and raised the general average prices to the highest levels since middle of April. The general average for the whole week at $6.40 showed a gain of 20c and was highest since week ending April 16. This price stands 55c above the low weekly average of the year established early last month, although some classes of cattle are selling as much as 75c to $1.00 above the low spot. Most support came from local buyers. Eastern slaughtering houses took a smaller share than during the preceding week.

Lambs Average $6.20.

The general average price of lambs reached $6.20 on last week's bulge, making the highest mark since week ending May 7. The preceding week's prices averaged $5.50. However, the trend of the market was not upward all week. Practically all the earlier gains were wiped out before the close and the market wound up about in line with a week ago. Top prices soared to $7.75 early in the week, this figure on Tuesday comparing with $6.80 the middle of last week. On the break top prices dropped down to $6.90, showing a reduction of 85c in three days. Trading quieted down some at the extreme close and the market maintained a more even keel on final rounds.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 14,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs, and 12,000 sheep, against 12,230 cattle, 28,875 hogs, and 7,730 sheep a week ago, and 20,724 cattle, 51,582 hogs, and 15,247 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 40,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs and 60,000 sheep, against 47,647 cattle, 128,835 hogs, and 66,856 sheep a year ago, and 39,922 cattle, 162,240 hogs, and 51,443 sheep two years ago.

HIDE FUTURES

The turnover on the New York Hide exchange last week reached close to 10,000,000 lbs., in the most active trading in many weeks and during the period ended June 10 prices registered net losses of from 25 to 51 points. All of the active futures established new low records, and June sold at the lowest price in the history of the exchange. Trading in the domestic and foreign spot hide markets was virtually at a standstill last week.

Saturday's trade was not large with sales of 480,000 lbs. Final sales were 5 points lower to 5 points higher. Closing bids: Old contracts—June 3.30c; September, 3.70c; December, 4.24c; March, 4.70c. New contracts—June, 3.40c; September, 3.40c; December, 4.25c; March, 4.75c.

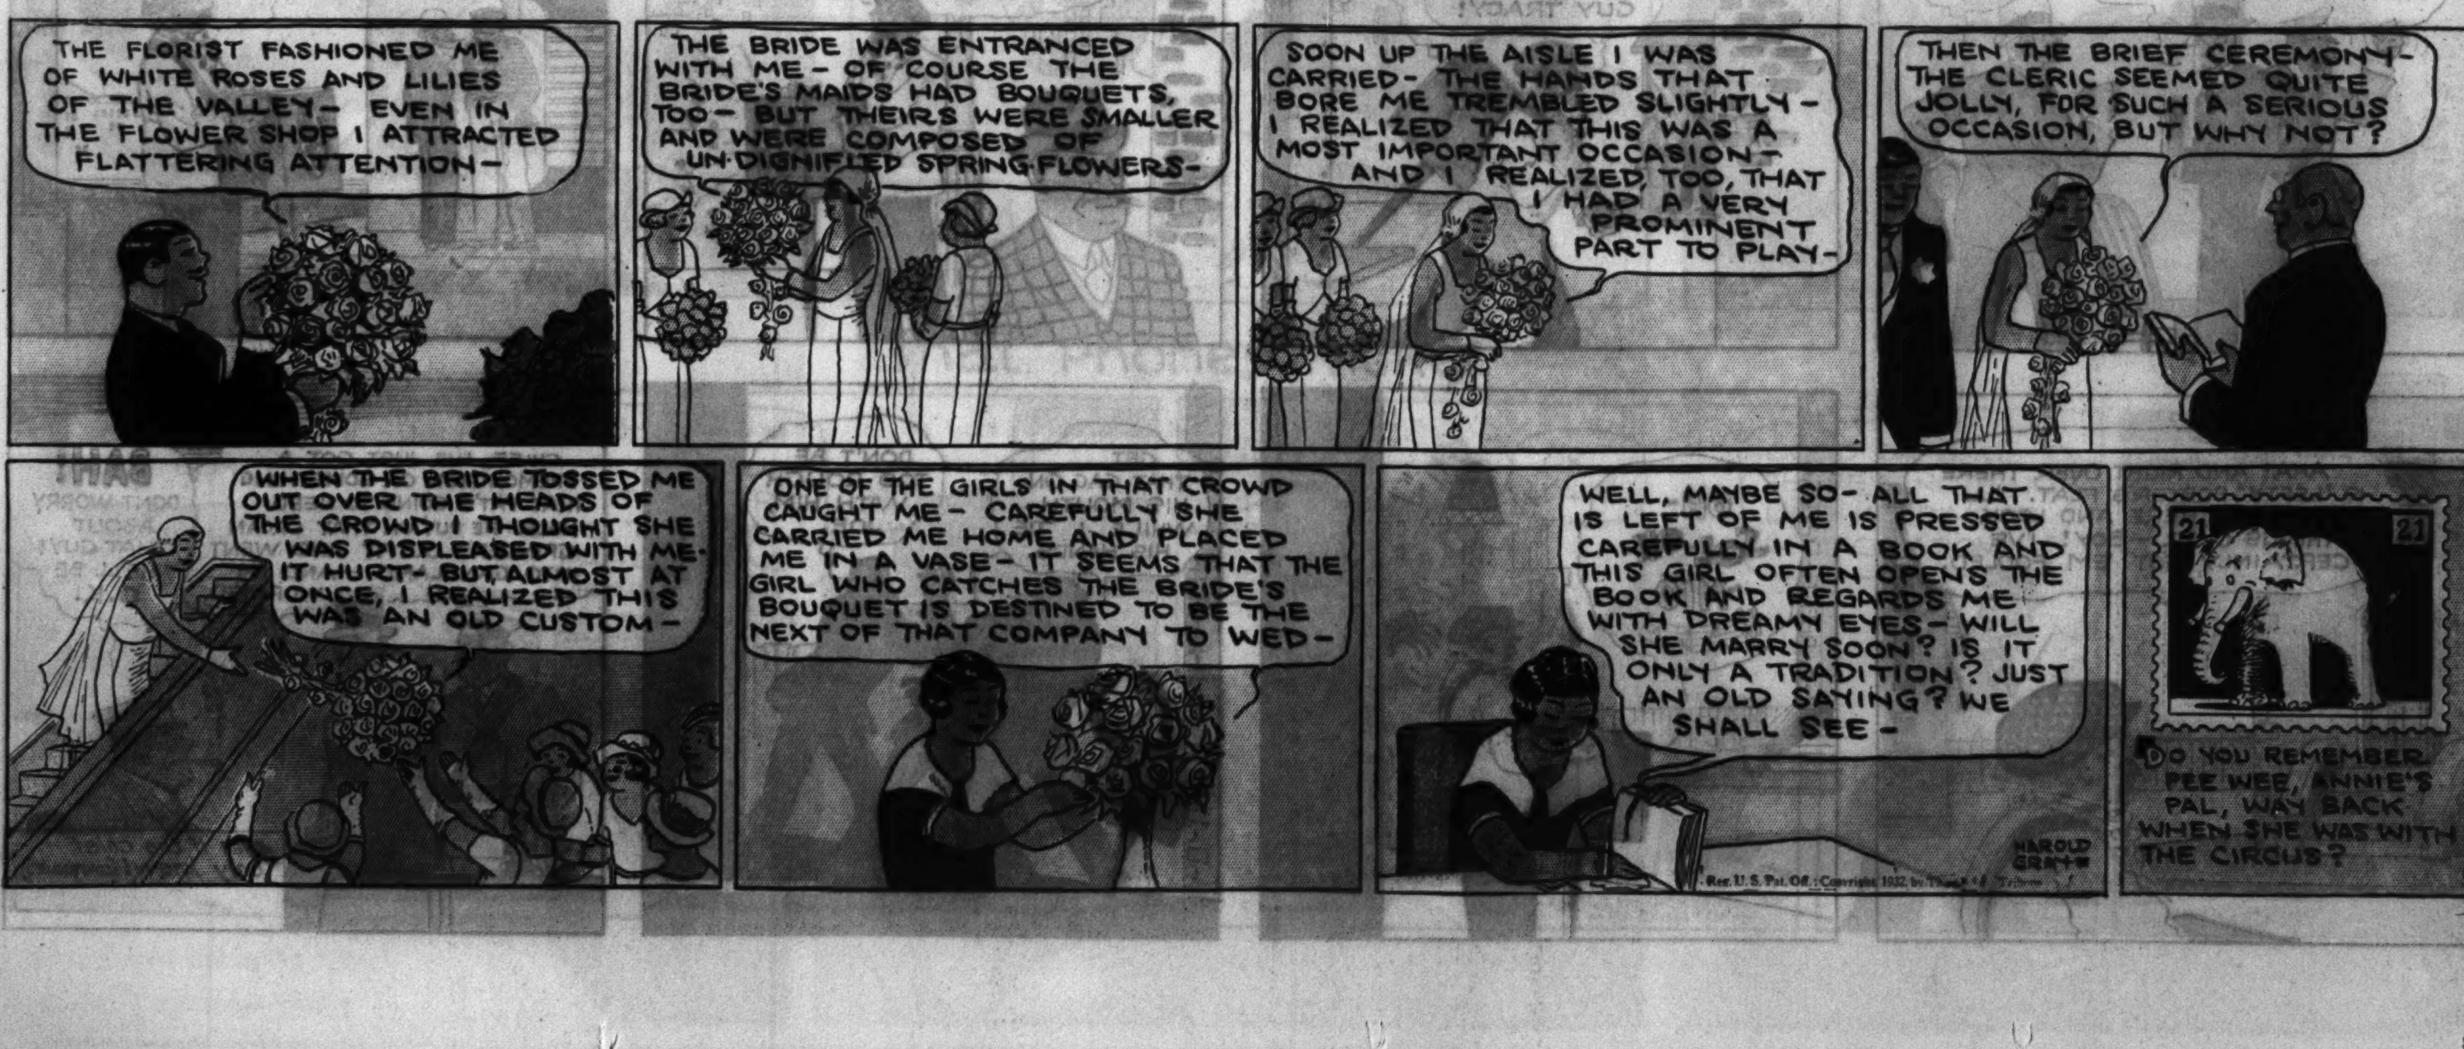
Private Life of a Bride's Bouquet



THE FLORIST FASHIONED ME OF WHITE ROSES AND LILIES OF THE VALLEY- EVEN IN THE FLOWER SHOP I ATTRACTED FLATTERING ATTENTION-
THE BRIDE WAS ENTRANCED WITH ME- OF COURSE THE BRIDE'S MAIDS HAD BOUQUETS, TOO- BUT THEIRS WERE SMALLER AND WERE COMPOSED OF UN-DIGNIFIED SPRING-FLOWERS-
SOON UP THE AISLE I WAS CARRIED- THE HANDS THAT BORE ME TREMBLED SLIGHTLY- I REALIZED THAT THIS WAS A MOST IMPORTANT OCCASION- AND I REALIZED, TOO, THAT I HAD A VERY PROMINENT PART TO PLAY-
THEN THE BRIEF CEREMONY- THE CLERIC SEEMED QUITE JOLLY, FOR SUCH A SERIOUS OCCASION, BUT WHY NOT?
WHEN THE BRIDE TOSSED ME OUT OVER THE HEADS OF THE CROWD I THOUGHT SHE WAS DISPLEASED WITH ME- IT HURT- BUT ALMOST AT ONCE, I REALIZED THIS WAS AN OLD CUSTOM-
ONE OF THE GIRLS IN THAT CROWD CAUGHT ME- CAREFULLY SHE CARRIED ME HOME AND PLACED ME IN A VASE- IT SEEMS THAT THE GIRL WHO CATCHES THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET IS DESTINED TO BE THE NEXT OF THAT COMPANY TO WED-
WELL, MAYBE SO- ALL THAT IS LEFT OF ME IS PRESSED CAREFULLY IN A BOOK AND THIS GIRL OFTEN OPENS THE BOOK AND REGARDS ME WITH DREAMY EYES- WILL SHE MARRY SOON? IS IT ONLY A TRADITION? JUST AN OLD SAYING? WE SHALL SEE-

DICK TRACY
by CHESTER GOULD
WHAT HAVE YOU GOT ON YOUR MIND, PAT?
JUST THIS, TRACY, WE'VE BEEN TRYING TO LOCATE A BAND OF BOND FORGERS FOR OVER A WEEK NOW, WITHOUT RESULTS, HAVEN'T WE? WELL, I'M GOING TO GET RESULTS - LISTEN - COME IN THE NEXT ROOM.
YOU SEE, WITH THIS ORGAN GRINDER'S DISGUISE I'LL GO DOWN INTO GANGLAND AND KNOCK AROUND UNTIL I RUN INTO THE MEN WE'RE AFTER - THEN I'LL TIP YOU OFF AND WE'LL CLOSE IN ON THEM.
THERE'S ONE MAN YOU SUSPECT AND THERE'S ONE MAN I SUSPECT - - THAT'S "LEFTY" PORTER - BUT WE HAVEN'T BEEN ABLE TO FIND HIM. WELL, WITH THIS ORGAN GRINDER'S OUTFIT I CAN HANG AROUND HIS APARTMENT AND - HE'S BOUND TO SHOW UP EVENTUALLY.
PAT, DO YOU KNOW WHAT I THINK OF YOUR IDEA? IT'S TERRIBLE! YOU CAN'T TRICK THOSE HOODLUMS WITH A BABY STUNT LIKE THAT.
OH YEAH? YOU'RE CRAZY!
And so - in spite of TRACY'S warning, that afternoon finds Pat in the heart of gangland intent on finding "Lefty" Porter.
I'LL SHOW THAT GUY TRACY!
OBOY! IS THIS OUTFIT FOOLING 'EM! THAT WAS "BUGS" NOLAN, THE HI-JACKER, THAT JUST PASSED AND HE DIDN'T EVEN GIVE ME A SECOND LOOK.
AND LOOK! OVER THERE'S "PUG" HUFF, THE GUNMAN! HE DOESN'T SUSPECT A THING.
AHA! AND RIGHT OVER THERE IS "LEFTY" PORTER'S FLAT. I'LL JUST PARK HERE AND LOOK THINGS OVER - BOY! I'VE CERTAINLY GOT 'EM FOOLED.
OH-SOL-OH-MIO
GET THAT GAG ON HIS MOUTH WHILE I TIE HIS HANDS.
DON'T BE TOO ROUGH WITH HIM, JOE.
CHIEF, I'VE JUST GOT A PREMONITION OR SOMETHING THAT PAT'S GOING TO NEED HELP. HE PUT ON THAT ORGAN GRINDER'S OUTFIT AND WENT INTO GANGLAND - AND I'M WORRIED.
BAH! DON'T WORRY ABOUT THAT GUY! HE'LL BE O.K.

GASOLINE ALLEY
BY King
I'VE BEEN READING IN YOUR BOOK, SKEEZIX, ABOUT THE MAGICIAN WHO COULD SAY MAGIC WORDS AND SEND YOU SPINNING THROUGH SPACE.
THAT'S A LOT OF HOOEY, UNCLE WALT. I'M WORKIN' OUT A CHEMICAL COMBINATION THOUGH.
AN' IT'S SUPPOSED TO OVERCOME GRAVITY AN' MAKE SOLID MATTER LIGHTER THAN AIR.
BY GOLLY IT WORKS! I'LL TRY SOME MYSELF.
NO, I DON'T THINK IT WILL DO AWAY WITH AEROPLANES ENTIRELY.
IT'S REALLY REMARKABLE! ANYWAY IT WILL PRODUCE A LOT OF AERIAL HITCH HIKERS.
YOU CAN AT LEAST STOP AND ADMIRE THE VIEW.
AEROPLANES CAN'T DO THAT. BUT I INTEND TO USE THIS FORMULA ON AEROPLANES TOO.
SO I SEE!
UNTIL I EXPERIMENT SOME MORE WE HAVE TO GO WHERE THE WIND TAKES US.
WE'RE SINKING! IS THERE ANY DANGER OF A FALL?
NO, THE EFFECT WILL WEAR OFF GRADUALLY. WE'LL JUST SETTLE.
STOP ME! I'M ROLLING ALONG LIKE A TUMBLE-WEED.
NOW WE'VE GOT OUR GRAVITY BACK WE'RE JUST THE SAME AS WHEN WE STARTED.
I HAVEN'T GOT MY GRAVITY BACK— AND SOMEWHERE ON THAT TRIP I LOST MY EQUILIBRIUM.

WHAT PAM FOUND OUT by ROBERT O REID

PAM'S SUCH A DARLING, BUT— I'M GLAD SHE'S MOVED ON TO THE TOP TABLE
I KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN—I'VE NOTICED IT, TOO
①
HOW CAN A DAINTY GIRL LIKE PAM BE GUILTY OF PERSPIRATION ODOR? DOESN'T SHE KNOW IT COMES WHEN UNDERTHINGS AREN'T QUITE FRESH?
②
③
NEXT WEEK
THERE SHE GOES TO TOP TABLE AGAIN. BY THE WAY, I HAVEN'T NOTICED THAT DISAGREEABLE THING SINCE WE SPOKE OF IT LAST TIME, HAVE YOU?
NOT IN THE LEAST. SOMEONE MUST HAVE TOLD HER—SHE'S JUST AS DAINTY AND SWEET, NOW, AS SHE LOOKS
LUX

Avoid Offending—

Underthings absorb perspiration odor. Protect Daintiness this Easy 4-Minute Way . . .

Perspiration acids penetrate into your underthings all day —every day. The odor clings.

Don't risk offending — Lux your underthings and stockings after every wearing! Lux coaxes out the acids — removes the odors! And gentle Lux contains nothing to harm the most fragile fabric or delicate color.

Wash this 4-minute way. One tablespoon of Lux does one day's undies . . . stockings, too! Squeeze lukewarm suds through fabric, rinse twice.

Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali which weakens threads, fades color. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water alone is safe in Lux.

LUX removes perspiration acids and odors—Saves Colors

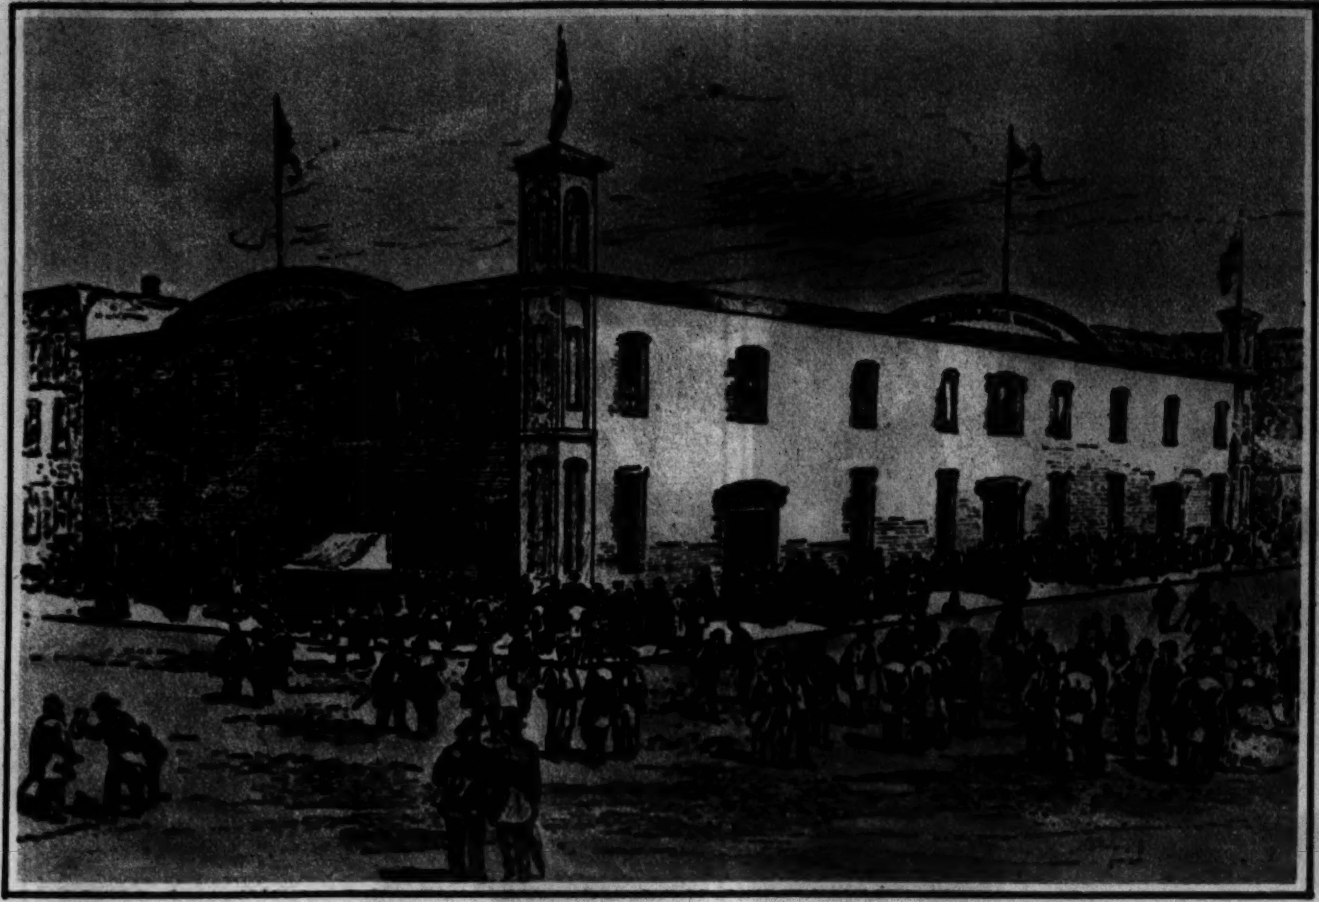
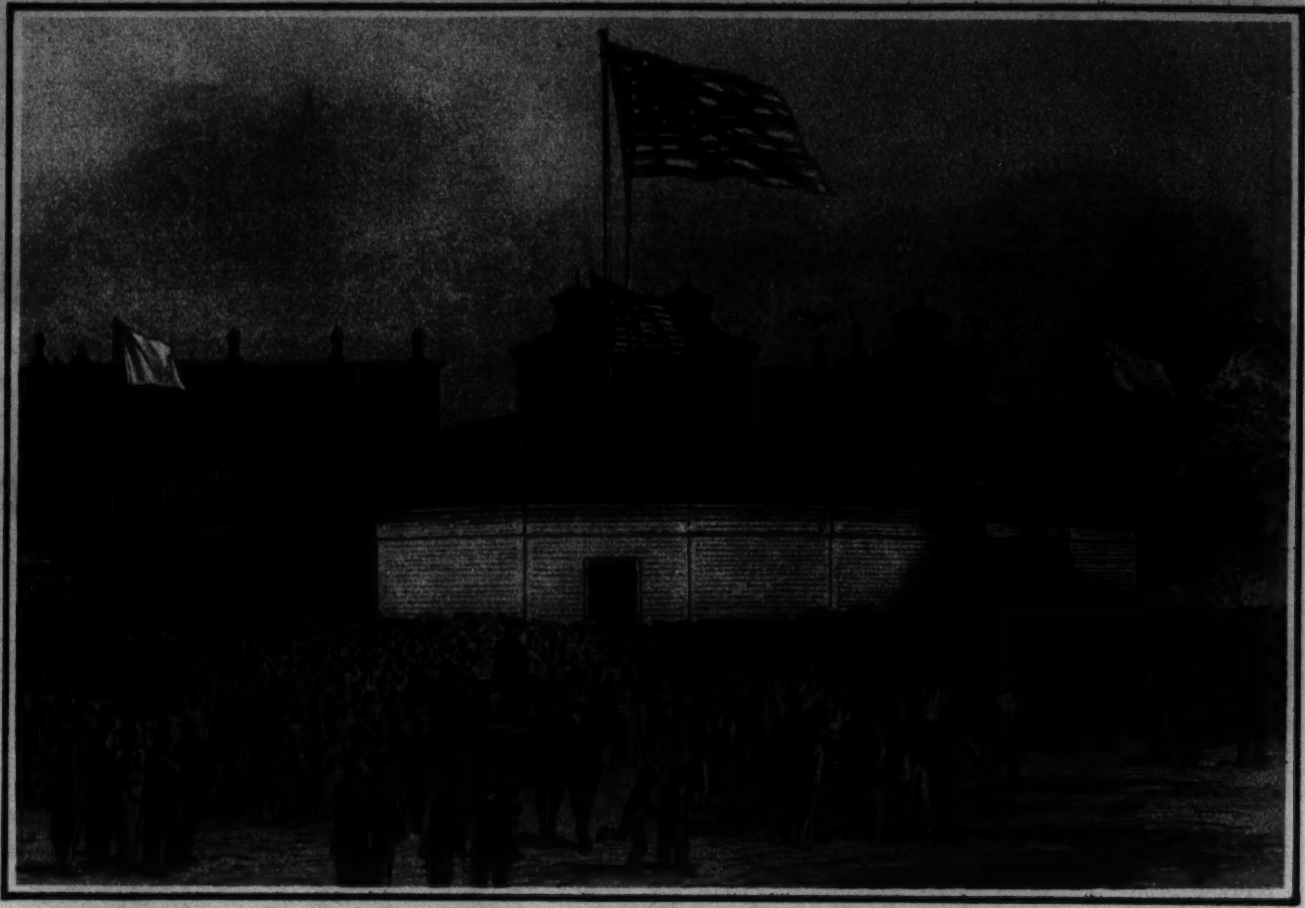
CHICAGO—THE CONVENTION CITY

This page of old-time national convention pictures presents the congresses of those bodies of delegates who, gathered in the midwestern metropolis, balloted for presidential and vice-presidential candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties. Since 1860, seventy-two years ago, when Abraham Lincoln was nominated in the Wigwam, Chicago has witnessed the choice of eight of the thirteen chief magistrates of the republic who were nominated for that office.

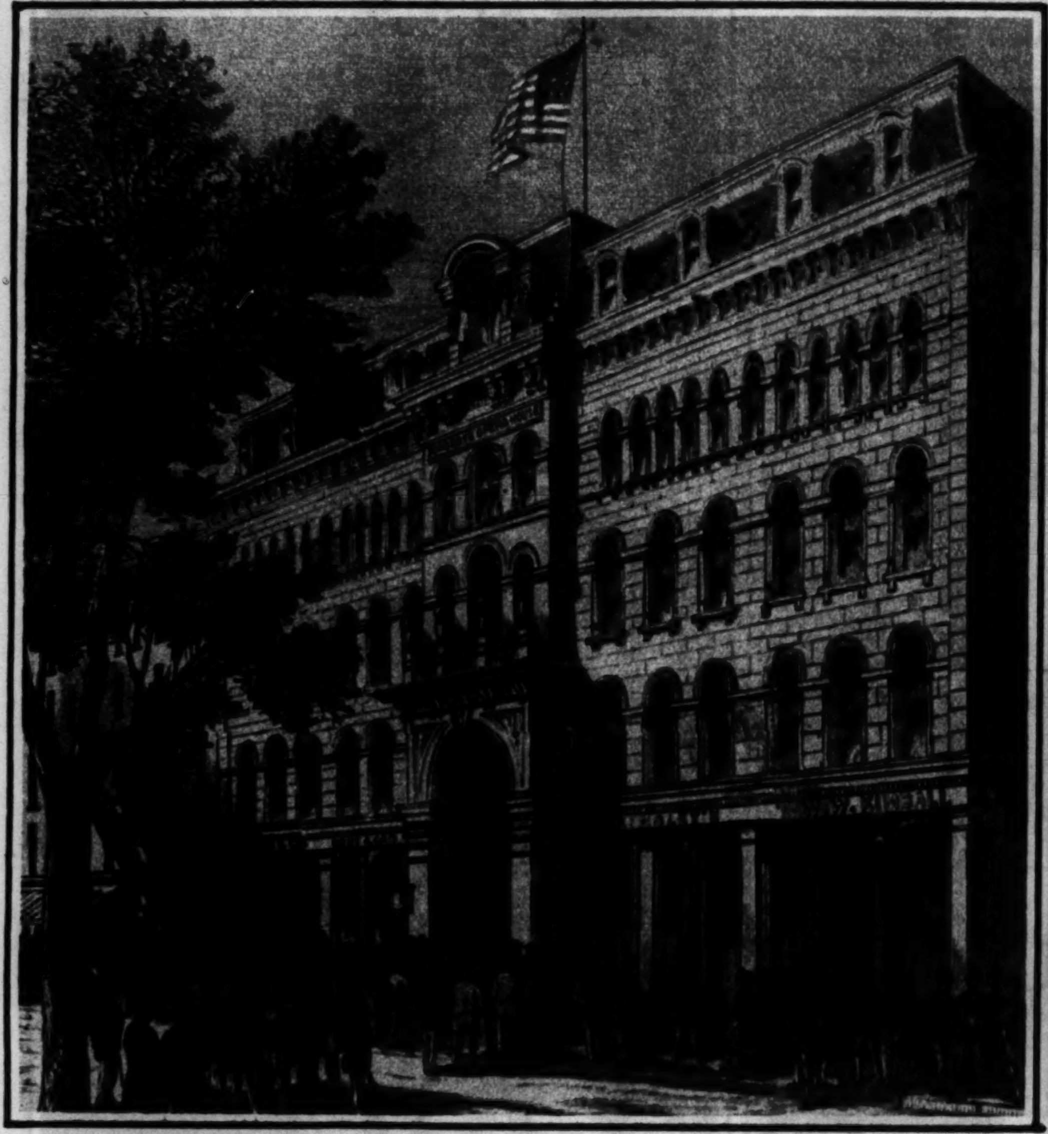


THE REPUBLICAN WIGWAM, where Abraham Lincoln was nominated in 1860. Hannibal Hamlin was his running mate in this first campaign.



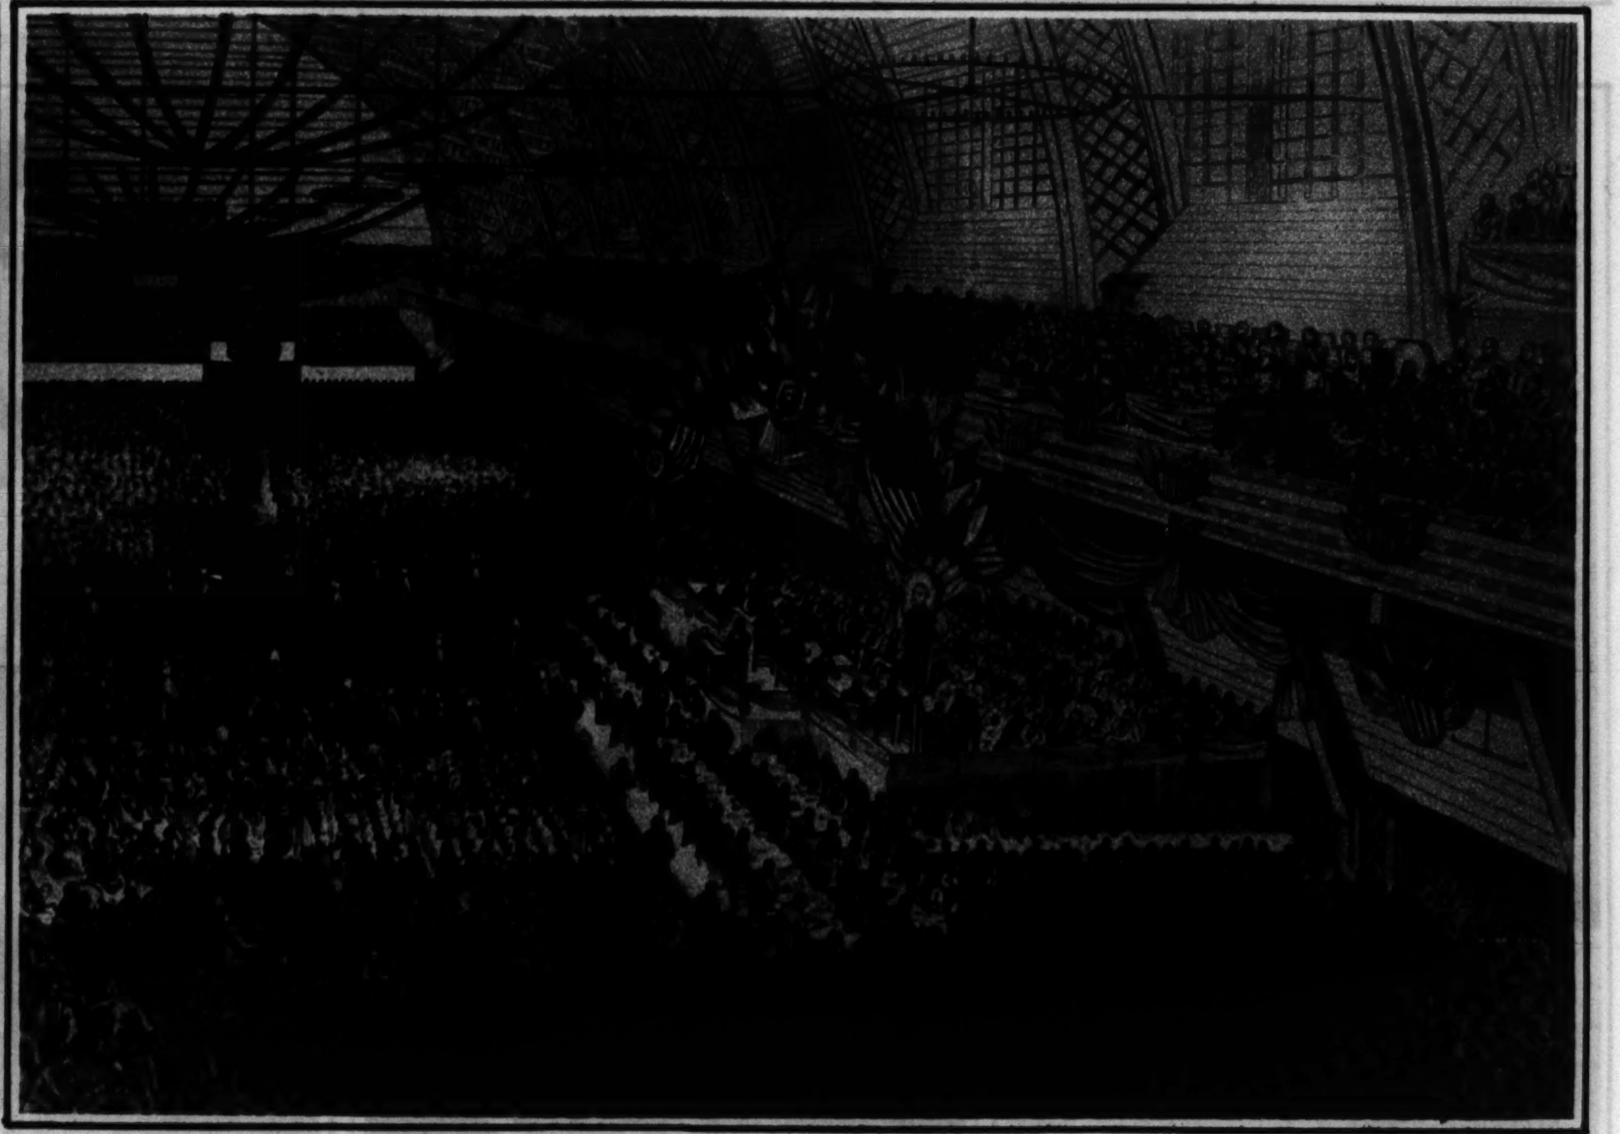
THE TENT in which George B. McClellan was chosen standard bearer for the Democratic party in 1864. The general was defeated in the election by Lincoln.

(Print from John H. Miller.)



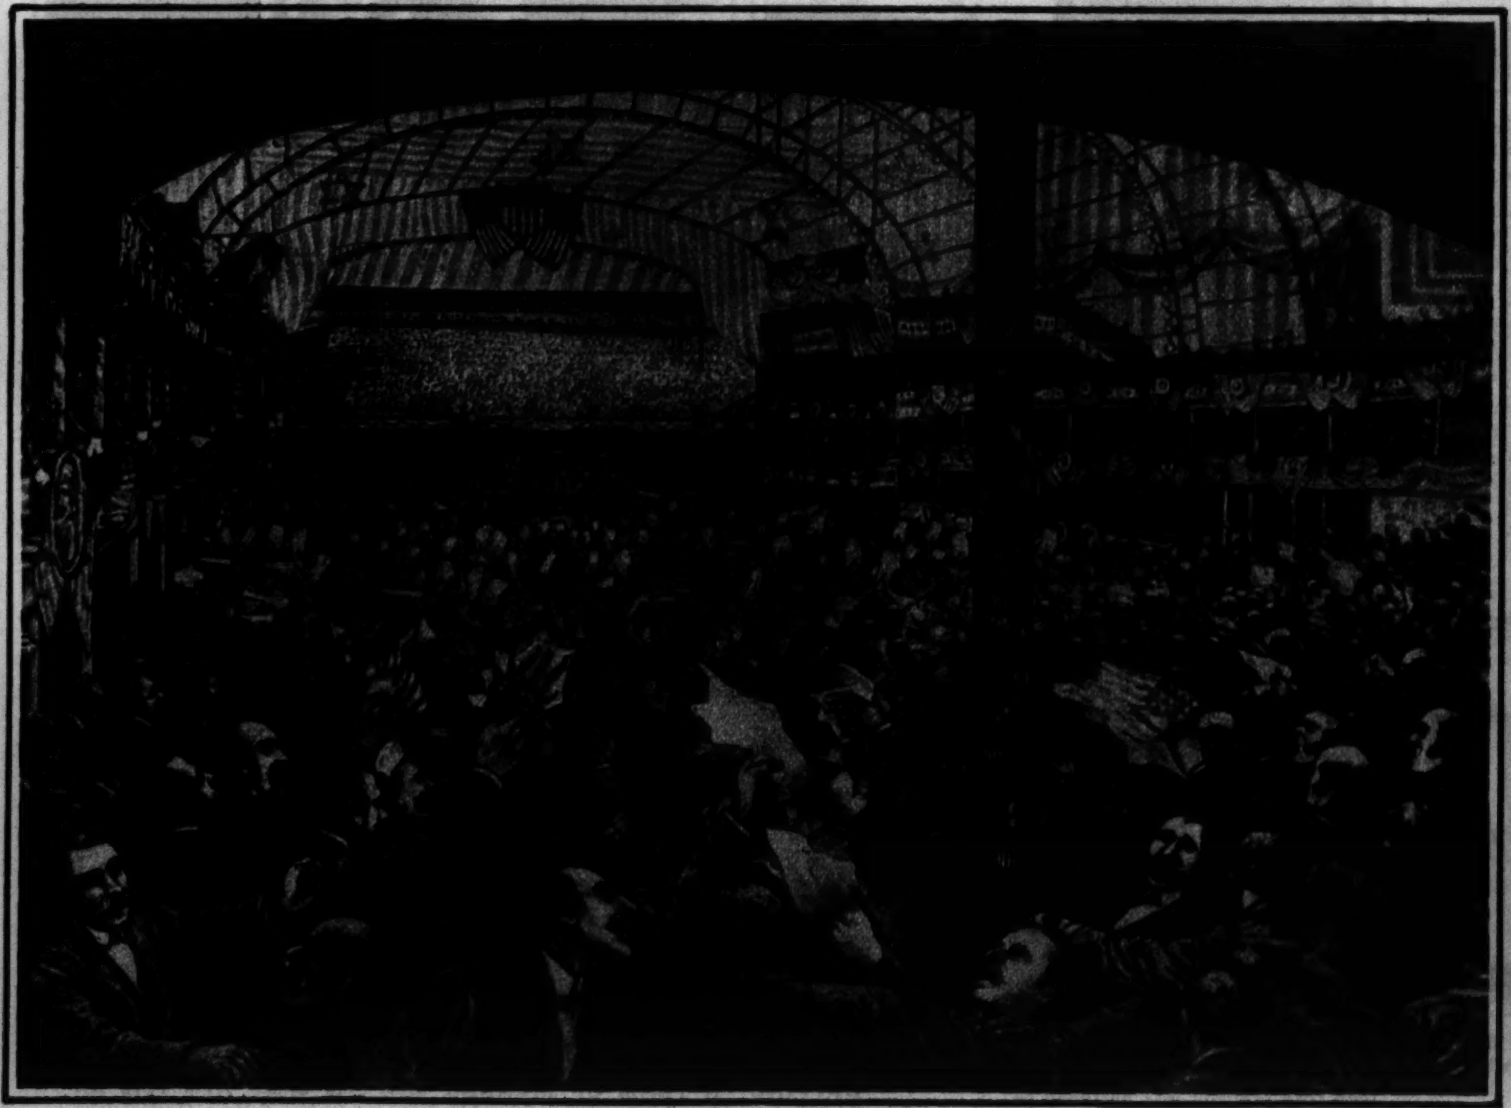
CROSBY'S OPERA HOUSE, then the finest building in the west, was the scene of U. S. Grant's selection to lead the Republicans to victory in 1868.

(Print from Harper's Weekly, supplied by John H. Miller.)



AT THE EXPOSITION HALL in 1884 Grover Cleveland was nominated by the Democrats and in November defeated James G. Blaine, Republican, for the presidency.

(Print from Leslie's Illustrated Paper, supplied by John H. Miller.)



IN 1888, when Gov. Foraker seconded the nomination of Senator Sherman for the Republican presidential candidacy, the artist caught this scene of enthusiasm. On the eighth ballot, however, Benjamin Harrison was nominated, and defeated Cleveland in the November election.

THE REPUBLICANS in 1884 met in the same hall as that in which the Democrats selected Cleveland, and nominated James G. Blaine of Maine.

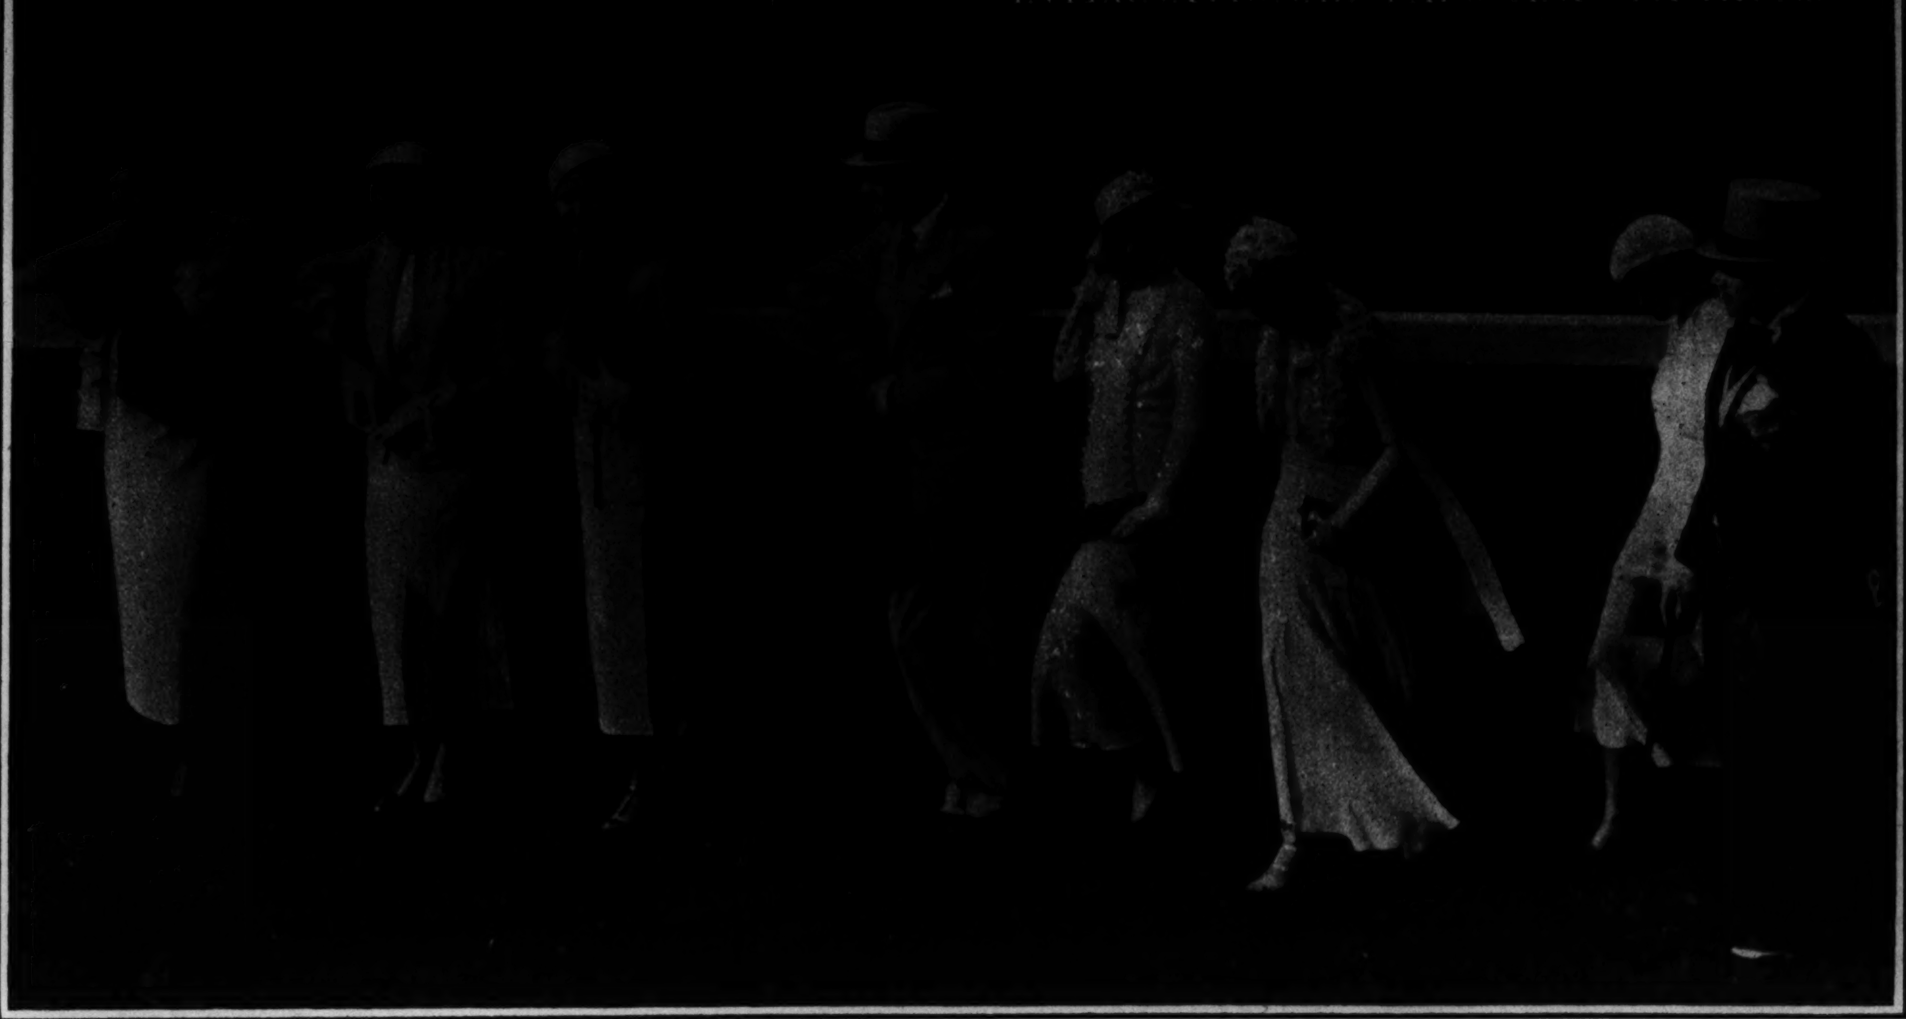
INTERNATIONAL FADS AND FASHIONS



FAIR RAILBIRDS at Berlin's Grunewald race course display these costumes as an advance showing of what the fair citizens of Germany's capital will wear.

AT A FASHIONABLE LONDON WEDDING, one of the guests wore this diminutive hat of the "boater" style, with checked coat and spotted scarf.

THIS COIFFURE worn by Mme. Roube-Tanski of Paris, with its two sharp, fang-like bangs is inelegantly known as the "buck-tooth."

THIS GRECIAN FROCK of pale rose crepeon was designed in the classic Grecian mode by Schiaparelli of Paris. The scarf-belt is of rose and deep red crepe.

SWEET AND LOVELY, ISN'T SHE! And that goes for Irene Taylor's songs on the air, as you and you and you, who have asked for a picture of this Dallas, Texas, girl, attest. When she does "Mighty Lak a Rose," with Charles Agnew's singing ensemble—say, it's luscious. (James Hargis Connelly photo.)

RUGGERIO RUDOLPHO EUGENIO (RUSS TO YOU) COLUMBO rode in on the crest of the radio barimoan—beg pardon, baritone—wave this season as the Romeo of Song. If this voice of the golden west (San Francisco) isn't the King of Crooners he may be the Croon Prince.

MONGOLIAN PRINCESS—This and the three other Asian photographs on this page were taken by the Citroen-Haardt Trans-Asiatic expedition, which recently completed an 8,000 mile motor trip of ten months from Syria to Peiping to demonstrate the feasibility of motor travel across Asia. This fair member of tribal royalty is seen in full regalia during a feast day in Kalgan, 100 miles from Peiping, and just within the ancient walls of China.

If Your Child "Eats Poorly" In Summer

Here's a Way to Make Him Hungry Even for Vegetables and Milk

I have used Ovaltine with perfect results for stimulating the appetites of my two children, one five and the other three. They seem to eat better and are able to assimilate their food much better than usual. Both my children are very fond of Ovaltine and in my own case I find a cup of hot Ovaltine at night helps me to sleep and rest better.

This Swiss Food Discovery By Actually Creating The Sensation of Hunger Offsets Loss of Appetite In Summer . . . Adds Weight At The Rate of A Pound A Week. . . Curbs Nervousness Remarkably Accept a Trial Package—Note the Coupon Below

LOSS of appetite in summer is not natural in a child; for the vacation rest-period is the one time above all when a child should be storing up energy and replenishing his vital-reserve. When he should be compensating for the drain of the previous school year and building up for the next.

So if your child eats poorly in summer, try this remarkable way to make "finicky" eaters eat! A way that does not merely tempt the appetite—but which actually creates the sensation of hunger.

Immediately you start, you'll note the difference. Meal-time fussing becomes a thing of the past. Not only will you find your child eager to eat (even such foods as spinach, carrots and lettuce)—but you'll find him willing to drink double the usual amount of milk each day.

A remarkable food discovery from Switzerland will achieve this result for your child. It is called Ovaltine. In summer you simply give it shaken-up with cold milk. And children love its taste.

How It Literally "Creates" Hunger

Ovaltine is made by a special vacuum process, which makes it utterly different from any other food-drink in the world.

First: Besides being extremely nourishing and easy to digest, it is particularly rich in the appetite-producing Vitamin B.

Second: And much more important—Ovaltine contains a high proportion of a remarkable food property called "diastase." This substance has the power to digest the starch content of other foods in the stomach. Thus, Ovaltine will actually digest 4 to 5 times its own weight of the starch content of the other foods a child eats. And the diet of the average child contains about 60% of starchy foods.

Ovaltine not only aids a child's digestion, in this way, but speeds up the processes and empties the stomach sooner. This makes a child hungry. For hunger is largely a sensation caused by the walls of an empty stomach drawing together.

Quicker Digestion

This speeding up of the digestive processes is tremendously important. For specialists will tell you that the child with slow digestion is the one who eats poorly—who shuns vegetables—who objects to drinking milk.

But once digestive processes are accelerated by the diastatic action of Ovaltine, a definite change takes place. You see the result at once. The old objection to everyday foods gradually disappears. And even a "vegetable-hunger" is built up day by day.

Milk, too, is taken twice as readily when it is mixed with Ovaltine. And Ovaltine has a delicious taste that the fussiest child is unable to resist.

Start Today

For the sake of your child, we urge you to try Ovaltine. By doing so, you can make this a real health-summer for him.

Results will surprise you. Note the almost immediate difference in appetite—in the way he acts at meals. Note, too, the attendant increase in weight, in nerve poise and in strength.

Give Ovaltine at breakfast always—at meals and between meals. It is extremely economical to serve. For it is all food-concentrate—and contains no added sugar to give it bulk and cheapen its cost. You add your own sugar at home. So don't be misled if you're offered a sweet-tasting "sugar-mixture" substitute.

You can get Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store. Or send the coupon below for a generous trial supply . . . Notice the offer of a 50c professional shaker which is now being given free.

NOTE: Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. It is also highly recommended by physicians for sleeplessness—for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged.

For the Child who Doesn't "Build Up" and Sleeps Poorly

My little girl was tall for her age, but couldn't seem to gain weight. However, since we started giving her Ovaltine she has developed a splendid healthy appetite and is filling out nicely. She really looks like a different child and sleeps much better, too. I always give her a glass of Ovaltine at bed-time and we never hear a peep out of her until 8:30 or 9:00 o'clock in the morning, when she knows it's time for breakfast—and more Ovaltine.

For the Child Who Is Underweight and Nervous

When I got my little girl's health report from school, she was 10 pounds underweight, so, as you can imagine, I was very much worried. I read about Ovaltine, and decided to give it a trial.

Anna, who is seven years old, gained 2 pounds the first 2 weeks. I think Ovaltine is a wonderful help to her nerves, and it makes her sleep soundly the whole night through.

HOT WEATHER STYLES COMBINE PRE AND POST WAR IDEALS

Crackers Far Cry from Old Modest Selves

Novel Shapes, Luscious Fillings Find Way Into Newest Recipes.

By Mary Meade.

CRACKERS to the right of us—crackers to the left of us—! Did you ever see a year in which the cook was more beset on all sides by tantalizing boxes, cans, tubes, jars, and paper bags full of the bakers' most versatile of offerings—crackers?

Not just modest soda crackers, either—although even these smooth, bland customers are putting on airs in shapes, sizes, and topography, and are storming the kitchen door with startling new ideas for making the family soda cracker conscious. But luscious golden brown cheese affairs are more what I mean—small, crisp, midget ones, and larger fellows, which sport four, six, or eight corners, or pattern themselves after pillows, pretzels, and undersized lady fingers.

Satisfying Salted Crackers.

Or, if you've a yen for things salty, say the word and you will be deluged with those satisfying after school favorites—salty soda crackers. The baker may have given them existence singly, as twins, or as triplets. And they may come to you in squares or in long strips, each one Siamesed onto a couple of brothers.

Then, if you're a true cracker hound, you've already discovered the crusty things that are being done for us in the line of crinkly, toasted wheat crackers . . . simply melt-in-your-mouth, rich, buttery wafers . . . ginger snaps that stay snappy, thanks to tight cans and airproof wrappings . . . puffed up and pinched off affairs, just made for oyster stews and steaming bowls of soup . . . crisp numbers featuring whole wheat, graham, fruit, and chocolate (not all at once, you understand) . . . and, as a final flourish, the not too distant cracker relatives—zwieback, rusks, pretzels, and the whole family of filled wafers, and captivatingly short cookies.

Promise of Crunchy Future.

With such a display of crunchy goodness . . . just made to accompany long, cold drinks and platters of frosty ice cream . . . lying in wait at the corner grocery or perched in a comforting row on our cupboard shelves, the summer gives promise of being a most pleasant time for hostess and guests alike—not to mention the well satisfied family.

But serving crackers "as is," pleasant pastime as it may seem, is really not half so exciting as serving them as shivery ice box cakes, juicy meat loaves, pies, puddings, and omelets! And that actually is what the up-to-date cook is going to do this hot 1932 summer. For if ever we must jog ourselves out of food ruts and campaign for seductive new dishes for our three meals a day—and, what's more, dishes that are simple, speedy, and cool to concoct—summer's that time.

CHOCOLATE WAFER ICEBOX CAKE.

So here's the first suggestion for cracker cookery—a delightfully chilly one for your warmest day this week. To make it, blend one-half cup of sugar with two and one-fourth tablespoons of cornstarch, one-fourth teaspoon salt, and one and one-eighth cup of strong coffee. Place the mixture in a double boiler and cook, stirring until thick. Cool. Whip two cups of cream till it holds its shape and fold into the coffee mixture. Line the bottom and sides of a generous mold or baking pan with chocolate wafers and pour in a third of the cream mixture. Add a layer of wafers, another third of cream, more wafers, and the remaining cream. Top the whole with a last layer of wafers, evenly arranged. Chill in the refrigerator for about six hours and serve in squares or wedges. For an informal but festive occasion unmold and serve on a large platter, garnished with whipped cream.

CRACKER WALNUT PIE.

Now for the debut of soda crackers. Take sixteen of them—the large, square, saltless variety—and roll fine. It will save time and disorder if you will place them all together in a paper bag and roll them in it. Then blend them with one-half cup of soft but not melted butter and one and one-half tablespoons brown sugar. Put this mixture into a large buttered pie tin to form a crust on the bottom and sides. Bake the crust in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) about ten minutes. Cool and fill with the following mixture: One small can sweetened canned milk, one-fourth cup of orange juice, the grated rind of half an orange, one-half teaspoon lemon extract, and one generous cup of ground English walnut meats. Blend and turn into a baked cracker shell. Chill and serve pie fashion, topped with whipped cream.

It isn't, however, just our dessert ideas that need perking up this summer. In these days of depressed purses we're continually on the still hunt for ways of making small appetizing bites from yesterday into large, luscious mouthfuls for today. Here again crackers, all kinds and all flavors, lend a most helping hand.

Soda crackers, for instance, crumbled coarsely, will inveigle four eggs into doing the work of six in a milk and egg scramble. They will join forces with salmon or minced leftover fresh fish and make them go just twice as far in baked loaf form and at the same time give them a quite delightful new flavor and undeniable fluffiness. Combined with flavoring, an egg, and a bare three-fourths pound of ground cooked pork or beef, they will make a whole platter of nubby little meat cutlets—plenty for

Fashionable Women in Europe Are Spending Their Days and Evenings in Informal Cotton and Linen Costumes

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A change in Paris styles that may prove to be as devastating as the present world-wide crisis is distinctly boded by hot weather fashions. It is in spirit like the crisis, for it consists of getting down to bed rock, hard pan, or some such solid, natural basis. The light of flaming youth, with its blazing lipstick insignia, looks as if it was about to splutter and go out of style, perhaps permanently. A new ideal is rising to represent a new kind of chic. This chic is a mixture of pre-war and post-war notions of femininity.

Looking at the hot weather modes as worn in Paris, one sees that the clothes created this summer by the couturiers are being worn. These clothes, in the dressmaking salons, seemed to indicate no radical changes, but to mark time, rather. It's women, the wearers of smart clothes, who are making them seem so different.

Cotton Clothes for Daytime.

Women of the haut monde are spending their days in the most informal of cotton or linen sports clothes, at the various resorts, and they are like figures of bronze along the beaches, for their skin gleams with oil, shorn locks are cast to the winds in childish disarray, and feet are worn as Eve wore 'em, plus a strap or two and a pair of soles.

This we are all accustomed to, but when these same ladies take no recourse to the make up box after sunset, but appear in cotton or linen evening frocks, that have obviously come fresh from the laundry, the person with eyes sits up and stares.

Pre-War Spirit.

There is an emphatic pre-war spirit about the embroidered and plain linen evening dresses from Chanel and Worth which are the last word in Paris chic for hot nights. And the natural looking faces above these frocks, shorn of the artificial beauty aids that have come to be necessities, have a crying likeness to the belle of that epoch when a little rice powder was the limit of make up. Fur capes and even feather boas carry this further still.

In the same picture, and directly opposed to it, are the short lacquered curls that make the smart coiffure and are so very post-war. (The lacquer is put in in the evening and combed out in the morning.) The fashionable head, with its modeling in high relief because of the absence of the make up mask, and with its hair in sculptured curls or straight sweeps, reminds you forcibly of something in bronze or marble.

Further in the direction of absolute modernity goes the free, athletic silhouette that looks absolutely corsetless. The simple, natural line of the newest evening frocks makes this silhouette strikingly obvious.

Artificiality Absent.

Out of this combination comes the new mode de Paris, uniting the naturalness of the pre and the post-war ideals of dress. It is actually a mode that gets down to brass tacks and cuts out the artificiality and inflation of late years. Chanel, the great, has done a lot to bring about this return to a kind of fundamental beauty. Her hot weather evening frocks are made most often of handkerchief linen, patterned with stripes, tiny bouquets of flowers, or plain.

These dresses are simple, with plain bodices and ankle length skirts, and they are often buttoned down the back. She has, also, ankle length frocks and short jackets, strictly tailored and slim, made of a silk and wool shantung as transparent as georgette, and suitable to the semi-arctic climate of Paris.

A Riotous Success.

Worth's frocks of white or pastel blue eyelet embroidered linen are a riotous success, too, and they're sent every day to the laundry without the slightest damage. The linen in these frocks is rather heavy, and calls for no foundation slip. Lyolene's red and white cotton frock (American goods) is another popular frock and it is very pre-war with ruffled skirt and big, big hat.

The huge, cart wheel hat is much in vogue in Paris. Reboux and Jeanne Lanvin o. k. this hat, and it is worn everywhere with formal frocks. It looks very pre-war, but is actually modern, being weather light and extremely supple.

Ostrich Boas Are Back.

Chanel is behind the feather boa, made in her house, of uncurled ostrich, and matching the organdy frock with which it is worn. It is worn like a scarf and not as the belles of the nineties wore it, at all. Chanel also has on some of her evening gowns very long flower garlands, matching the dress in color and worn like scarfs.

Mme. Jeanne Lanvin sponsored the fox or chinchilla cape to wear with a big hat and summer frock, early this spring. It is, however, more often worn with the cotton evening dress in Paris this summer. The tiniest of jackets, capes, or shawls trimmed with fox fur are worn a great deal in Paris.

An Evening Ensemble.

The fur is so placed as to be heatless, as you can see by consulting the figure shown at the extreme left. This is an evening ensemble from Heim, and the jacket is the smallest edition of the bolero, made of white organdy with the wide armholes circled by silver fox fur. The frock is of white starched organdy flowered with red roses, and the box plaited skirt is a smart note.

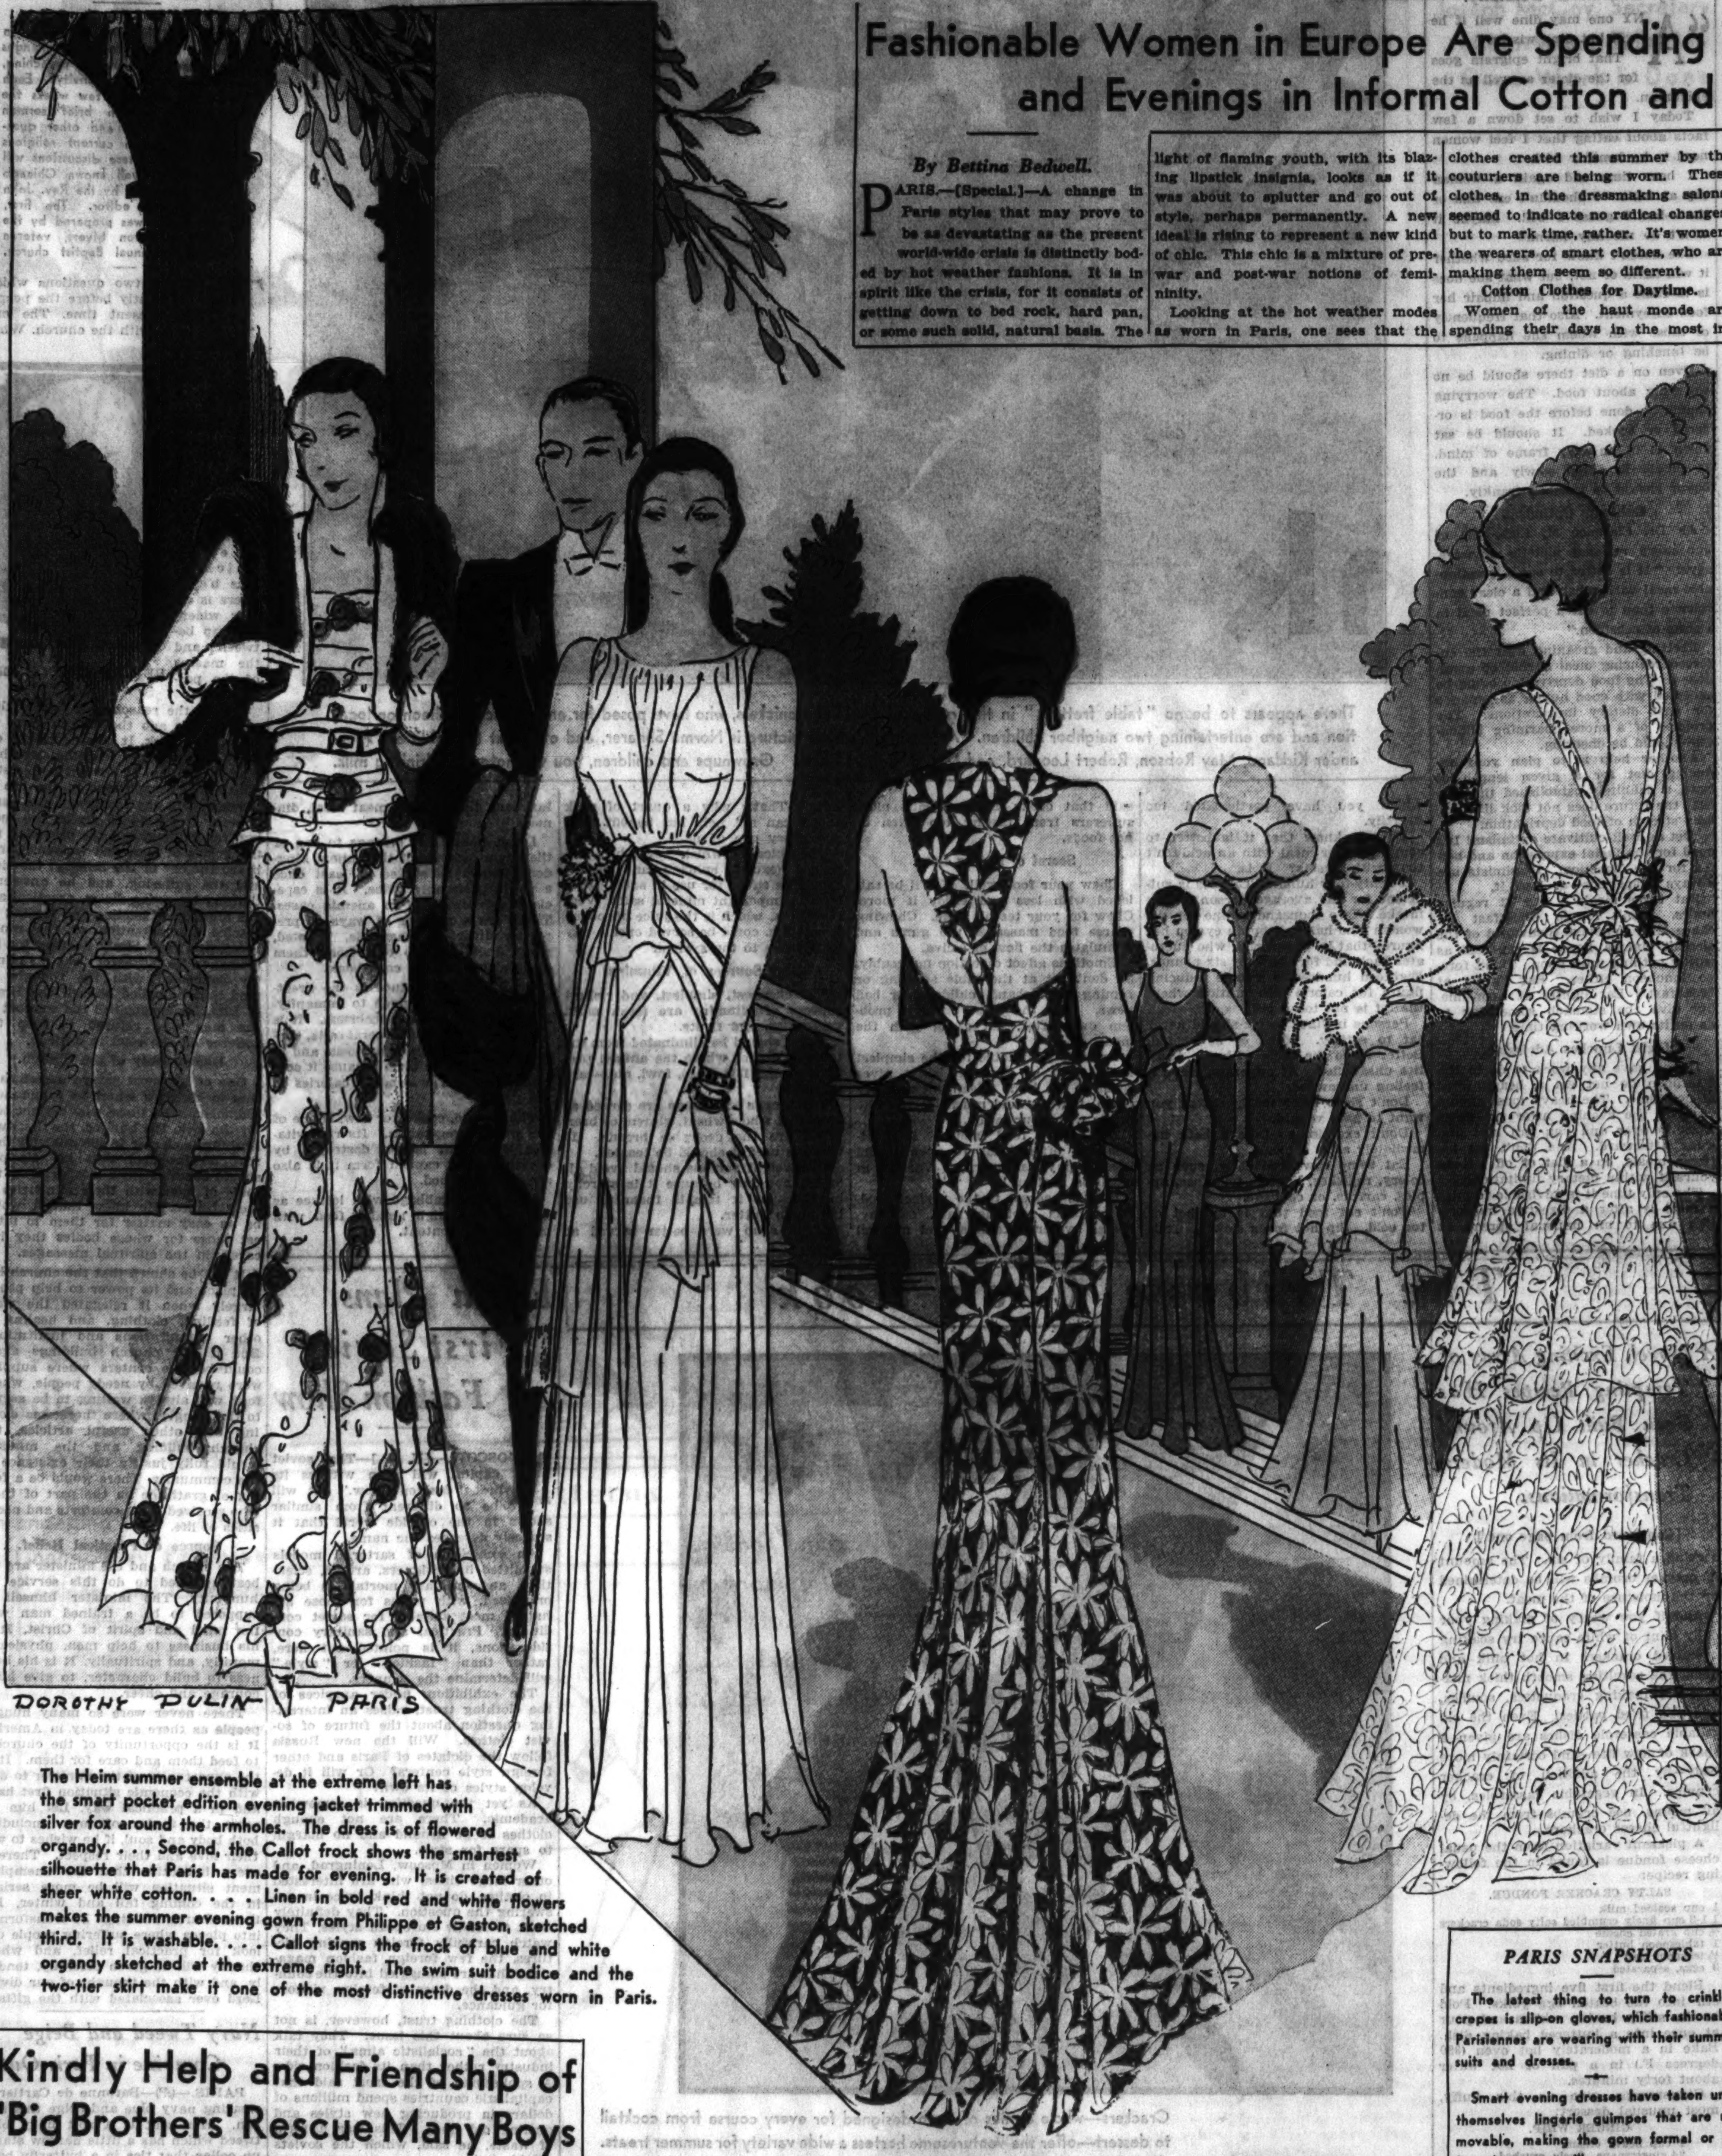
Next on the right is the ideal summer evening frock, which has no dateline, but a permanent chic of natural sculptured beauty. It is white, and the softly full bodice with its modest bateau neckline is very new. The full skirt and the draped sash yoke combined with the bodice make an evening silhouette that is the smartest and the most significant in Paris. Callot Soeurs created this beautiful frock.

Printed Linen Gown.

The figure in the foreground shows a red and white printed linen evening frock with an amusing décolleté. The front of this frock is shown in the background, and, as you see, the neckline is rather high and round in front and is a triangle of linen in back. The skirt of this frock is gored and very wide at the bottom. The model is from Philippe et Gaston.

At the extreme right is another stunning evening gown from Callot Soeurs made of blue and white printed organdy with a two tier skirt and a bodice that is high in front and like a sunburn swim suit in back. At the waistline in back there is a double frill of the material. With this frock goes a chinchilla cape, shown in the background.

[Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.]



The Heim summer ensemble at the extreme left has the smart pocket edition evening jacket trimmed with silver fox around the armholes. The dress is of flowered organdy. . . . Second, the Callot frock shows the smartest silhouette that Paris has made for evening. It is created of sheer white cotton. . . . Linen in bold red and white flowers makes the summer evening gown from Philippe et Gaston, sketched third. It is washable. . . . Callot signs the frock of blue and white organdy sketched at the extreme right. The swim suit bodice and the two-tier skirt make it one of the most distinctive dresses worn in Paris.

Kindly Help and Friendship of 'Big Brothers' Rescue Many Boys

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

VARIETY is the spice of life. Change is refreshing. So a man is going to talk to you today about children.

He's Joseph M. McCoy, general secretary of the Big Brother movement in New York. I went to call on him one afternoon in his office at the Big Brother headquarters to find out what his experience had brought him that would be of interest to the fathers of boys.

Mr. McCoy is a father himself. He has a son and a daughter. Before he became the executive in this important movement he had worked personally with boys. He has a rich, wide experience and the perspective that comes from an acquaintance with the histories of these underprivileged boys, looked at through the eyes of a father.

So, when Joseph McCoy talks about boys he knows what he's talking about. He had so many things to say that would interest fathers that I wish I had space for them all.

"What," I asked him, "do the Big Brothers do for these boys whose homes and parents have failed them?"

Quick as a flash came the answer: "It's not so much what the Big Brother does as what he is, and what he stands for, that weighs with the boy." Here's somebody fine who really cares what happens to this youth who has gotten into trouble or who is on the edge of it. That's what counts with the boy.

"Sometimes it is the fact that the man is importan in the business or athletic world that gives a boy the feeling that he 'belongs'—that he is of importance, too. The fact, for instance, that he has an appointment at 2:30 to meet his Big Brother, Mr. Hastings, we'll say, at 15 Wall street, that he is shown in and sits across from him at his big desk, just as Mr. Hastings' business associates do, is something to make a boy sit up and look up. He sees that this fine and important man really cares what becomes of him."

Boys Gradually Change.

Here Mr. McCoy stopped a minute and his eyes twinkled. He went on: "As these men become interested in the boys, gradually a change is noticeable in the boys. They will begin to keep themselves clean, change their personal habits, and perhaps even part their hair just the way their Big Alarming Increase in Divorces Traced to Women Wage Earners and Low Birth Rate

By Doris Blake.

FROM the most recent statistical analysis of American divorce one learns that, alarming as our divorce records sound, there is still hope for the good old family institution.

Divorce is not, as popularly supposed, a universal American habit. Almost two-thirds of divorces come from the childless married population. The respective percentages of divorced families classified according to the number of children affected reads:

	Per cent.
No children	63.0
One child	20.5
Two children	9.5
Three children	3.9
Four children	1.7
Five children or more	1.4

As children increase arithmetically divorce correspondingly decreases at a geometrical rate. In other words, the more children the less divorce!

The foregoing fact and figures are presented in a study of divorce by Alfred Cahen, Ph. D. [Columbia University press.]

Dr. Cahen observes that newspaper accounts frequently arouse sympathy for the ill-fated children of divorced parents. Whereas the annual quota of such children is less than one-third the number of divorced persons, but they attract publicity. Only about 7 per cent of American divorces are granted to couples with three or more children. Three, according to Dr. Cahen, is traditionally the normal American family quota.

Danger of Childless Home.

The astonishing 71 per cent fatality of childless American marriages, Dr. Cahen summarizes, indicates a low chance of success for marital happiness where children do not force the preservation of the home.

Another feature that is affecting for the better the stability of the home is the depression. Divorce figures for 1930, a year of financial depression, show a substantial decrease in the divorce rate. However, whether permanent value may be applied to this factor in divorce decrease is questionable. Every year given as one of divorce decline, over a long period of study, was either during or following a year of commercial depression. Fewer marriages during depression eras are recorded. Inability of the wife to earn a living during depression times influences the figures, too. The cost of attorneys' fees is prohibitive.

But more sober living is practiced and the hope of permanent good accruing to young couples out of the depression years lies in the fact that the highest number of divorces falls during the third year of married life. The habit of sober living may become fixed in the young marriage experimenter. It is the hope, anyway, for young couples. There is a rapid rise in divorces virtually from the wedding day until the third year of marriage, Dr. Cahen reports, and then commences a slow and steady decline in divorce frequency.

Children Are Guardians of Married Life

Women Wage Earners, Low Birth Rate, Economic Causes Hasten Divorce.

Illogical Comparison.

Dr. Cahen disapproves of the popular theory of comparing the number of divorces annually with the number of marriages. It is an erroneous form of calculation. No logical relationship exists between the two. Few people, contends Dr. Cahen, are divorced the same year they are married. He does not minimize the alarming spread of the divorce evil, however, which in 1929 took toll of 201,468 couples in the United States. Over 200,000 divorces granted in a single year, or about one every two minutes, as Dr. Cahen calculates.

"It is evident," he reports, "that about 18 per cent of all American marriages, or more than one in every six, definitely ends in divorce. Over half a million men, women, and children are directly affected every year by the grist of the divorce mill."

Court records give little information about the actual causes of divorce. Divorce applicants must fit their grievances to whatever grounds the statutes permit. But from a study of opinions voiced by the leading authorities on American divorce. Dr. Cahen extracts four important factors contributing to increasing divorce:

1. The rise of economic production.
2. The growth of cities.
3. The increase of women wage earners.
4. The declining birth rate.

Contributing Causes.

These are given as chief environmental causes, but there are interrelated forces that contribute largely to the American family breakdown. The change in public opinion toward divorce is one. Divorce has become gradually [over a sixty-three year period of study] less and less of a social stigma. This change in public opinion toward divorce corresponds to the growth of individualism and the opinion that the happiness of parties concerned is of dominant importance.

A declining belief in the family as an institution ordained by God and a weakening of religious attitudes toward marriage is another factor of influence.

Conditions of life which strain the mental and nervous constitution to the breaking point are destined to result in discord within the domestic circle.

Value of Additional Child.

The outstanding conclusion in Dr. Cahen's study of divorce is that children preserve the home.

"Fewer children and briefer marriages are two trends positively associated with divorce," says Cahen. "Divorce is not an American family habit, because five cases in every six come from that small class of American marriages bearing no children or but one child. Children preserve the home, since only 8 per cent of American couples possessing children end in divorce, while 71 per cent of childless marriages terminate in divorce. Furthermore, every additional child cuts in half the chances of divorce."

Sky Raids

By Eleanor Jewett.

Through summer skies the fleecy clouds
Sail like great silver ships at sea;
And little birds are scouting planes—
Or that is what they seem to me.

I lie in hiding in our grass
And watch them as they billow by,
Sometimes I count them as they pass
In show formation on the sky.

They sail against the sun, I s'pose,
But I don't think he even knows!

Take to Dieting with a Merry Quip

Fretting at Table Does More Harm to Face and Figure than an Exact Calorie Count Can Ever Repair.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

"ANY one may dine well if he will but dine wisely!"

That bright epigram goes for the dieter as well as the epicurean.

Today I wish to set down a few facts about eating that I feel women need to be familiar with.

I hear time and again a woman say at table "I shouldn't eat this or that—but I guess I will. Maybe it won't do me any harm."

She doesn't know for sure whether it will harm or not, but what she does is to raise a question and impair her food enjoyment. Also that frequently of those with whom she happens to be lunching or dining.

Even on a diet there should be no worrying about food. The worrying should be done before the food is ordered or cooked. It should be sat down to in an easy frame of mind. It should be eaten slowly and the flavor should be relished frankly.

Cultivate Optimism.

As Dr. Clarence M. Lieb, one of our more rational dietetic advisers, says: "It is better to eat a questionable meal with relish and a clear conscience than to eat a perfect meal in a state of rebellion."

Fretting and groaning over the enforced reducing meal should be abandoned. The food deprivation could be accepted with good humor as penance for past dietary indiscretions. The promise of a more charming silhouette should be cheering.

Another help is to plan your reducing diet for a given length of time, a definitely established time, so that the future does not look like one long stretch of food deprivation.

Just as well cultivate optimism! It's good for the facial expression and better for the digestion. Pessimists are always dyspeptics—or look it.

Eat three meals a day at regular hours. Don't forego breakfast because Miss Genevive Strawford of the elegant cinema figure is reported as eating nothing until noon. Don't forego luncheon either. Eat lightly at breakfast. Eat lightly at noontime, but give the stomach something to do on its own working time.

Light Lunches Advisable.

If you have any work to do in the afternoon do not eat a heavy meal at noontime. The heavy meal should come in the evening after the day's work is over and you can rest and relax afterward. And don't eat between meals, on a diet or off. Keep yourself within dietary limitations.

The only time it is advisable to miss a meal is after a digestive indiscretion due to an unusual spread at which you have participated too heartily.

There appears to be no "table fretting" in this group of filmland picnickers, who have posed for an al fresco luncheon on location and are entertaining two neighbor children. At the right of the picture is Norma Shearer, and others at the table are Alexander Kirkland, May Robson, Robert Leonard, and Mrs. J. Robert Rubin. Grownups and children, you will note, are drinking milk.

Do you know that it is better to complete your meal with an acid fruit than with sweets? It is.

Twenty-four hundred calories is sufficient for the average person's daily intake. Two thousand is fine for the woman who has to keep an eye on her figure—that is, the woman who fluctuates back and forth five or six pounds. Eighteen hundred is a sane reducing figure for calorie computation where the fat is not too gross.

Persons inclined to fat should never eat to satisfy. None of us should. Better leave the table with the appetite unsatisfied. At any rate, leave it feeling uncrowded.

Don't sleep after meals unless you want to gain weight.

Don't exercise or take a bath immediately after a meal.

Eat some raw food daily, such as celery, radishes, lettuce, tomatoes, apples, carrots, or cabbage.

Don't eat food that is too hot or too cold. Sip hot foods slowly. It is said that cooks are notorious ulcer sufferers from tasting too often of hot foods.

Secret of Eating Less.

Chew your food well. You'll be satisfied with less and enjoy it more. Chew for your teeth's sake. Chewing coarse food massages the gums and stimulates the flow of saliva.

Emotions affect digestion noticeably. So don't sit at the table scolding or fuming at husband, children, or bad news. Talk the tense business problem over after, not along with the meal.

Arrange your table for the simplest home meal so that the sight gives relish to the food. Clean linen, dainty china, flowers—and music, if you like music with your meals.

Don't be a food faddist. A meatless diet often leads to anemia and loss of physical energy. Variety in meals is healthful.

Milk is nearest to the perfect food. It contains proteins, fats, carbohydrates, water, vitamins, and mineral salts. That's why a quart of milk a day can not help but benefit each and every one of us.

The juice in which vegetables are cooked (except spinach and sorrel) should be saved for use in soup. It is high in important mineral salts. Vegetable tea, which is the juice of cooked vegetables, could be served once a day with value to the system.

Best Sources of Vitamins.

The cheapest, simplest, and richest sources of vitamins are fresh milk, vegetables, and fruits.

Bread should be eliminated from the table at dinner where the animal proteins—meat, fish, eggs, fowl, etc.,—are served.

When eggs and bacon are served at breakfast whole wheat, gluten, or bran bread are the desirable breads. If white is used it should be toasted.

Overweight persons should avoid all bread, not only because it is starchy but because it tempts them to use too much butter.

Thick soup were better served at luncheon than at the meat meal, dinner.

Liver, because it belongs to one of the largest glands of the animal kingdom, should be served at least once a week, preferably twice. It is especially recommended in anemia cases. There are a number of ways of preparing liver—in casserole, roasted, mock duck, and so on. Look them up in an up to date cook book.

Dr. Lieb says lettuce is the greatest vegetable food given to humanity. He calls it nature's toothbrush. It is rich in vitamins and mineral salts, contains iron, counteracts acidosis, and to the corpulent is a boon because it contains less than a hundred calories to the pound.

The tomato, cooked or raw, is one of the wonder vegetables. Its rich vitamin C content is not destroyed by cooking, so in canned form it is also an excellent food.

Lieb ranks cabbage with lettuce as a protective, high residue food with big vitamin content.

serving a family of six. The amount of cracker crumbs will be determined by the moisture of the meat.

And if you weary of making your daily stint of white sauce try soaking crumbled crackers in hot milk and using the resulting smooth thick mixture for making croquettes, souffles, and pan fried patties. Even the old reliable casserole dishes are given a spark of new life—and certainly more body—by the addition of cracker crumbs. In vegetable casseroles, by all means, use crumbs from the delightful cheese crackers.

A pleasant variation from the usual cheese fondue is found in the following recipe:

SALTY CRACKER FONDUE.

1 cup scalded milk
1 1-3 cup finely crumbled salty soda crackers
½ cup grated cheese
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, separated

Blend the first five ingredients and stir into the beaten egg yolks. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites and pour at once into a buttered baking dish. Bake in a moderately hot oven (390 degrees F.) in a pan of hot water about forty minutes.

Gingersnaps give us this fluffy, most unusual dessert:

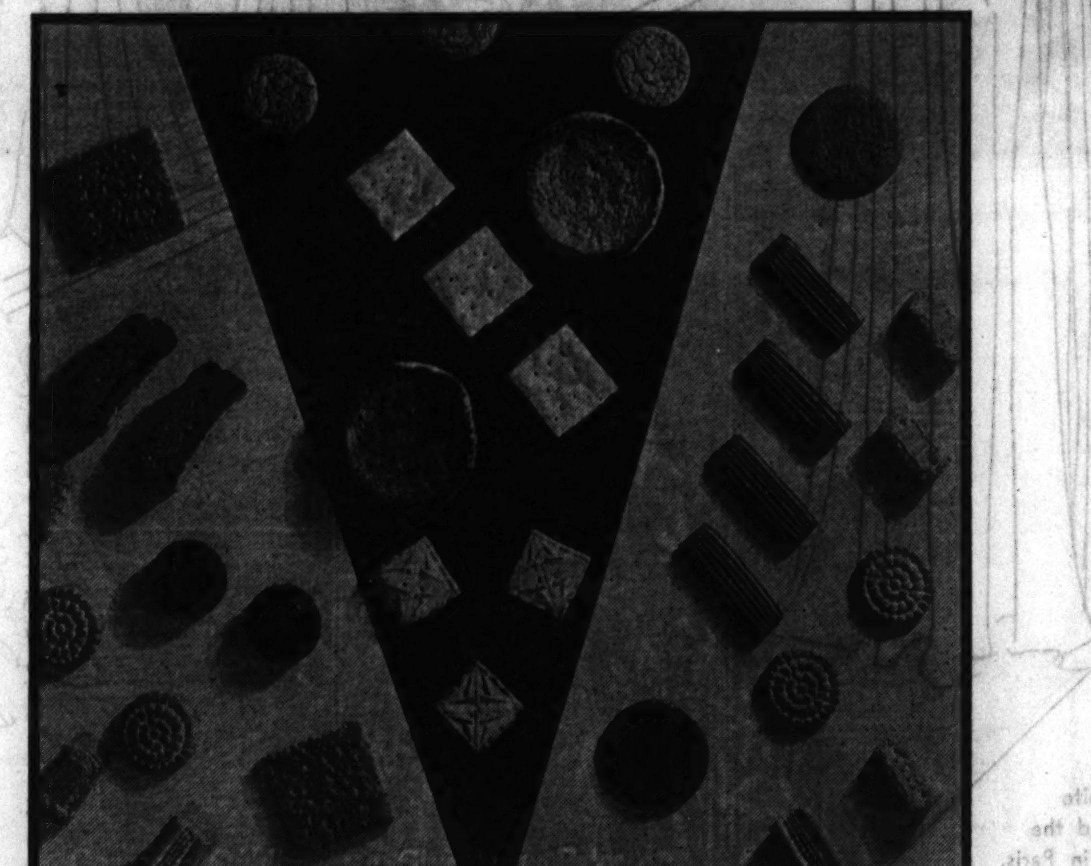
GINGER WHIP.

1 cup heavy cream
24 gingersnaps, finely crushed
¾ cup cream mints, crushed fine

Whip the cream quite stiff and fold in the crushed gingersnaps and crushed mints. Chill and serve in glass sherbet dishes.

ZWIEBACK PRUNE PUDDING.

You'll have a gay old time rolling from twelve to sixteen of the bakers' zwieback slices for this interesting pudding. But that's what it takes. When rolled, place two-thirds of the crumbs in the bottom of a torte pan which has a loose bottom and removable sides. Spread over this two cups of partially cooked prunes which have been cut from the seeds before measuring. Now blend three beaten eggs, one-half cup of sour cream, one-quarter teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon vanilla, and two-thirds cup sugar. Pour this mixture over the prunes and cover with the remaining zwieback crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about thirty minutes. Serve hot with cream or hard sauce.



Crackers—whole armies of them designed for every course from cocktail to dessert—offer the venturesome hostess a wide variety for summer treats.

When we started out several years ago presenting our families with graham cracker pies—that is, pies with graham cracker crusts—we seemed to lean toward custard cream filling. But this spring custard seems a bit colorless and our graham cracker crusts demand—fruit fillings! Sugared berries are one happy thought—strawberries, raspberries, currants—whatever you most hanker for. And here is an apple pie with a cracker crust which has proved ever so appetizing:

GRAHAM CRACKER PIE—APPLE FILLING

16 graham crackers
½ cup butter
4 tablespoons sugar
1 quart apple sauce
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
2 egg whites
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Roll the graham crackers fine and blend with the sugar and the butter which has been softened. Save out three-fourths cup of the mixture and pat the remainder into a large pie tin, covering the bottom and sides. Bake in a moderate oven about ten minutes. Fill with the apple sauce and sprinkle with seasonings. Bake in a hot oven (380 degrees F.) ten minutes longer. Spread lightly with the egg whites which have been beaten stiff and flavored with the sugar and vanilla. Brown in the oven and serve either hot or cold.

Russia Plans First Soviet Fashion Show

MOSCOW.—[U. P.]—The soviet capital will soon witness its first "fashion show." It will be so different from similar shows in the outside world that it scarcely deserves the name.

An exhibition of sartorial models submitted by designers, artists, scientists, and ordinary mortals is being organized, with prizes for those adjudged most suitable for soviet conditions. Practical and sanitary considerations, it is pointed out here, rather than "fashion" or "style," will determine the winners.

The exhibition, under auspices of the clothing trust, raises an interesting question about the future of soviet clothes. Will the new Russia follow the dictates of Paris and other foreign style centers? Or will it develop styles of its own?

As yet the question is somewhat academic. There are not enough clothes to go around and no margin to spare for style.

Women in Moscow, Leningrad, and other large cities, who are interested in clothes, do not think twice in answering the question. They definitely want to follow European styles. They watch carefully foreign moving pictures, the few foreign fashion magazines that are smuggled into the country, and the dress of foreign visitors for guidance.

The clothing trust, however, is not so sure about this issue. They talk about the "socialistic aims" of their industry rather than its fashion side. A spokesman of the trust said that capitalistic countries spend millions of dollars in producing new styles and ousting old ones. This was a form of waste, he said, which the soviets would avoid.

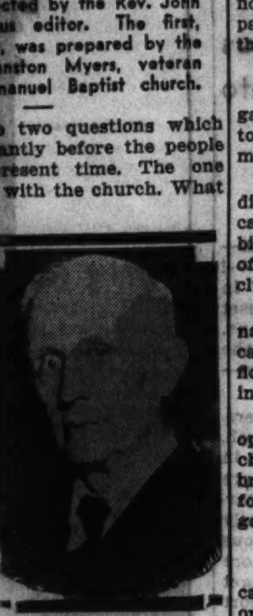
The "fashion show" is one of the methods for interesting the public in this undertaking. Every one here has been invited to submit sartorial ideas. The prize winning models will become standards for mass production.

Churches Must Again Dispense Practical Aid

Duties Not Ended with Delivery of Spiritual Message to Suffering.

What are the present trends in American church life? Are changes taking place in thought, preaching, and general religious activity? Each Sunday for the next few weeks the Tribune will publish brief sermon editorials on these and other questions dealing with current religious developments. These discussions will be written by well known Chicago clergymen selected by the Rev. John Evans, religious editor. The first, appears below, was prepared by the Rev. Dr. Johnston Myers, veteran pastor of Immanuel Baptist church.

THERE are two questions which are constantly before the people at the present time. The one has to do with the church. What can those who are in need be aided wisely with the least possible injury to themselves and to society? The church has lost the place of influence which it once held. There is an ever widening gap between it and the masses of the people.



REV. JOHNSTON MYERS

One of the reasons for this is that many years ago the church gave up part of its work. It became almost entirely a preaching, teaching, worshipping institution. It left out a ministry which was conspicuous in the life of Jesus and in the history of the early church. It ceased to stress the feeding, the healing, and the provision for the bodies of man and women. Christ heard the cry of the hungry, the sick, and the suffering, and he answered that cry by giving direct, practical aid. His miracles of healing and feeding attracted the attention of the multitudes, and gave him a hearing for his messages. So intimately was his ministry connected with the thought of food that he called himself the Bread of Life. He condemned the conduct of the men who refused to help the sufferer on the road to Jericho.

Double Duty of the Church.

One of his most severe messages is that in Matthew where he pronounced judgment upon those who did not care for the sick, the hungry, the destitute. Nothing is clearer in his ministry than that he intended that his disciples should combine their ministries to the souls of men with their ministries to their bodies. He knew that it would be an easy matter for them to interest those for whose bodies they had cared, in the spiritual messages.

It can be shown that the church lost its place and its power to help people largely when it relegated the work of feeding, clothing, and healing to other organizations and institutions. But if our church buildings again could become centers where supplies were received by needy people, where food was always waiting to be served to the hungry, where there was clothing and other useful articles, the church building and the minister would fully justify their existence in the community. There would be a feeling of gratitude on the part of those who received these comforts and necessities of life.

Source of Practical Relief.

The church and the minister are the best qualified to do this service for humanity. The minister himself is supposed to be a trained man with the mind and spirit of Christ. It is his business to help men, physically, morally, and spiritually. It is his business to build character, to give hope, courage and cheer.

There never were so many hungry people as there are today in America. It is the opportunity of the churches to feed them and care for them. It is the opportunity of the minister to deal with the economic situation first hand and in a practical way. Let him become the feeder of men, including both body and soul, if he wishes to win their love and their respect. There is every indication that the unemployment situation will be more serious in the coming fall and winter. Let these church buildings be transformed into places where suffering people can look for practical relief, and where charity will be given tactfully, tenderly, and with the thought of our divine Lord ever associated with the gifts.

Million to Kneel in Dublin Park at Church Meet

DUBLIN.—(AP)—Splashed with the scarlet and the violet robes of the princes of the church, a million people, perhaps more, will kneel on the green before a high altar erected in Phoenix park for the Eucharistic congress here this month.

The congress will be the thirty-first of its kind, the sixth since the war, and the first for Ireland. It was held at Chicago in 1926.

Ireland has been preparing for the event all year, and throughout the month special religious ceremonies will prelude the congress week, June 20 to 26.

On the last day the congress will reach its climax in a solemn pontifical high mass celebrated by the papal legate and a procession through the streets to O'Connell bridge.

Expect Half a Million.

Scrubbed and newly painted and garlanded with flowers, Dublin expects to welcome something close to half a million visitors during the week.

There will be at least a dozen cardinals, including the four American cardinals; between 400 and 500 archbishops and bishops, and thousands of priests and other minor clergy, including many monks and nuns.

Representatives from nearly fifty nations will crowd the Free State capital, and to provide for the overflow 22 ocean liners will be anchored in Dublin harbor during the congress.

It is possible that Pope Pius may open the congress by radio, and the chief events of the meeting will be broadcast over a special station erected for the occasion by the Free State government.

Honors Patron Saint.

This congress has a special significance for Ireland, for it is being held on the anniversary year of the landing of St. Patrick in 432, at Saul, and the objects and places associated with his name are expected to receive unusual attention.

It was this missionary to the Irish who implanted in the people the strong faith that has been their heritage for centuries. It is the one great tie binding Irishmen throughout the world to the emerald isle.

Today, despite the bitterness of the dispute about the oath of allegiance to King George, it is bringing the factions into the common purpose of making the Eucharistic congress successful.

One center of interest for the thousands of American visitors will be the beautiful American legation, which overlooks the high altar in Phoenix park.

Cardinal Hayes of New York will be the guest there of F. A. Sterling, United States minister, during the congress. Mr. and Mrs. Sterling are planning a garden party and a number of luncheons.

The legation is owned by the Free State and was formerly the lodge of the chief secretary for Ireland, under British rule. It is a magnificent Georgian building set in 60 acres of landscaped grounds. The house is about 100 years old, and has thirty rooms.

Even In London Women Reduce with Kruschen Salts

Husband Likes Her New Shapely Figure.

There is a certain weight at which every woman looks her loveliest—not skinny underweight nor pendulous overweight, but normal weight. We find artists, doctors, theatrical producers (and husbands!) all agree upon this point. "My husband says I look five years younger," writes this lady of 29 who—thanks to her daily dose of Kruschen Salts—has unburdened her body of 18 pounds of ugly fat. Read her letter:—

"Having heard from a friend of mine that she lost considerable weight since taking Kruschen Salts, I started using them in July last when I weighed 177 lbs. I have lost weight steadily since then, and am now 159 lbs.—my normal weight. Moreover, I feel brighter and more energetic in every way.

"I have inquired of my dressmaker my measurements, which in August last were: Bust 40, hips 43½, waist 33½ inches, which is normal for my height, which is 5 ft. 8 in. My age is 29. My husband is a very severe critic. He says I look five years younger. There is no other reason for my loss of weight except Kruschen, as I do not take any particular diet.

"(Mrs.) S. R., London, England."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that will last four weeks costs but a trifle—take one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning. When the jar is empty get on the scales and see how many pounds you have lost. Attention to diet will help—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes.

But remember to take off fat harmlessly and SAFELY; be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any drug store in the world.

Cotton Clothes Step Into the Smartest Wardrobes This Summer

Simple Fabrics Create Feeling of Romance

This Is the Time to Dress Picturesquely in White Muslin or Organdy.

By Rhea Seeger.

ANY ONE with the required collection of dollars, dimes, and nickels, can invest lavishly in the cotton market this summer. It's most comforting to know that shoppers who formerly dabbled only in silks are enthusiastically going about in cotton frocks from dawn till dark.

Life isn't worth living unless you have a cotton wardrobe. . . . Having discovered the joys of fresh, crisp cottons that perhaps slice off five to ten years of your silken sophistication, you gladly return to the simple life with these daring youthful frocks. Designers seemingly have gone quite mad over the possibilities for chic with yards of sheer batistes and piquant muslins as well as brilliant Scotch plaids and coarse weaves that look like homespuns.

Perky, colorful cottons wave from every shop window. . . . Everything you wear is made of cotton, from your impeccably tailored sports coats, to frilly feminine evening gowns made of shadow sheer materials in every muted tone and splashing strong shade of the color sprectrum. It's going to be an interesting summer season, what with fashion wise shoppers almost cracklingly efficient in cool, clean, crisp linens and piques. . . . Airy and delightfully unconcerned about the humidity in sports frocks of loosely knit materials and audaciously open meshes. . . . Swaying, lovely pictures under moonlight in yards of organdy or eyelet embroideries and voiles. . . . It's a sure success before the really sultry days have come to stay!

Dress Picturesquely.

This is the summer to dress picturesquely in white muslin with miles of fluted ruffles, each edged with a wickedly red line of color, ruffles that swish and swirl around your lipstick red sandals, and for direct and disconcerting contrast, cover your shoulders with a deep bertha also edged with a tiny red line. Or you can try your best to look like the languid ladies out of the pages of old heart throbbing novels with a billowing robe of pale blue with the inevitable wide satin sash tied demurely around your waist.

If this sort of old fashioned dressing is too mild and flat for your type of beauty, then try colored organdies made intricately as a crêpe silk, slinking, evening gown. . . . An organdy gown of lovely red raspberry shade with cleverly cut and matched bias sections crossed and recrossed to subtly slenderize your slimness, with a bodice cut demurely high in front and frankly low in back. . . . Wear huge white or chartruese green or electric blue fringed flowers also of organdy, securely planted at either the waistline in back or perched on the left shoulder.

Plaids Are Popular.

Perhaps the dresses that will flutter most enticingly under summer starlight are the incredibly smart gowns of Scotch plaid, plaided gingham that is as soft and silken and supple as silk. . . . One knockout model is made with the plaids cut in a bias manner. . . . A gay and heavenly plaid that glamourous Mary, that frivolous and clothes-mad queen of those fighting Scots probably should have worn to earn the favor of the envious Elizabeth. Whose-ever plaid it is, it is an eye smashing success with its squares of red and white and green and gray and deep blue, so to complete its allure one ties a bonny blue sash tightly around the waist and the ends hang merrily at the side.

Another dream of a dance frock for any kind of romantic background is the model of white embroidered organdy, with a stiff and flaring skirt made with triangular godets inserted just above the knees. . . . It is worn over a white taffeta slip that swishes most beguilingly whenever you move. . . . A tiny jacket also of the same white stuff has, for a change, rather short and tailored sleeves. However, this white dress is able to be just as fascinating and becoming when worn with colored taffeta jackets with the new generously puffed sleeves.

Four Cotton Frocks.

Four cotton frocks that can be quickly and reasonably purchased for modest sums are sketched today. Beginning at the left is a loosely woven cotton afternoon frock. . . . The new printed handkerchief sleeves provide a startling and colorful contrast with the tri-buckled patent leather belt. The material is an imported pattern that clings coolly but tightly to the silhouette.

Black organdy fashions a delectable dance and summer dinner dress, a model named by the imaginative designers "Dutch in the Dark." A black taffeta silk slip rustles under it while sheer, flattering white organdy contrasts its sleekness at the bodice top. Unusual spiral ruffles that wander around the hip and down the back of the flaring skirt form a slight train effect that is most alluring.

Delectably feminine afternoon summer dresses such as the third model, sketched in the hammock, are usually made of pastel tinted and white mousseline de soie, simple in design, depending upon the small embroidered motifs for decoration. Tiny puffed sleeves and a wide satin sash are all that is needed to complete this sheer distraction.

You can't get out of print this summer, for the prints are more than reviews of other printed effects of past performances. This summer they are small, legible, and deftly designed to keep the wearer slender and chic. . . . The last dress sketched is just such an ensemble, with a blue and white printed linen frock contrasted with a white topped bodice and a matching blue linen jacket and read leather belt.

Patchwork Berets Worn by Younger Parisiennes

PARIS.—(AP)—Patchwork berets are a favorite new sports hat with the younger set just now. They are made of black, red, and white irregularly shaped wool pieces fit together like a patchwork quilt. They are generally worn with a patchwork scarf to match.

Cool, Crisp Materials Fashion Hot Weather Frocks

Modish Designs Anticipate Hot Summer Days

In Engaging New Cottons, Linens, They Promise Coolness and Comfort.

By Clotilde.

FOR warm summer afternoons you will find the dress made by pattern No. 2791 a smart and practical choice. It is not difficult to cut or make.

A printed blue and white silk, combined with white, or a crinkle crêpe in beige with brown as the contrasting color, will be attractive.

If you have a dress that fits perfectly, compare the principal length and width measures with those of the pattern, and mark for any changes that are necessary. These must be allowed for. The pattern chart shows an economical way of placing the pattern on the material.

Transfer all marks to the dress pieces, and follow exactly in putting together. Put the bodice together first, and turn in an even seam's width on the bottom edge of the upper part of both back and front. Baste over the lower sections and stitch twice on the machine—first exactly on the edge, then one-quarter inch above. Remove the bastings and press first. Baste the underarm and shoulder seams together and try on. The seams may be stitched together on the wrong side, the seams overcast separately and pressed open, or French seams may be used.

The short sleeves are finished with cuffs of the dress material, and a soft girdle of the bodice material covers the joining of the skirt and bodice.

The skirt is cut in six pieces, and the gores are cut slightly circular. This makes the skirt swing gracefully at the bottom when in motion. The width at the bottom, for size 36, is about 1⅞ yards.

The guimpe or jumper dress made by pattern No. 2720 is a charming one for young girls, and with a number of guimpes it will seem just like so many different dresses.

The dress is made with a deep U shaped neckline, both in the front and back, and the armholes are large, too. These should be faced. The skirt is in two pieces and is circular. At the sides it is pressed into inverted plaits. This gives a graceful swing at the bottom, and the plaits hide the skirt seams.

The guimpe, with its short puffed sleeves, Peter Pan collar, and a front band for buttons and buttonholes, is easily made.

Blue is popular this season, and a navy blue dress, with the blouse or guimpe of beige, yellow, light blue, white, or red, will be much liked. Sheer woolen, crêpe, linen, piqué, or cotton broadcloth will be smart.

Pattern No. 3056 is for one of those snappy sports dresses that are so becoming. The cross-over bodice with the deep yoke, the V neckline, and the bound armholes are all smart details, and the skirt, with its umbrella plaits and irregular top line, is set on the bodice at the bottom of the hips. For size 16 the skirt measures about 2¾ yards at the bottom.

An opaline yellow flat washable silk crêpe is ideal for sports wear, and a skipper blue linen with white dots is good. Washable flat silk crêpe, wool crêpe, shantung, striped cotton broadcloth, men's shirting, novelty piqué, and cotton mesh make up beautifully.

Colors Give Smart Note in Summer

PARIS.—(AP)—The small town woman who wants to be smart will spell her summer chic with color.

Scores of gay little frocks, scarfs, jackets, and caps have been produced by designers to brighten suburban wardrobes.

Polka-dotted silks, smart flowered prints, stripes, and plaids are used for both costumes and accessories for the woman who lives outside the urban crush.

Wool Coat Serviceable.

A simple dark wool coat should be the basis of her wardrobe, designers say, since with one frock it is suitable for more occasions than a tailored suit.

It may be navy blue, brown, dark gray, or black, but the frock which goes with it should be gay.

"Prints" in Paris' favorite advice for an all-round Main street frock. A dark blue foulard spattered with jagged dots of crimson, green, and beige may be worn with a dark blue coat, a red chip straw hat, and a red bag, and a brown and green shadow plaid frock may accompany a plain brown coat.

Many of these little print frocks have elbow length sleeves so that they are ready for wear at both bridges and teas.

Washable Silks in Vogue.

Little frocks and suits of washable silk, such as shantung and crêpe Olympic are Paris' newest offering to the smart suburbanite for less formal wear.

Many of them are brightened by accessory sets of hat, scarf, and bag in polka-dotted silk or linen.

A beige shantung suit has a sailor hat and scarf of green and beige polka-dotted silk, while a pale blue suit is touched up with accessories of navy blue and white striped linen.

Cottons Popular.

For days at home, porch parties, and equally informal affairs cottons are everywhere. Printed muslins, gay ginghams, and even upholstery chintzes are fashioned into nonchalant short sleeved frocks often combined with a contrasting color.

Little printed jackets may be worn with plain colored cotton frocks, while plain short sleeved boleros top bright-printed dresses.

Kindly Help of 'Big Brother' Rescues Boys

Joseph McCoy, Secretary of Movement, Tells How Good Work Is Done

Brother does. Boys must have something fine to look up to."

Then as an example of how eager a boy is to admire and to imitate his father or any other man he knows intimately, Mr. McCoy told me the story of Tex, as we'll call him:

"Tex was a great strong lad of about 13 to 14. He was tough and made himself seem tougher. His father used to beat him but, he swaggered, he was so tough that nothing could hurt him. That was his armor—a pose of hardness made easier by his strength.

"Well, he was given a Big Brother who had been in college—a well known football player and track athlete who had a slight limp ar the result of an accident. He used to take this boy to a certain park where he taught him how to kick off, or if running, get off to a good start."

Then Big Brothers' field day came. Mr. McCoy noticed this youth getting ready for his various events going around with a very slight limp. Conversation ensued and eventually this limp was mentioned. How could he enter the track events if he was hurt?

The boy responded, "Oh, that's nothing. I'm not hurt much. Don't you know that most big athletes have a slight limp?" Enough said! Admiration could go no farther.

Another question came into my mind. "What do the Big Brothers do for their boys," I asked Mr. McCoy, "that a father could profit by?"

"These Big Brothers who accomplish so much with these boys merely do what every father could do if he would. Any father can be a good father if he goes at it in the right way."

Selfish Attitude Common.

And then he said a most significant thing: "But the trouble with most men is that their response to their boys' actions is an emotional one."

We know, too, that's true—how some father's feelings work overtime; how they fear their boys are not showing them respect; how they get angry over disobedience, or ashamed of poor school work, or disappointed over the kind of work their boy wants to do. It's always concern with their own feelings when a boy does or does not do something—not with his.

"If they would only think, use their intelligence in the things that concern their boys they would get somewhere," went on Mr. McCoy.

"For instance, when men are about to become Big Brothers we say to them, "First, KNOW YOUR BOY! You must study your boy so you can know him. To help him you must try to see things with his eyes, get his point of view and feel as he does about things. And they do this. Do you know what our percentage of success is with these boys? Ninety-three out of every hundred."

Results Are Slow.

Here's another thing I wanted answered by this man of years of experience and observance.

"Do you look for quick results in getting these boys straightened out?"

Emphatically and forcefully came the answer. "I should say not. Absolutely not. It's a slow process with many set backs. And any Big Brother who begins with the idea that he is going to accomplish a miraculous change in a few days is doomed to disappointment and has a great deal to learn. He has to revise his ideas on that point."

But slow though it is, it's sure, for with all that these under privileged boys have to cope with in their homes and their associates, the Big Brothers have only seven per cent of failures.

As an example of this—of the way the Big Brothers hold on, Mr. McCoy told me of the following case:

"One of the hardest and most stubborn cases that ever came to the Big Brothers was given to a well known auditor, because of the quiet tenacity of the man. No number of set backs could discourage him. He was years getting this boy entirely on his feet.

"The boy whose Big Brother he became was living in horrible home conditions. He had become like a little animal and had committed a number of thefts.

"Even after several years of help and great improvement, he got mixed up in a burglary and at 16 was brought before the court with other offenders. His Big Brother got him off, found a job for him and kept on his job as Big Brother, too. Today the boy is in splendid shape and has grown to be a fine specimen of young manhood."

What punishment or term in an institution could have brought about results like that?

Expert Helps Boy.

"And take the case of Bill, who played hookey. Bill, on one of his absences, was found making a collection of leaves in Central park to press and classify. He was introduced to Mr. C—— of the Museum of Natural History, who because of his work and their congeniality of tastes understood the boy. Mr. C—— became his Big Brother. Gradually he straightened out the boy and is now helping him to plan a course of study which will train him in these special interests."

To get a boy off the streets the Big Brothers don't expect him to just stay home and be good. Instead, they lead him to the athletics and amusements that are to be found in recreation centers. They take him on hikes. They send him to summer camps. They substitute a club for a gang. All this is aimed not at checking their force and energy, you see, but at making new channels for the boys' growing powers so that they shall take no longer a destructive, but a constructive form.

These are a few of the things the Big Brothers are doing with their boys of 10 to 16 to set them on their feet in those important, determining, formative years of their lives. They hold suggestions for all of us.

A Friend in Need

Downtown School of Music Offers Free Instruction in Piano to Children; Write to Sally If You'd Like Your Youngsters to Enjoy This Privilege.

By Sally Joy Brown.

IT'S the ambition of every devoted mother, I am sure, to give her children music lessons. But because there are always so many things to buy and so many expenses in a family where there are small children, often this ambition is never realized. Perhaps you've been waiting for your young son or daughter to reach the age where such instruction would be practicable but you hadn't counted on old man depression stepping in and ruining your carefully laid plans.

If you belong to this group of parents, then you'll be interested in the announcement I am pleased to make this morning. A downtown school of music, one with an excellent reputation and years of experience behind it, is offering a course of instruction in piano, without charge, to boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 12 years. The course consists of twelve lessons, two a week, running over a period of six weeks. The only stipulation is that the applicant must be a beginner, must have had no previous instruction. The lessons will begin on Monday, June 27, but since the group of students must be selected as soon as possible, we would like to have those who are interested write us immediately.

It is a splendid opportunity for any child interested in music. The course is sufficiently long to give a good foundation, and those who do not continue to take lessons at its conclusion should be able to go on alone.

This is no contest, and every boy and girl between the ages of 8 and 12 are eligible for admission to the class. It requires no skill in letter writing to apply. In writing, be sure to give the age of the child or children and address your letter to Sally Joy Brown, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Linen Spats Offered.

"I have a pair of light colored linen spats which would fit a man who wears size 6 or 6½ shoe. If you know of a any young man who can wear them, I would be glad to let him have them. K. C."

There are occasions when such articles of male attire are almost a necessity, and for the young man who cannot afford to buy them, here is an opportunity to secure a pair of spats. If you can make use of this gift, write me.

Request for Radio Tubes.

"I have been out of work for two years and just the other day was given a radio set, but it has no tubes and I cannot afford to buy them. I wonder if you can get me five of them, size UX199. We would enjoy the radio so much. A. P."

It seems a pity that a perfectly good receiving set should stand idle and practically worthless because the poor owner isn't able to buy tubes. If you can donate one or two you'll make him extremely happy.

Need Household Furnishings.

"We are trying to help a young couple who are just starting housekeeping. They have no money, and we wonder if you might be able to get them a few things through your column. Bedroom, living room, and kitchen things are what they need. They are very deserving and will appreciate whatever you may be able to do for them. MRS. P."

The household equipment and pieces of furniture which you are planning to discard or which you have stored away would give this young couple the start they need. Won't you give them any of the articles you no longer want?

Lack Stove for Church.

"Do you think you could get a gasoline or kerosene stove for our church? When we have a social affair and want to prepare food it must be done at one of the members' homes and is most inconvenient. As we have no gas out here, we could not make use of a gas range.

"MRS. E. M."

These church parties will be a great deal more enjoyable to those in charge when they are no longer troubled with the problem of transporting cooked food. Can you give the stove which will put an end to their present inconvenience?

Request for Shoes, Size 7.

"I am a cripple, badly in need of a pair of shoes, size 7, which I cannot buy. I have had no work and my only income is what I receive from charity. Because of the condition of my feet the shoes must be wide and have low heels. A. R."

If you have a pair of shoes of the type and size this unfortunate woman needs and you are no longer wearing them, won't you send them to her? The question of shoes is becoming quite a problem for her.

The Story of Cass Odom and His Strange Invention, and of Little Nancy, His Daughter, for Whom His Clever Fingers Fashioned a Wooden Doll

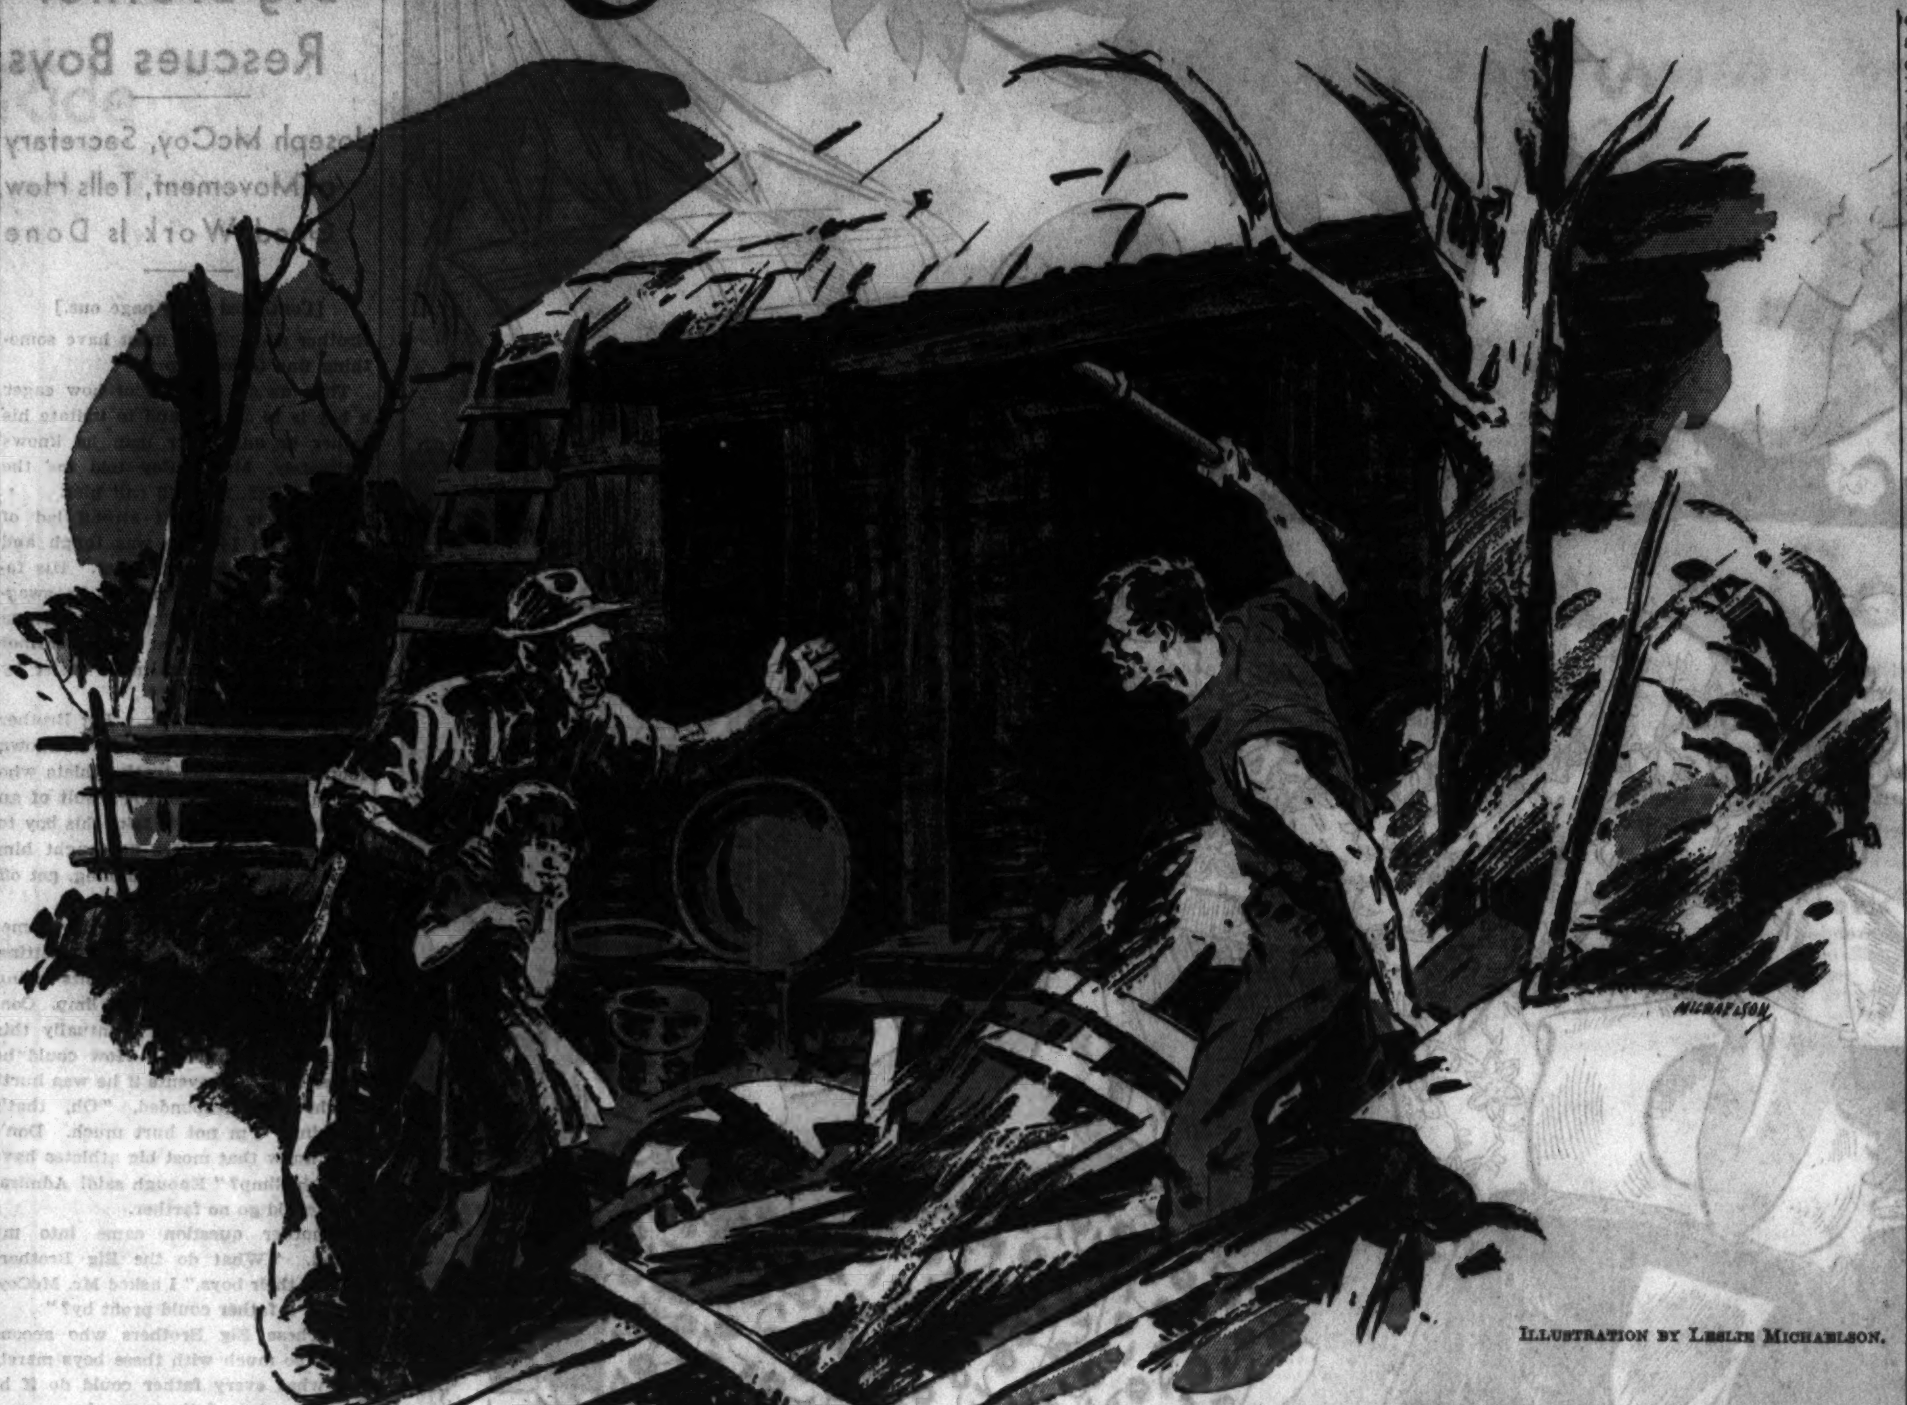

ILLUSTRATION BY LESLIE MICHAELSON.

Still yelling, he forced his way out, brandishing a bar of metal which had been the jackshaft of his beloved sun machine.

DAPPER Gid McCall, genial liar and ordinarily as conscienceless as a Yazoo Indian, oddly enough was the man who befriended Nancy Odom. They met on the southbound train when the notion salesman, strolling through in search of a possible woman companion, found none.

Gid did not speak the first time through, though his cynically practiced eye noted the frail, shy little girl perched there beside her suitcase. She had been entirely alone in the white day coach, except when the portly, perspiring conductor stopped for a word or two. The railway official, who had married a widow with five, had no especial sympathy for children.

Gay Gid McCall had no idea he liked them. Something of the wistful expression in Nancy's blue eyes remained with him as he passed through to the smoker, however. Bright banded Bankok straw tilted back, and the open lapels of his seersucker suit showing vertical pink and purple stripes of a colorful silk shirt, he smoked and wondered what the kid was doing alone on this hot midsummer journey.

A few minutes later, as easily casual as if he noticed her for the first time, Gid stopped and smiled.

"You look kinda lonesome all by yourself in here, sweetie," he greeted, unconsciously using the terminology a far different feminine being might have evoked. "Mind if I take a load off my feet for a minute? I'm going as far as Blackjack——"

The blue eyes regarding him steadily from beneath a beribboned sailor hat mirrored a wan reflection of his smile. And in a minute there was no sadness remaining; Nancy had decided that she liked him better than the pudgy old conductor. She made Gid welcome with an obvious grown-upness of decorum which made the salesman chuckle secretly. Nice kid. In six-seven years those eyes would make her a regular heart breaker. If they'd only feed her up a bit, that is.

Thoroughly at his ease, as he would have been with any creature in skirts who smiled back at him, Gid soon learned as much of her pathetic little story as Nancy herself knew. She had come from Montgomery, changing to the Mobile and Ohio train at Artesia, Mississippi. And she made one statement which Gid, of course, accepted at face value. Her daddy was going to meet her at Blackjack, Alabama. So when, a half hour later, the train drew near the station, Gid shook hands and said farewell light heartedly. He went back into the other car for his sample cases.

Still later, with the cases safely locked up in a barn belonging to his brother-in-law, Gid came back to the station, driving his nephew and gangling niece, who were bound up to Vinegar Bend for a square dance. When the northbound local came in he left them. Turning away, he saw Nancy sitting on the cane suitcase, head bowed between her hands.

The poor kid's father hadn't showed up! That was a shame for sure, especially on Saturday night in a woods town like Blackjack, Alabama. Maybe the old man had moved away or something. Why the devil hadn't Clint Barry, the station agent, seen to it that Nancy got in touch with somebody? Even grown-up white people did not wander aimlessly around the streets of Blackjack on a Saturday night.

Gid found himself paddling the strange waters of solicitude. In a way he enjoyed taking care of Nancy, though to himself the sensation seemed a righteous indignation against others. He consoled the child, then drove her to his sister's home.

BEATRICE SHUGRUE, something of a younger-set leader in the narrow confines of town society, looked askance when she discovered Nancy's last name.

"My dear! She's that man's daughter!" she exclaimed in a shocked voice.

"Uh?" asked Gid. "Come here a sec." He drew his sister into the other room. "Don't hurt her, sis," he said. "What man d'you mean?"

"O, that—that crazy man out in the woods! You know, that lunatic, Cass Odom, the man with the tin tower in the cabbage patch. The fellow who helped you that time your truck broke down coming in from Lucedale."

Gid nodded slowly, a pitying expression coming to his countenance. He remembered Cass Odom with a shiver. A big, stern looking, gaunt man in overalls—half starved, probably. He had a big I-shaped tin tower, that people called a perpetual motion machine. Clever fellow with any kind of machinery, though. Probably just a nut like almost all inventors.

"O, the dickens; what of it?" protested Gid, shrugging. "The kid's hungry. I'll bet she hasn't had a bite since breakfast."

Had he known, he might have supplemented that by saying Nancy had not eaten more than the scantiest, picked-up rations for over a week. But Beatrice questioned no more. She was not hard hearted. She raided the icebox for a bountiful chicken supper, and then saw Gid's blue eyed protégée safely to bed.

During the rest of the evening Gid got an earful of Cass Odom's story—the tale of an aviation mechanic in the war, who had been wounded when the Germans destroyed an airdrome.

"They had given him a decoration," declared Beatrice, "and when he came back here from the hospital Blackjack gave him a big reception. He had always been inventing things, and I think he invented something to put on an airplane engine to make that engine go faster."

"A supercharger?"

But Beatrice did not know. She knew only that he had finally lost his wife and child through his folly in sticking to that tin tower and the crazy idea of perpetual motion. He farmed a miserable tract of piney-woods land, instead of going into a garage or an airplane factory, where he might have amounted to something.

"O, I do hope he treats this little girl decently!" concluded Beatrice. "When did you say her mother was apt to get out of the hospital?"

THE eastern sky was still the hue of watered ink when Cass Odom arose next morning. The sun machine, encased in the rusted tin tower, had stopped. Its waning power had been insufficient to close the thermostat valve, so instead of condensing above in the comparative coolness of summer night all the water which furnished propulsion to the feathery turbine lay in a flat evaporation chamber at the bottom of the I-construction.

"That's the weakest part of it," he observed moodily aloud. Even he had no idea of harnessing the tin giant to useful work unless it could be magnified ten, one hundred, a thousand times in size. As it was, the lightest pressure of a finger stopped its drive wheel from revolving.

If he only could grease it enough, get oil on every moving part, perhaps it would keep going long enough so that the valve would seat. Then, at least to his obsessed mind, there appeared no reason why the machine, with ninety per cent of its water brought back to a height of eighteen feet, should not run another full day—perhaps indefinitely!

For short periods of running the valve seated perfectly. He used his last drops of oil with sparing care. Then he tested for leaks. He found two and soldered them. Then, grumbling, muttering to himself, he went back to the rambling shanty and ate a tasteless breakfast of left-overs: fish, cold grits, and peas.

When Gid and Nancy drove out in the salesman's truck, Cass Odom was busy erecting a rough scaffolding from which he could begin a job of scouring. Years of sun and rain had rusted the tin giant, and to the creator's mind it had to look fresh and clean before that damn-Yank engineer came down to inspect.

Gid's gray eyes were not smiling this morning. He stopped the truck and then led Nancy out to the road, through the loose wires of what once had been a "hog-tight" fence, and across the almost denuded cabbage field. The little girl looked up in wonder and horror at the tin monstrosity, which now looked like some freak variety of boiler, discarded and left to the elements.

The little girl shivered, for she recognized the tin ogre. In times of desperation or pain Moms had spoken bitterly of this misbegotten djinn which had ruined their lives.

Gid McCall glowered with frank hostility. He was ready to hate Cass Odom and his fool contraption, and was uneasy at having to face the inventor. He wished he had brought along a shotgun. Gid held no brief for his own physical prowess.

Cass Odom came out from a narrow door in the tower. There was no welcome on his bleak countenance for these curiosity seekers, as he supposed. The fools would make banal comments, while they snickered behind their hands. Naturally enough, he did not recognize Nancy, whom he had not seen in full six years.

"You-all get out of here!" he commented brusquely, approaching with a lowering scowl. "I don't allow no visitors; an' there's a sign out there that says so plain!"

He gestured angrily toward the roadway.

Gid halted, his hands tucked under his seersucker jacket and his neck thrust forward like that of a gamecock.

"O, my Lord!" he exploded. "A swell father you turned out to be, Cass Odom! Wake up, you dumbbell! This is Nancy Odom, your own daughter!"

"Eh? Wha-a-a-t?"

The tall man's fists unclenched. His jaw sagged. Blinking as if through a blurring mist which did not show on the flinty surfaces of his eyes, he stared down at Nancy. Yes, now he could discern similarities to Jessie. His own baby! Why, in heaven's name, had Jessie sent her to him at this most unpropitious of all times? Soul and body were hard enough to keep together in the person of a strong man. For months, years, he had eaten nothing but the roughest, most meager fare, and this child looked frail and sickly. Until the sun machine proved a success and was accepted for exploitation he would remain poor—in debt——

"You heard me!" snapped Gid. "I found her last night down to the station, crying. Darn it all, why don't you call for your mail once in a while and find out what's going on?"

He thrust the oblong letter he had been thoughtful enough to get at the postoffice into the father's hand. Then he bent to kiss Nancy's forehead.

"So long, kid. I got to buzz along back. Just make yourself to home, and see to it this great big daddy of yours treats you nice. When I make my next trip through I'll bring you a big bag of candy."

Then, with a final significant glare at the man, Gid turned back to his truck, a rather quavery farewell from Nancy in his ears. The poor kid was in for a tough time, but there did not seem to be anything to be done about it.

CASS ODOM clumped down to his knees, gathering Nancy to him in a convulsive, scaring hug. She shrank a little, afraid of his fearsome expression, yet wanting to love him. As he loosened her, hearing a gasp from her lips, she imprinted a wet, hasty kiss upon his unshaved neck. He fumbled up the letter, blinking at it through the queer blur in his eyes.

Jessie had written tersely, yet every word was an index finger of accusation to the man. She suffered from chronic appendicitis. Of late the pain had become acutely unbearable. An operation was unavoidable—six or seven weeks before she could hope to return to work. Would Cass meet their baby at the station and take care of her that long?

The final paragraph cut to the man's heart:

"O, Cass, dear, if you ever cared for me at all, take good care of Nancy! She is all I have now. I'll forgive you everything, everything, if you'll just be good to my poor little girl! She got over scarlet fever, herself, only a month ago. Please have her drink a quart of milk every day. Get it from Sam Barrett. He has his cows tested.

"My love,

"JESSIE."

For a long minute more Cass Odom knelt there. Not a word, not a question concerning the sun machine! Jessie never had believed in it because it was not strong enough to pump water like a windmill, or run a circular saw for cutting firewood.

Now came fierce longing, heartache for the woman he had never ceased to love. Shame, too. Anguished, irrepressible hope for success, for a favorable report from the damn Yank engineer who had promised to examine the machine.

If he could only patent it and sell it! Made on a grand scale, he figured that it could furnish power at little cost, a boon to all regions devoid of natural water power.

Cass Odom had no dream of wealth, no longing for it—except as it might redeem him in the eyes of his wife. He hated and despised the mean, nagging shopkeepers of Blackjack, but he wished to settle up their bills in full. Then he would sell this land to his neighbor, Sam Barrett, and move away to some other section of the woods where there would be greater privacy for his future inventions. Nancy and her mother could have nice dresses and things.

Eleven days till the promised visit of Stratton, the damn-Yank engineer. Through that length of time Nancy would have to make the best of things, for Jessie's sake. And good Lord, Jessie herself in a smelly ward of some charity hospital! Evidently Jessie had not been able to go to a private infirmary. Since the war the pay of railroad stenographers had dropped and dropped. Even Jessie, an expert at her job, probably had not been making more than fourteen or fifteen dollars a week.

BLINDLY Cass Odom prayed that he might be able to realize something upon the sun machine, an amount which at the very least would suffice to keep Jessie in comfort through convalescence.

Nancy eyed the unpainted shack with wondering disfavor. The tiny room up at Montgomery used by her mother and herself had been in a big brick building with many windows. This looked like a decrepit barn!

"It's not fixed up—sorry," said Cass gruffly. He felt vaguely ashamed, though for himself nothing like this mattered. A girl was different, of course.

Nancy entered. The bare, disheveled interior smote her as an actual shock. She fell back a step toward the open door. Her lip quivered.

"O, daddy!" she cried, appalled. "Do you—did Moms—come from—ever live here?"

"Yes, both of us, honey." Strange how difficult it was to utter a term of endearment. "Just you sit down now and rest. The bed in there is the one you'll have. I'll rig up a cot or something out here."

Mechanically the little girl obeyed, hanging her sailor hat on the only chair and taking a faltering step toward the bedroom. Then her blue eyes filled. Homesickness and loneliness for Moms swept over her. She threw herself full length upon the rumpled bed, which had not been made for more than a week. Sobs shook her frail body.

Cass Odom scowled, though not at the child. He was fussing around with the helpless awkwardness of a man to whom household tasks still were strange after months and years. He failed to notice Nancy's surrender to tears. Remembering an adjuration of Jessie's letter, he snatched up a tin pail, rinsed it from another bucket, and strode out of the door.

In the bare, grassless yard he moved aimlessly, an odd furtiveness coming into his manner. Milk for Nancy! In the pocket of his overalls lay exactly eight cents, his entire capital. Possibly this might provide one day's ration, but then would come another day, and another . . .

He knew, however, that Sam Barrett had a fresh cow over in the south pasture. One quart a day never would be missed. Slinking, like a convicted felon, Cass Odom made for the brushy shelter of the branch and the pasture beyond.

Within the cracked, miserable shack Nancy, abandoning all reserve, slid from the edge of the bed to her knees, sobbing out her heart for the woman in far away Montgomery.

DAY followed day, and each was ceaseless striving. One evening the solemn, gaunt man came with pen and ink and ruled a tablet of paper, asking that Nancy write to her mother.

The child, wan and quiet, sat down before the smoky lamp. It was queer, perhaps, but loyalty and an aching heart-hungriness for love caused her to paint the drab vista of life in the ramshackle shanty in roseate colors. She put words of endearment and optimism into the trap mouth of the father who never seemed to have time to talk. She said not a word of the hardships which she had faced from the first.

Cass Odom took the finished letter. While reading it his face seemed to set even more harshly, but the protuberant Adam's apple moved up and down at the open neck of his chambray shirt. He added a constrained postscript, assuring Jessie that he would care for the little girl as well as he was able, and offered an awkward prayer for his wife in her lone battle through the shadows.

Then he went out to the road and in the darkness set up a post to hold the R. F. D. box he never had deemed worth while.

Next morning Nancy, barefooted and incredibly thin of appearance in her scanty frock, gathered vegetables from the neglected fields. Later she scaled and fried some fish Odom brought. Most of the daylight hours now he spent scouring the exterior of the sun machine, and relubricating the wheels, cogs, and shafts of its intricate interior. Eight days, seven days—and then the supreme test which would make or break his years of ruthless sacrifice and unsparing endeavor!

There came a brief, impersonal note from a nurse at the hospital. It told that Mrs. Odom had come through the operation fairly well, but still was in a critical condition, owing to general weakness. The general prognosis was favorable, however.

Nancy wrote again and again, until the nickel tablet was exhausted. Oddly, not even an indirect word came from Jessie. Fear for her, coupled with his hopes and apprehensions in regard to the coming of Stratton, were driving Cass Odom frantic. The blur behind his eyes was worse. There was a dull ache at the back of his head, an ache that throbbed when he worked long hours in the summer sun. He left all the housework to Nancy.

The machine made new trouble. A wooden spindle had worn uneven, stopping the mechanism. Long, clever fingers trembling, Cass Odom sat down to carve a new part, fitting it with the care and pains of an old fashioned clockmaker.

The moment it was in place and the sun machine working, Cass ran to Sam Barrett's place. There he borrowed a mule and wagon, offering to pay for the convenience by splitting firewood next day.

Barrett gave assent, though his shrewd, kindly face was perturbed.

"Ol' Cass looks wuss'n usual," he commented to a Negro helper. "Too dang bad."

The gaunt man's eyes were the eyes of a madman, in truth. He drove the mule at a shambling gallop back to the big shed which housed his only treasures—his tools. Out came an expensive case of Stillson wrenches, a battered chest of carpenter's tools, an oxyacetylene welding outfit, seven saws of various kinds, and a rack of bits. He thought of the foot-power lathe, but shook his head. No one would buy it. He doubted that any of the storekeepers would give him more than twenty or thirty dollars for all this expensive stuff, but now he would not haggle.

He drove down to Blackjack, visiting a man who dealt in second hand articles. Cass accepted the first price offered, then dashed to another store. His face was set in pain. The tools had been parts of his heart and brain.

Out of the money secured he bought two more writing tablets, a pail of salt pork to boil with the cabbage, and a ten cent bar of chocolate almonds for Nancy. Then he stopped at the postoffice, scrawling a line to the nurse at the Montgomery hospital, and sending the remainder of the money to Jessie Odom in her care.

When he got back Nancy accepted the bar of candy with wondering thanks. All of a sudden she reached up and kissed her father, then ran for the bedroom, closing the door. Frowning vaguely, although pleased, the man went about one of his jobs. He supposed Nancy was seated on the bed, delighting in the taste of the candy. As a matter of fact she was face down in the pillow, the chocolate bar clutched tightly to her breast. That evening she gravely served two equal portions after supper "for dessert."

SLOW, terrible days dragged on. Four days, three, until the coming of Stratton. Nancy wrote letters and did what she could with the interior of the crazy shack. She darned her two pairs of stockings, though she wore them rarely. She sewed on buttons. But then, when all was done, there remained hours in which her hands were empty. She could not understand at all why Moms did not write.

The mother, just then, was hovering all too close to the borderland of shadow. She had developed peritonitis. An immediate operation, performed at the first hint of this usually deadly complication, had almost miraculously stayed the course of infection, but it had left Jessie too weak even to whisper.

One afternoon Nancy came out to the tower. It had taken her some time to approach the monster, for, like Jessie, she hated it from the depth of her being. Hated and feared it. Cass Odom was removing the wooden scaffolding now. He did not see the girl, who shyly started to speak to him twice but each time drew back. Daddy did not like to be disturbed when he was working. She had learned that from the first.

An hour passed—eighty minutes. The sun was coming down into a red-edged cloud in the west. It was nearing time for her to go in and start water boiling for supper. She had asked tearfully about Moms this morning, and had waited in vain until Peter Ellis, the rural mail carrier, passed with the usual shake of his head.

Another question, one she feared to ask, now stayed unspoken on the girl's tongue. Daddy was so different from Moms. He wouldn't even know you were there unless you made a noise or said something. He was thinking about something or other that had to do with the sun machine all the time. He wouldn't rouse himself to play even when he was tired after a day's work, like Moms had been accustomed to do. Nor did he know the first thing about her schoolbooks, the only reading matter she had brought along.

But at last she dared. "Da-addy!" she whispered. He did not hear.

For a space of minutes she was silent, abashed and afraid. Then, "Daddy, dear?" A note almost querulous, near to tears. Fingers of her right hand closed over her lips as if to snatch back the louder speech, too late.

Cass Odom started. He had not really been busy at anything important, for the sun machine was running better than it ever had gone. But that throbbing ache in the back of the man's head seemed to spur him on and on to unremitting though now fruitless effort on the same old problem.

"Got a supercharger there!" he muttered, pressing the occipital portion of his skull as he looked around vacantly at his daughter.

"O, I didn't see you. What is it—honey?" A pause before the awkward endearment. Why? He certainly loved her after his own fashion.

"Daddy, please! I want my dolls!"

"Huh?"

"I want my dolls——" less assured. The blue eyes started to fill with tears.

"H-m. Why—where are they?" He glanced at the scanty contents of her suitcase and remembered not seeing any playthings. "Didn't you bring them along?"

"N-no. Moms forgot to pack them. Moms was—sick. She couldn't hardly move. All my dolls, Jimmyboy, Raggedy Ann, Peter Rabbit, and Mrs. Chum are—are still in the chest!"

"You mean they're back in your room at Montgomery?" The man knew, of course, that Jessie had not retained this room. More than likely she owed money to the landlady, and if that were the case the dolls, together with other effects, doubtless were being held as security or had been sold.

"Yes, Daddy. G-get them for me, won't you?"

A savage grimace contorted the man's countenance. He could not comply, yet he did attempt to break the truth to Nancy as gently as possible. As soon as he could do so he blundered away, seeking refuge from her sorrow in the tool shed. This, too, was a mockery now, with nearly everything useful gone. Outside of the lathe there was nothing to which he could put his hands. Nothing—just a discarded telephone switchboard, a jumble of other metal and useless junk, stuff which, with forging, welding, and technical makeshift, he had been wont to transform into needed parts for the hungry sun machine.

GID M'CALL was happy. Certain gerrymanderings of the districts allotted to the salesmen of his company had given him Mobile and Mobile county, with Blackjack the extremity of his northwestward journeying. This promotion, with the Christmas buying season only a few months away, meant bigger and better commissions, a wider smile on his pleasant face. He stopped at Blackjack to tell his sister and brother-in-law the news.

This accomplished, he drove the truck down to the drug store. He knew the candy there was fresh, so he purchased at least a sample of every kind, spending two dollars for an immense bag. Then he drove out to the Odom place.

That visit and the happiness it brought to Nancy may be left to imagination. Cass Odom did not put in an appearance. The very next day was the one on which the engineer-promoter was scheduled to arrive, and Cass was in a fever of fussing and doing things already done. The sun machine was going well, yet he could not let it alone.

While Nancy was entertaining Gid, alternately eyeing him gravely as a woman, then chattering happily like a baby of five, the salesman was doing some thinking.

"What would you like to have me send you some time from down Mobile-way?" he inquired, thinking of Christmas.

"A doll!" she cried instantly, eyes sparkling with fervor. "O, a doll, Mr. Gid! I—I——" Words failed.

"You'll get one, sweetie!" he assured.

Later he tackled Cass Odom. "Get Nancy a doll!" he commanded. "You're a mighty poor imitation of a father, Odom! She had to ask me for something to play with. Of course, I'll send her one, but it'd be a damn sight better coming from you—and right away! The poor kid's crazy for something to love. Get her a doll!"

Cass stared blankly. What was this foolishness? He only partially understood, for the pain in back of his head was bearing down with triphammer intensity. Nancy was still talking about dolls? Well, he couldn't get them now—maybe later. Right away? O, to hell with nonessentials, dolls, dolls—everything!

CORNELIUS STRATTON was in Chicago on the day he had appointed to visit the sun machine. Cass Odom did not guess. Three hours after the evening train had come and gone he gave up his day's vigil.

The sun machine still ran, and now the valve was closing, shutting off the condensing portion of vapor while three or four gallons of the original water charge remained in the upper tank. The machine would run through all this night, certainly through the next day—perhaps through still another period of darkness! Never before had it performed as well.

The promoter-engineer was occupied at this time with a crooked patent lawyer. Together they were about to launch another of their stock selling ventures. Stratton had forgotten about the childish perpetual motion machine, though some day when he thumbed through his notes of prospects he would look again at the drawings, perhaps. Out of wild eyed inventors like this fellow Odom he coaxed dollars—later he got thousands of dollars from gullible investors.

The Alabama sun rose on another morning. Without waiting to borrow Sam Barrett's mule, Cass Odom was up, disregarding breakfast, and walking in to Blackjack.

No stranger had arrived. With hope fading, Cass waited for the 8:50 flyer from the north; then, as Stratton did not put in an appearance, the woodsman tramped slowly up the hill and homeward, his set face inclined toward the red clay road and despair relaxing every fiber of his being.

It was not until two weeks later that a telegram arrived, mailed from Blackjack, and that was no more than an evasive come-on. Stratton really thought that some time he might get down toward Mobile, but it was doubtful that this fellow Odom had any money anyhow. Of course he did not say that.

SOME days earlier, with his sun machine running almost interminably—with no one but himself to see—Cass Odom stood and cursed it with tears in his flinty eyes. That evening, with odd tenderness, he saw Nancy tucked in bed. Then he walked over to Sam Barrett's place and confessed his theft of the milk.

The planter was not angry. He frowned to hide the expression of pity that came to his features, then shrugged.

"Well, I'm glad you told me, Odom," he said. "You are welcome to go ahead, for the girl's sake. I didn't miss the quart anyhow. How about hiring out to me? I need a good hand full time—ten hours. Two bits an hour. The milk I won't charge for."

It was clinched, a good enough bargain for both. This was standard rate for white labor, but an ordinary plantation hand could not work like this steel-thewed giant. And besides, Cass Odom did not have to be fed. He went back to his own shack for meals.

The arrangement for steady labor out of sight of the tin tower helped Cass Odom somewhat, though it made Nancy more lonesome than ever. The two had heard now that Jessie was fighting her way slowly back to health, but with a vista of weeks in the charity hospital before she could leave. Her first brief letter begged Cass Odom to send her a few more dollars, thanking him from the bottom of her heart for the postal money order he had sent earlier.

That night Odom stumbled home, passing his hands before his eyes. Anything he looked at he could see plainly enough, yet somehow there always was this headache and that vagueness of vision lurking behind.

What was that thing Gid McCall had told him when he had been so busy? O, a doll. Nancy had wanted her dolls. Poor baby! Well, he would have to send up this first money to Jessie, and could not hope to get the other dolls out of the chest—but why not make one? He had nothing to do with his skilled, ingenious hands, any more. Nothing but handle plantation tools. And he still had a file, his jackknife, and many scraps of odds and ends in the tool shed.

He got up from supper, making no explanation, and went out to the shed. Nancy, shutting her blue eyes as she did when another lonesome, heartbreaking evening was a certain prospect, said nothing.

Cass Odom lit a lantern and blundered around, a stick of pine in one hand and the keen jackknife in the other. Materials for a doll? Aye. They lay all about. It was impossible for him to make a start, however, until he had thought his plan out thoroughly. Though he did not realize it, he was inventing again on a small scale. He had never seen a doll nearer than a shop window.

He cogitated for twenty minutes, turning over and over the chunk of soft pine. Then his eye alighted upon the old telephone switchboard. He reached down, pulled out a plug, thrust it back into its slot. A grim smile tugged for an instant at the corners of his mouth. He leaned back and started with the knife. A long curl of pine rose from the blade.

Next morning Cass Odom had to be called from the tool shed. He came to the shanty, eyes red rimmed and steps evidencing fatigue. He had not slept. In his hand a present for the wondering, half scared little girl who had prepared his breakfast, was a fearful and wonderful contraption he intended to explain. He felt rather sheepish now, realizing how crude the hasty job had been.

But he had not counted upon the vivid imagination of a little girl, one starved for something, almost anything, to love. Nancy forestalled explanations. At first sight of the naked thing, hideously marked and spotted of face and with queerly dangling legs and arms, she completely forgot her grown-up rôle as housewife. Her blue eyes widened.

"A dolly! O daddy!" she exclaimed in a shrill treble of delight, crying as she darted forward to clasp this newcomer to her child's breast. She did not eat a bite of breakfast. She was too busily engaged on the floor, fitting a red bandanna handkerchief about the doll as a dress.

MID-OCTOBER arrived, and with it a visit from Gid. He came out with a wrapped cardboard box. But the instant he glimpsed Nancy, running out to meet him, hugging the new dressed-up doll, he was wise enough to leave his bundle in the truck. Christmas would be time enough for such a present from him.

Nancy was unaffectedly glad to see him. She was less the mature hostess now, and much more the little girl. She climbed on Gid's lap and showed him her newest treasure, the doll. This was no ordinary rag creature, better believe it! The nose, ears, lips, and eyes all came off. See, there were other holes, too. You could put them

The Death of the Duchess

by COSMO HAMILTON & SIDNEY SUTHERLAND

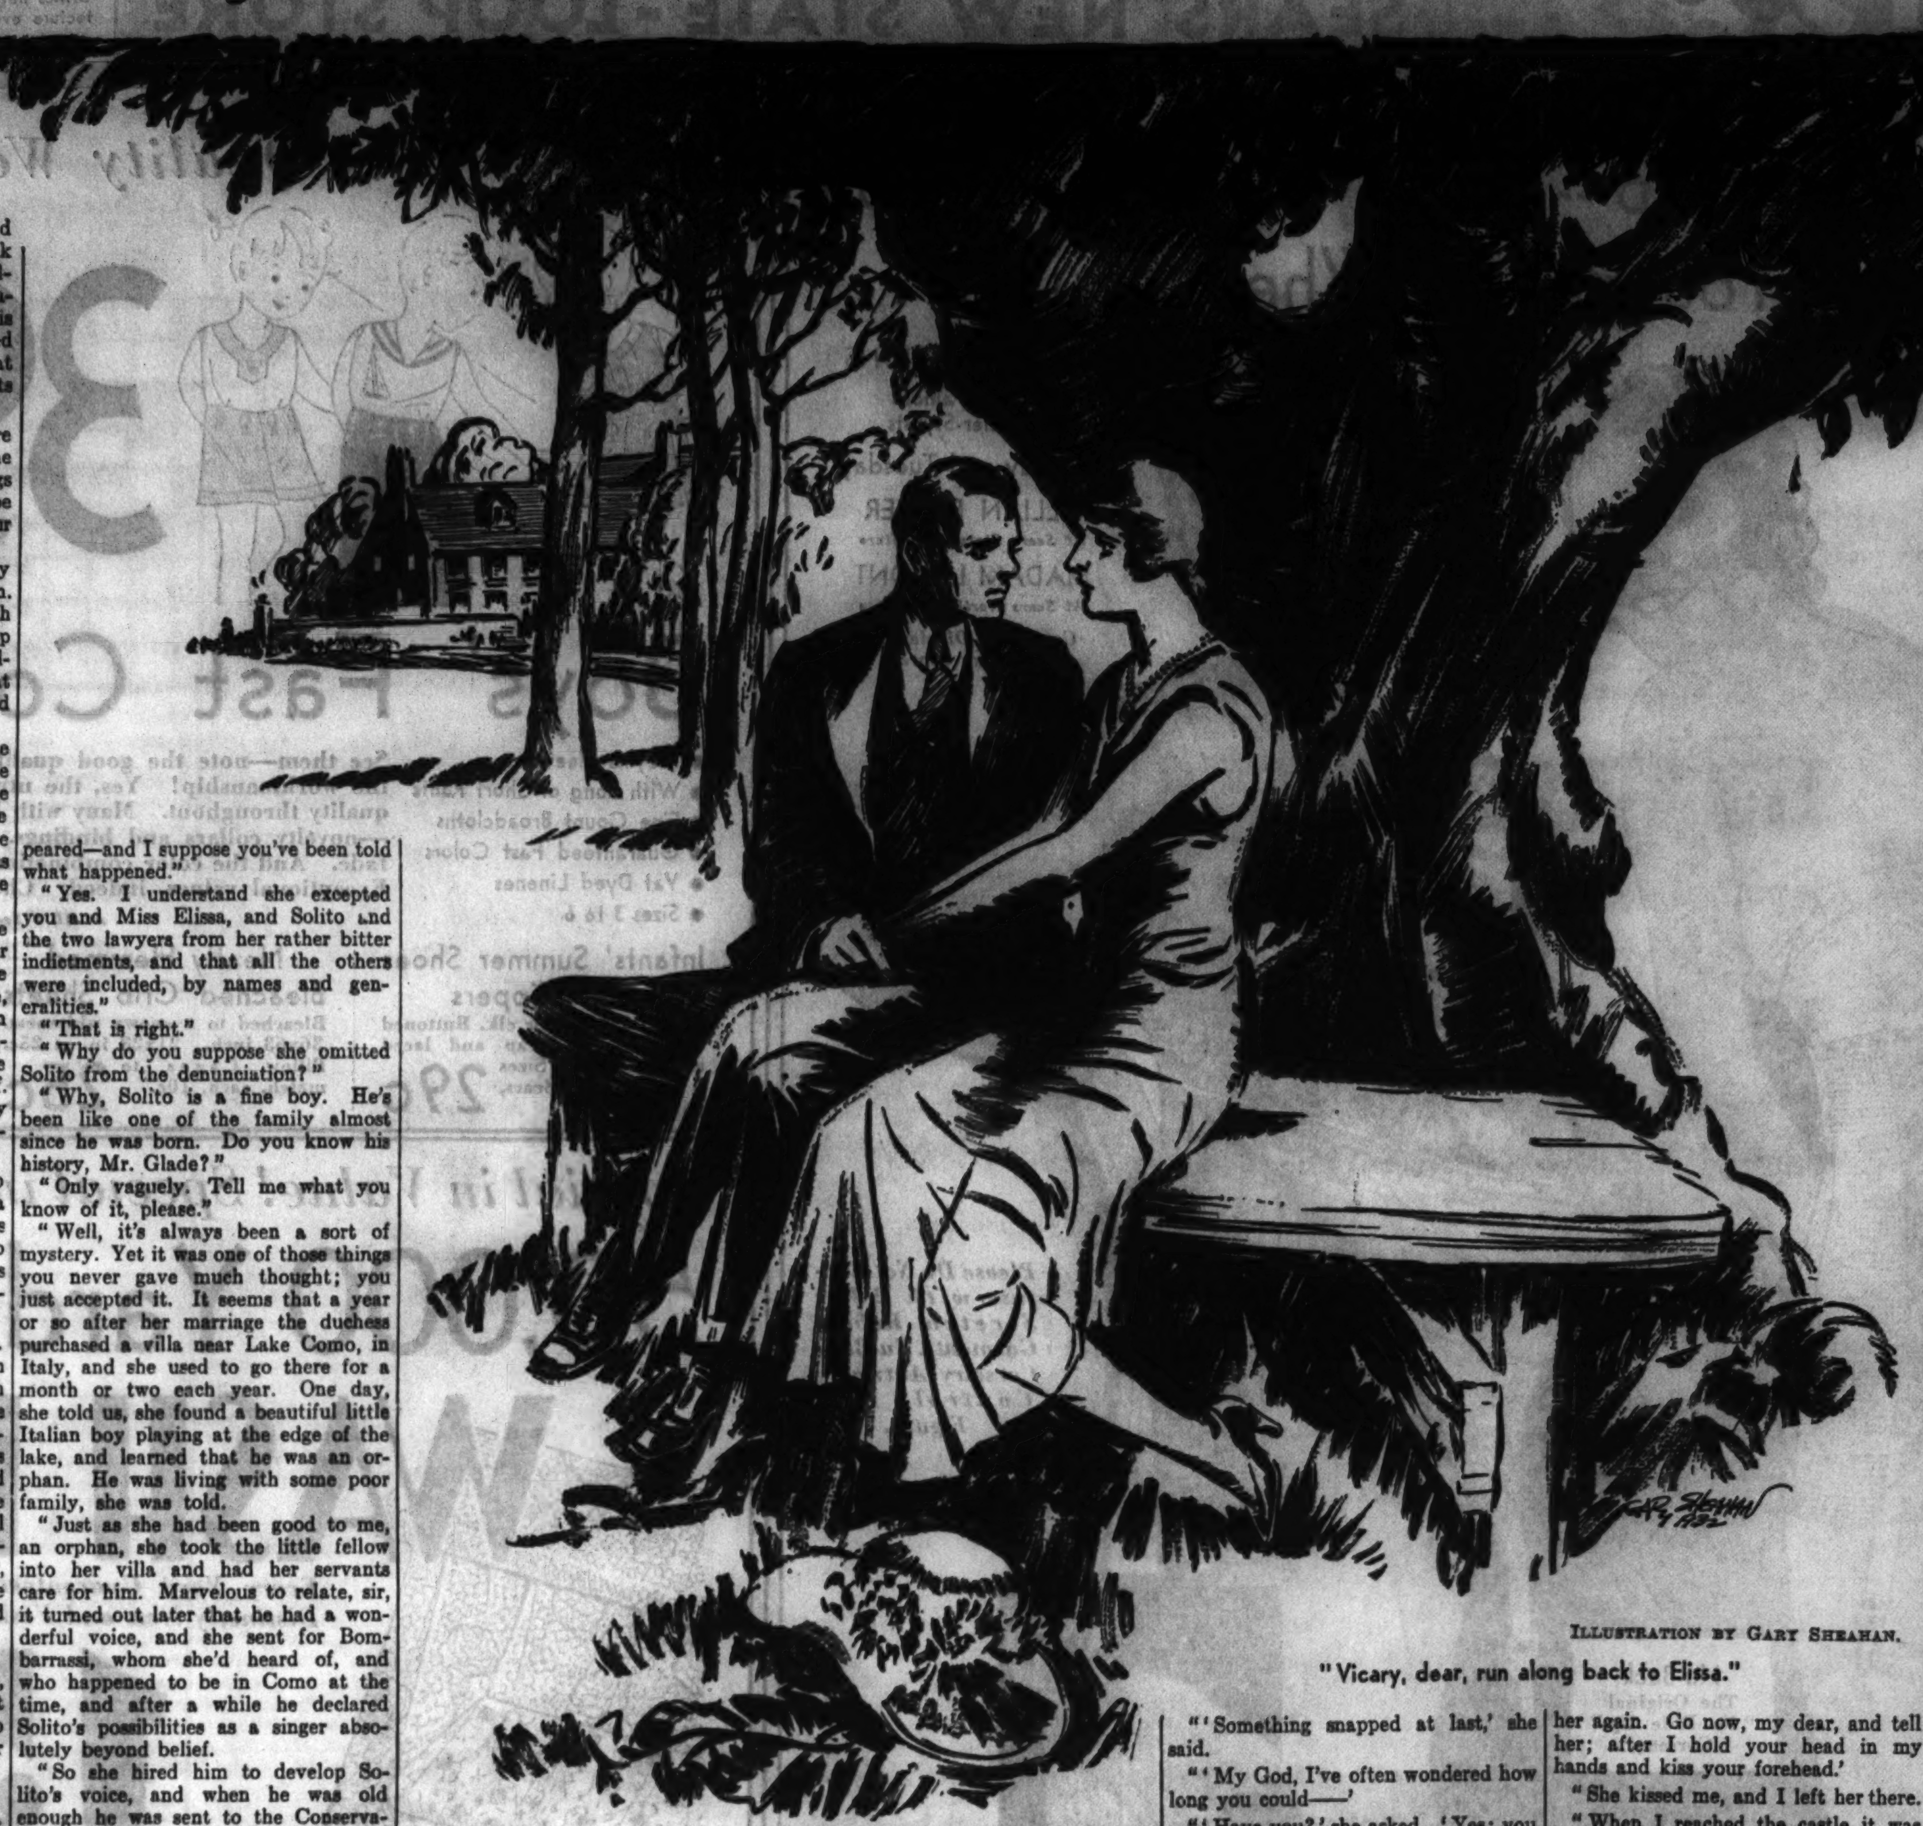

ILLUSTRATION BY GARY SHEAHAN.

"Vicary, dear, run along back to Elissa."

What Has Gone Before:

At a house party at Weir castle the duchess of Devon, American-born heiress, startles her husband, her two sons, her daughter, and her guests by telling them she is about to seek a divorce from the duke, known as "Beauty," and then telling each one, with the exception of her daughter and two guests, why she despises them. She walks into the garden alone. A half hour after the dinner hour the butler dashes in to announce that the duchess' lifeless body has been found in the castle grounds. Inspector Glade of Scotland Yard takes charge of the case when it is indicated that the duchess has been murdered. He questions each one in turn. He learns that the duchess was being blackmailed by two of the guests, Bombarrassi and Capt. Orozco, who knew that she was the mother of Solito, the Italian singer for whom she had acted as patroness for years. Glade confronts Jean Carlinrosse with the knowledge that the duchess had remembered her in her will and had been killed before she could change that will. Capt. Orozco denies that he did the killing.

INSTALLMENT IX.

Evidence Destroyed.

GLADE stared at the Mexican. His voice was biting when he spoke.

"You can believe me, Orozco, when I say that no matter what comes out of this tonight, Scotland Yard is going to look after you. What a filthy skunk you are!

"However, my first business here is the murder, not the punishment of blackmailers. That can wait. Tell me now what you did from the time you left the porch until you went to the library before dinner."

"I sat in my rooms for an hour or so, wondering what the future held for me. How far would Anita go in divorcing Beauty? Would she expose Enid? After the divorce, what would these people do for money? Would the duchess return to America? What effect would all this have on me? I knew that if the truth about Solito became known it would mean the end of her—her contributions to my income.

"I decided that no matter what else happened the facts about Solito must not be exposed, if it could be avoided. Until the duchess called Bombarrassi a blackmailer I had never thought of him in that light; I believed they were old friends and that he had befriended her at the time Solito was born and she had been grateful.

"But if Bombarrassi had put a price on his silence, why, of course, that rather made us allies in a common cause. So I decided to talk to him. I went to his apartment and knocked. But when I entered I saw he was in such a hysterical condition that it was useless to talk to him then. Besides, he put his finger on his lips for silence, and nodded toward the door to the next room. I understood Solito was in there. So I merely whispered to him that we must talk later. He flew into a terrific rage, however, and ordered me out. To avoid a scene I left. I went to my rooms and remained there until I dressed for dinner. I saw no one else until I came to the library."

"All right, Orozco. It won't be hard to check on this part of your story. Go on back to the library with this thought to comfort you: If it becomes necessary to make public the truth about Solito I'm going to see that you spend a great many years in prison for blackmail. In any event, you'll never annoy Solito or Lady Elissa."

Orozco crushed the ember from his cigaret in a tray, rose, shrugged with affected nonchalance, murmured: "Son las fortunas de guerra!" and strolled into the library. As he went to his chair, Glade glanced around the large room. Vicary and Elissa, seated on a divan, were looking at him.

"Mr. Hopkins," he said, "please wait for me in the reading room."

He nodded to Flint and they went into the corridor, out of earshot.

"How long have they been back?" he asked.

"Carter found them down by the bathing pavilion," the sergeant said, lowering his voice. "They were at the spot, near the bench, where Bates found the duchess' body. They'd built a tiny bonfire. He brought them back, about twenty minutes ago. They haven't spoken since they entered the room."

Glade stood silent a moment or two, then said: "Tell Carter to go to the kitchen and bring Josette to the library. Do you know whether her ladyship or young Hopkins has tried to communicate with any of the servants held in the kitchen?"

"Neither's tried. First, Harrigan wouldn't have let them and, second, he'd have told me if they had. I'll send for Josette."

Glade walked into the reading room and closed the door.

OF medium height, wide shoulders and stocky build, Vicary Hopkins owned the wavy flaxen hair, gray eyes, cleanly chiseled nose, fine coloring, and sweeping jaw that, all combined, made a composite picture of England's youth who died in France. The name of this young fellow was not unfamiliar to Glade. Dispatches from the Royal Air force's G. H. Q. had frequently recited his achievements in the fighting above the clouds, and the decorations he had won.

He sat quietly under the inspector's scrutiny. Glade thought he'd like to have a son like him. His eyes might narrow with lethal purpose toward the quarry he stalked twenty thousand feet above the reddened trenches, and his pulse might throb with hatred for the kaiser's circus which Richtofen led, but, the detective felt sure, when foes were far away Vicary was the sort who'd gaze down upon the world below and sigh that humans should fight and kill like animals.

Paradoxical though it were, Glade ruminated, here sat a man with the disciplined pitilessness of a killer and the tenderness of a poet, a saber-toothed tiger with the soul of a nightingale, an ace whose victims totaled scores, yet who might lie in his bunk o' nights and, with tear-wet eyes, follow the cadences of poets. Thus cataloguing him, Glade lamented that his duty and his training had awakened his suspicions when he learned that Elissa had concealed from him facts which she should have revealed.

"Mr. Hopkins," he began, "before I ask you to discuss the scene on the porch and what you know of things that happened thereafter, will you be good enough to tell me briefly your relations with this family?"

"I'll be glad to, Mr. Glade. My father was a poor barrister in Stockton. Later he was made a judge. In both capacities his life was closely bound up with the lives and affairs of the villagers and the retinue of servants at this castle. I think every one loved him.

"I was born in 1896, and the late duke was very kind to our family. He let me play in the grounds and in the nursery, and he permitted me to ride some of his ponies and to swim in the lake. My parents died while I was very young, and an old bachelor uncle took care of me.

"When the duke's children were growing, the duchess instructed their tutors and governesses to include me in their little classes here at the castle, though I was quite a bit older. An early and lovely friendship thus commenced between the duke and the duchess and their children and myself. I have been like one of them all my life, and I am very grateful and devoted to this household.

"When the war began I joined up at once, of course, and soon became a member of the flying corps. I was lucky. After the armistice I got a job with one of the commercial companies piloting passenger planes between London and continental airports.

"That answers your question, I think. My parents left me nothing, and I'm a poor man. The last few years, much as it has pained me to do so, I've thought it best to come here less frequently. After all, this family has its lives, and careers, and interests, and these are somewhat removed from the future I face. As children it was all right to be so intimate, but as adults—well, I've seen less of them lately, though the duchess always scolded me for making excuses when she invited me out."

"I'M sure you'll understand me, Mr. Hopkins, when I suggest that perhaps Lady Elissa also has scolded you for permitting your pride to keep you away."

Vicary flushed slightly and smiled.

"She has. But I've still believed it best, my way."

"I understand, and I make you my bow. You love the young lady, don't you?"

"I do, Mr. Glade. I've worshiped her since we used to play together, long before the war. Sometimes when I was aloft in France, dodging, and squirming, and trying to escape from a fleet of German planes, I'd laugh over the recollection of our little games here, though the chase up there was pretty grim at times!"

"Just now the future appears to be a very dark and dismal prospect, doesn't it?"

"It's hideous. What a ghastly thing it's all turned out! When I think of Lady Elissa's horrible situation, and of the duchess dying like that, I get rather choked up, Mr. Glade, if you'll overlook my weakness now in showing it."

"The duchess loved you, didn't she?"

"Yes. She was a second mother. She was my best friend. I loved her greatly, Mr. Glade."

"I know. Now let's leave the past and concentrate on the ghastly present, as you describe it. Tell me how you came to be here, and then just run along naturally into the events as they led up to the duchess' outburst this afternoon."

"Very well. When I got back from Paris last week they told me I might have a few days' leave. After I'd gone to my flat and cleaned up a bit, I was wondering how I'd kill the time, when the telephone rang. It was the duchess. She asked me out for the weekend and told me who'd be here. I wanted to refuse, but I was so lonesome and hungry for a sight of Lady Elissa that I accepted.

"The duchess said that Lady Elissa was coming into town and would pick me up. She did, yesterday about noon, and drove me out here. When I arrived I found that Mr. Groathouse and Mr. Pilkington were already here, and that Capt. Orozco and Joolep were expected during the afternoon. Bendage had been here for several days. He practically lives here most of the time.

"In an hour or so several of the others came out, Enid Forbes and Frankie Bevan. George and Brooke had gone in for them. Lady Elissa and I spent the afternoon swimming and walking about, talking of old times and our present affairs. We all had a quiet dinner, and Bombarrassi and Solito, who appeared about the time we had coffee in the library, entertained us with music and songs.

"While the duchess apparently was about the same as she always was, I'd been so close to her for so many years and I loved her so dearly that I thought I noticed an unusual preoccupation about her, as if she were thinking of things far away, as if she wasn't amongst us at all. But I gave it little thought.

"This morning the rest of the guests came out, and we spent the time according to our several whims. Lady Elissa and I rode through the grounds, down all the old bridle paths. When we'd assembled for luncheon Anita sent word she had a headache and wouldn't join us. After we browsed around a buffet spread we drifted out to the porch, and we were loafing there when Ransome came out and told us to wait for the duchess. Then she appeared—and I suppose you've been told what happened."

"Yes. I understand she excepted you and Miss Elissa, and Solito and the two lawyers from her rather bitter indictments, and that all the others were included, by names and generalities."

"That is right."

"Why do you suppose she omitted Solito from the denunciation?"

"Why, Solito is a fine boy. He's been like one of the family almost since he was born. Do you know his history, Mr. Glade?"

"Only vaguely. Tell me what you know of it, please."

"Well, it's always been a sort of mystery. Yet it was one of those things you never gave much thought; you just accepted it. It seems that a year or so after her marriage the duchess purchased a villa near Lake Como, in Italy, and she used to go there for a month or two each year. One day, she told us, she found a beautiful little Italian boy playing at the edge of the lake, and learned that he was an orphan. He was living with some poor family, she was told.

"Just as she had been good to me, an orphan, she took the little fellow into her villa and had her servants care for him. Marvelous to relate, sir, it turned out later that he had a wonderful voice, and she sent for Bombarrassi, whom she'd heard of, and who happened to be in Como at the time, and after a while he declared Solito's possibilities as a singer absolutely beyond belief.

"So she hired him to develop Solito's voice, and when he was old enough he was sent to the Conservatory in Rome. Old Bombarrassi has been with him ever since, and they've sort of been incorporated into the family here. Everybody likes Solito, and, of course, you know what the world now thinks of his voice and future. He's going to miss the duchess terribly, for he loved her as a mother, and she loved him the same way."

"How do you account for her sudden turning against Bombarrassi, if what you tell me is the case?"

"That has bothered me all day, Mr. Glade. It's beyond me. When she accused him of blackmailing her because of some secret—well, I can't understand it. And when she linked him to Capt. Orozco, that almost bowled me over. I could dimly understand that, overwrought as she was, she might have tired of giving the maestro too much money for what he'd done for Solito. But even so, I'm still puzzled by the attack she made on him."

"Why were you bowled over when she linked Bombarrassi to Orozco?"

VICARY'S lips suddenly tightened and his eyes grew hard.

"I don't care an awful lot for Orozco," he said shortly.

"Why?"

"I'd much rather he were present when I say anything about him."

"That will be all right, Mr. Hopkins. I know you'd say nothing about him that you wouldn't say to him. But any light I can get on the men and women the duchess denounced will be of value to me."

"I don't like him for several reasons. First, I don't know much about him. He's a mysterious sort. I know, vaguely, that he met Beauty during the war, somewhere in France or Egypt. But his background, how he makes a living, and why he should be so hospitably accepted in this house, these things are beyond me.

"In the second place, he has been annoying Lady Elissa for several years. She tells me she first saw him at some reception or ball in Rome when she was quite a child, and had forgotten all about it until he stopped her on the street in London a few years ago and recalled himself to her. He told her he was a good friend of the family, and she invited him out. He has insinuated himself into the graces of his hosts in some fashion, and has practically invited himself to Weir castle on many occasions.

"Lady Elissa says she has been puzzled trying to determine the exact relations between the Mexican and her parents. But she hasn't been puzzled by his obvious intentions toward her. And when the duchess mentioned that this afternoon, as well as his blackmailing her because he knew the same secret Bombarrassi knew—well, it left me completely bewildered."

Glade was suddenly interested.

"What did the duchess say about Orozco's intentions toward Lady Elissa?"

"Hadn't you heard that part of it? She said she knew Orozco had been wanting to marry Lady Elissa, but that she'd rather see her in her coffin."

Glade leaned back. Now why hadn't Elissa told him about that? Evidently he'd have to find out several things from her ladyship. He looked at Vicary.

"Of course all this made you a bit jealous, and increased your dislike for Orozco?"

"I didn't have to be jealous to dislike him. I've disliked him since the first time I saw him. And I shall inform him of my dislike when I can do so without attracting further notoriety to this family."

"That'll be quite all right, Mr. Hopkins. Of course, something may develop that will keep him from annoying Lady Elissa or you hereafter.

"Now I want to know something, and I want you to tell me very frankly and without evasions or omissions. Tell me exactly, please, everything you did from the moment the duchess left the porch and went into the woods until you came to the library before dinner."

"I hadn't made any plans for the afternoon. Lady Elissa was to play golf with the two lawyers and Solito. I don't play the game, but I thought I might pass the time by caddying for her. But everybody's plans were disrupted after Anita went away.

"I sat there until Lady Elissa had gone into the house, and then I went to my rooms. I mixed a drink and sat by the window thinking over the terrible thing that had happened and wondering how it was going to end. I didn't know what to do.

"After an hour or so there was a knock on my door and Elissa came in. We talked about it for a while, and she was dreadfully unhappy and weeping. She said she simply couldn't stand it, and asked me to try to find her mother. She knew Anita would probably talk to me when she would avoid all the others.

"It hurt me terribly, Mr. Glade, to stand there and see her cry. I wanted to take her in my arms and try to comfort her. But I didn't. I promised to do what I could, and I told her I'd get in touch with her as soon as I had anything to report.

"AS I started for the grounds I ran into Frankie Bevan in a hallway. She was dressed in man's clothing, Brooke's, I suppose, and we stood and talked a moment. I told her I was going to hunt for the duchess, and she volunteered to accompany me. I knew the duchess didn't like her, so I suggested she go in another direction and meet me at the bathing pavilion a little later. She said she would. I don't know what she did, for I didn't see her till we met in the library.

"While, of course, the duchess might be anywhere, I had a feeling I knew where to look for her, because there is a little bench beside the gnarled roots of an immense old oak where she used to sit embroidering and watching us children play, years and years ago. It was a favorite retreat of hers. Of course, in her present frame of mind she might avoid that peaceful spot, but I thought I'd look there first.

"As I left the front entrance of the castle I saw Enid Forbes driving down the road in her little car. She waved her hand, but didn't stop. I thought she was doing the right thing, returning to town after what had happened. Over in the door of the summer studio I saw the duke just going in. He happened to look back and saw me. I motioned to him, as if to ask if the duchess was in the studio. He understood and waved back no.

"So I turned to my left and went over to the little theater near the east wing. I went in and found Joolep's secretary prowling around. He's an Indian and dresses in their native garb, but he speaks English fluently. I asked him what he was doing, and he said his master had become worried about her grace and had ordered him to take a look about the grounds, and if he found her and she appeared to be ill or faint to report to him at once. He said he had smelling salts in case she needed it. But he hadn't found her and was going back into the castle, he said.

"Then I went on. I walked here and there through the woods on my way to the oak, and as I neared the spot I could see some one in white seated on the old bench. It was the duchess.

"She heard me coming, and she looked around. Then she held out her hand and I took it and kissed it, and she murmured, 'Vicary, my dear.'

"MR. GLADE, it was frightful. There she sat, my old friend, my second mother, the woman who had been so kind to me all these years. Something seemed to have happened to her. She seemed to be only the spirit of herself; a woman who had died from the accumulated years of cruelty, disloyalty, injustice, selfishness, and who had returned to earth for a moment, the mere shadow of the lovely girl who had been sold on the matrimonial platter in her youth.

"She had died so many deaths, the little deaths that go with us through life. In her eyes was the thing I once saw in the eyes of a little German aviator I had riddled with my machine gun. He looked across at me, a few yards away, as he sank back in his splintered cockpit, and his eyes were horrible, filled with fear of the long, long plunge to earth, with hopelessness, as if he whispered to me up there in the eternal silence that never again would he wing his way into the morning skies, never, never again would he watch the sun setting far beyond the rim of the Atlantic.

"The duchess was so strange, sitting there alone. Something had rubbed out the lines of her face, oval, finely cut, with the short nose and straight brows, and wide, gentle eyes, the tender, humorous, suffering mouth. The blue veins were so clear on her hands, poor, waxen things folded in her lap. I sat beside her and wept.

"She put her hand on my shoulder and she said, 'My dear, my dear, what is it? What have they done to you?'

"'Nothing,' I said. I might have told her that they had shown me so many good reasons why she should be out here alone like this, like a dog that had been unfairly beaten and had crept away to lick its hurts and study out its problem in human injustice and unkindness.

"As if I were once again a little boy who had stumbled and bruised himself, she drew my head to her shoulder and stroked my face. I couldn't stop crying.

"'Can I—isn't there something I can do—what made you——?' I blundered on. I had to say something; it was so unmanly of me to cry.

"'Something snapped at last,' she said.

"'My God, I've often wondered how long you could——'

"'Have you?' she asked. 'Yes; you would. You, and only you. Though I think that Elissa sometimes understood, if only a little. But she's been so shy, or reserved—the English in her, I suppose—and sometimes it seemed to me she was so far away—as if I couldn't touch her—the modern girl——'

"'Elissa sent me,' I told her, regaining control of myself. 'She's most dreadfully worried. She loves you——'

"She smiled at that. 'From an unaccountable distance,' she said, 'looking back, I felt, or I think I felt, as a bridge would, a bridge of steel girders supposed to be everlasting in their strength, when it suddenly gives way—cracks in the middle under an intolerable weight. Or like a barge horse which has pulled and pulled along an endless tow-path, finds its load too much at last and goes down on its knees. I don't know. It's difficult to describe things. The final straw, I think, was the sight of Enid as she came from Beauty's room.'

"She put her slim hands to her breast. In her eyes was the very essence of pain. Maybe it was humiliation. Or shame. Or a mixture of them all. What could I say?

"'Dear Vicary, dear boy,' she went on presently. 'So unlike the others, the only thing you've ever asked me for is my love. The others—— Well, there seems to be nothing to say either for you or for me. I've come to the end of it all—the long, long trail that began in a New York church with an organ and two bishops, and all that mass of flowers and a few simple words. Simple, yet O, so difficult. For I never wanted to utter them. It was too late for me to mean them, ever. Am I sorry? No. Not even when I think of Elissa who has, I'm afraid, sometimes failed to understand. I never expected the others to understand. Am I a little ashamed of what I did and what I said to them? Yes, of course, I am, because I thought my girders would continue to be strong. Without really intending to, I spoke my thoughts aloud—those thoughts that have filled my room and my heart for so many years. Years and years of them. I thought I could carry on. I couldn't, and I'm ashamed I was so weak.'

"HER hands fell to her lap and she sat silent. Then she turned to me and spoke again:

"'Vicary, dear, run along back to Elissa. I shan't go in just yet. My head is all whirling with thoughts, and I've got to straighten them out before I face them again. But do this for me, and listen attentively: When you find Elissa ask her to go to my rooms and in a small sandalwood box on the top shelf of the large closet in my blue room she will find three little books with limp leather covers. Nobody knows of these books. They are a little diary I kept years ago, my last two years in school and the two years that followed, until I was married to Beauty. After that I quit writing—there were only unhappy things to record! Tell her to read those little books. She'll understand, then, so many things she ought to understand. I want her to read them before I see her again. Go now, my dear, and tell her; after I hold your head in my hands and kiss your forehead.'

"She kissed me, and I left her there.

"When I reached the castle it was beginning to sprinkle, and I wondered if I hadn't better hurry back to her with a coat and get her to come inside. But she had bidden me do her errand, and I had never refused her, and I wouldn't now. I went to my room and tried to call Elissa by the telephone, but she didn't answer. So I waited, thinking she'd be along any moment. I tried again several times, but she didn't answer her phone.

"FINALLY I dressed for dinner and went to the library. I only had a chance to tell her briefly what had happened, what her mother wanted her to do, because in a few moments Ransome ran in and reported that Bates had found the duchess' body, a quarter of a mile from the old oak where we had talked. I think she was coming back to the castle by way of the lake when she—she was killed.

"You know all that has happened since, Mr. Glade."

"No. Sorry, but I don't know all that has happened since," the detective said. "For instance, I don't know why you and Lady Elissa hurried from the library so precipitately after I talked to her, or why you went directly to the duchess' rooms, or what happened after you got there, or why you went to the spot where Bates found the body. I wish you'd enlighten me on these points, Mr. Hopkins."

Vicary gazed steadily at the inspector.

"Without wanting to put any added burdens on Lady Elissa's shoulders, nevertheless, I'd rather she use her judgment as to the answers. Personally, and with entire respect, I fail to see how knowing them will help you solve the mystery. I may be wrong, but in any event you'll have to get those answers from Elissa."

Glade bowed.

"I think I know the answers now, but I defer to your preference. If you'll wait in the library, Mr. Hopkins, I'll ask Lady Elissa, herself. And," the detective rose and held out his hand, "if you'll permit an older man to volunteer a bit of friendly counsel: Don't be too stubbornly British and let your pride keep you from making the girl happy. You love her, and now she'll need all the unselfish affection you can give her. I think you know she loves you, and she will need you greatly."

Vicary nodded as he pressed Glade's hand.

"Thank you. You're right, I know. But I have so little to offer her beyond my devotion."

"As if that were so trivial a thing. That's all a woman wants. Don't deny her what she'll need so tremendously now."

Vicary went directly to the divan where Elissa sat, while Glade stood in the doorway looking about the library. A neat young French maid sat nervously in a chair close to Ransome's. The tension was perceptible to every person present; they all realized that only Solito and Josette remained to be questioned by the Scotland Yard official—and that then something definite and dramatic and, probably, ominous might be expected to occur.

They watched him closely as he glanced at his wrist watch, and suddenly everybody found it was nearly four o'clock in the morning! The waiting had been excruciatingly long, though, paradoxically, the hours seemed to have passed as swiftly as falling meteors. But if they sat, breathless, expecting him to beckon to Solito, they were surprised when he looked at Elissa.

"Lady Elissa," Glade said, "may I see you for a moment, please?"

ELISSA sat as before, looking at him across the table.

"I'm sorry you didn't see fit to tell me everything you should have when I talked to you earlier, Lady Elissa," the inspector chided her gently. "Undoubtedly, you had your reasons, but I suggested at the time that I'd be the best judge as to the importance of every detail. For instance, why didn't you tell me you had asked Mr. Bendage to go into the grounds and hunt for your mother?"

Elissa had averted her eyes, but now she raised them piteously.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Glade," she said, her voice low. "I knew I wasn't being fair and that, in a way, I was making your task harder. But I did have my reasons, and I hope you'll be kind and forgive me. I don't keep anything from you now.

"As to Mr. Bendage, I had no chance to speak to him after he returned from hunting for mother, and I had no way of knowing whether he'd found her or not. He's such a colossal liar that I was afraid he might tell you he had found her and had told me and that I had gone out to her. I was simply all at sea.

"I knew that if he told you I had seen him during the afternoon, you'd immediately wonder why I hadn't told you, and I figured you would ask me. I would then admit it, explain why I had misled you, and you could then compare our stories. Mine would be the true one—and if he did have any guilty knowledge of mother's death you could detect it by putting our accounts side by side.

"Of course, I have no way of knowing what he said to you, so I don't know now whether he saw her."

Glade shook his head.

"Your explanation is a bit involved and, permit me, typically feminine in its lack of logic. But we often encounter such situations in these inquiries. Good reasoning ought to have persuaded you to tell me everything without reservation, and I would, with that knowledge, be better able to check on the truth of his statements as he answered my questions. All you've succeeded in doing, therefore, is to make the investigation a bit more complicated and, possibly, delayed the solution.

"However, that is past and, except for the delay, no great harm has been done, save for one thing—I am forced to wonder what else you have withheld from me. For example, you also neglected to tell me you sent Mr. Hopkins on the same quest."

"That is true, Mr. Glade, but I can only repeat that I had a reason. In this case, you see, Vicary had a chance to tell me, while we were all waiting for mother to come down to dinner, that he had seen her and talked with her."

"Why couldn't you have said so? It might have saved precious time."

"Because he told me about the diaries and I didn't want you to see what my mother had written until after I had."

"Well, I can understand that. But I still think you might have trusted me not to reveal whatever they contained about her girlhood."

"O, Mr. Glade, please don't be impatient with me," Elissa cried, dabbing at her eyes with a little handkerchief. "I'm really terribly sorry if I've annoyed you and made things more difficult, but I was so upset and bewildered and I could think only of getting those little books before any other human eye saw them. If you hadn't been so kind as to let Vicary and me leave the library I should have asked you, and if you'd refused I'd have pleaded illness, or simply walked out. I was determined to get those books first."

"And you and Vicary did hurry to your mother's rooms and get them. Where are they now, your ladyship?"

ELISSA gazed nervously at the detective.

"I—I burned them," she murmured, twisting her hands.

"You did! What a foolish girl you've been. I ought to be dreadfully provoked. Don't you realize that in them there might have been the very clew I'm after, no matter if they were written a quarter of a century ago?"

"I—I know, Mr. Glade. I'm sorry. I've done everything wrong, I suppose. Still, I don't believe there was anything in them to help you. They were only one or two names mentioned that you could possibly have any connection with tonight."

"O, you read them, then?"

"Yes. I read them in my mother's living room. And I cried terribly while reading them. And I told Vicary I intended to burn them. He tried to dissuade me, telling me you would [illegible] them. But I couldn't stand it. Mr any place you wanted to, and it was wonderful how many different people you could make out of the one doll! Each member, like an ear, for instance, had a telephone plug attached which would fit any one of the facial slots.

The girl expounded fully, yanking out her doll's eyes without trepidation

"See, if I do it thisaway it looks like a man's face, like daddy. If I put the nose up here, and the eyes closer together, then it looks more like you——"

Many minutes passed. Gid McCall had been tolerant—then suddenly interested. He carried several sidelines of specialties, and toys in season. He knew the chances. He was eager but not smiling when he asked leave to examine the strange doll more closely. A queer, exciting hunch had germinated in his mind.

Gid's actions were mysterious during the next few days. By dint of some persuasion he managed to get Odom to make two more of the dolls, slightly improving the pattern. The salesman declared he had two nieces he thought would enjoy the dolls, and insisted on paying a dollar apiece for them. That was really a low enough price, as even Cass Odom thought to himself, seeing that he had to provide three separate sets of features for each doll. Thus either doll could be any one of three separate individuals—or could be a queer hodgepodge when the features were mixed and drawn out at random.

The noses, eyes, ears, lips, and mustaches of the new creations attached with wooden plugs; Odom had exhausted the switchboard metal, but wood was more practical, anyhow And both of these dolls were painted.

Gid McCall drove away with them carefully wrapped. Next day he had a conference with a lawyer in Mobile. Three days later one of the dolls started a long journey to Washington. The other Gid McCall took with him to a toy manufacturing center in Ohio.

IN time Jessie Odom left the hospital, cured but weak and pallid. She wrote that she would rest another week at the house of a friend, and then take a part time job she had been lucky enough to secure.

Cass had sent her two more money orders for small amounts. With the buying of books Nancy needed in order to start fourth grade at Blackjack he remained penniless.

The little girl's clothes were threadbare, but she did not mind. Letters to her mother were enthusiastic, albeit they stressed a note of longing. Cass had ceased to add postscripts. This woman was his, the only woman he would ever love; yet success now was something of which he no longer dreamed. The pain in the back of his head, where they had put that silver plate at the army hospital, had him savagely hopeless most of the time. To have Jessie again he had needed success and he had failed.

On the nineteenth day of November Cornelius Stratton actually came. It was nothing but a stop-over for him. He had wanted only to make sure that Odom was one of these rich farmers from whom a comfortable sum of money might be wheedled. He soon saw otherwise, but he was a man of the world, and took his disappointment with good grace. He spent a half hour inspecting the sun machine, which Cass oiled and started running for him.

The engineer found the contrivance just about as he had pictured it—useless, of course. The condenser scheme was clever, though patently impracticable for industrial use.

"I'm sorry, Odom," he said at length, for once he could afford to be frank. "You've got hold of an idea which in time may be developed until it reaches practicality. If I were you and could afford it, I'd patent the sun machine. As it stands now, however, there isn't a sou-marquee in it for any one. In effect it's just an efficient water turbine. Nobody wants one now. By and by—well, you can't tell."

In farewell he thrust out his hand. Cass Odom grasped it dumbly. This, then, was the end. His dream castle had fallen in fragments. All his work meant nothing. Ah, heavens, the years he had wasted! Jessie had been right in her skepticism and derision!

THAT night he did something he had not tried for years. He spent a dollar for a half-gallon of shinny—green, acrid whisky distilled from cane scum and corn that had been sprouted with lye. Cass drank about a tumbler of the vile stuff before his stomach rebelled. But then he was drunk on his feet, singing at the top of his lungs.

The tin tower? It came into his vision, and he knew now that he hated it. He stumbled, cursing, out to the tool shed. There, tucked away, was a stained old musette bag with his souvenirs. He got out the bag. There was an iron cross, a corrugated grenade, a Luger pistol which once had belonged to a Prussian aviator. . . .

Strapping on the bag, he staggered out again into the moonlight. Nancy called to him in a scared voice from the door of the shanty, but he did not heed. The tin tower beckoned him, and he hated it. The monstrosity had destroyed him, and now he would destroy it!

Loading the pistol, he walked forward, pumping bullet after bullet into the tin side silvered in the moonlight.

The pistol clicked, empty. With a curse he hurled it to clang against the tower. He yelled and ran forward, yanking open the small door at the bottom.

The grenade! He lifted it, clamping strong white teeth on the rusted pin, and jerking. A tooth broke, but he did not feel the sharp pain. He shifted jerked again. The pin came out. He spat it away. One! Two! Three!

With a maniacal yell he hurled the bomb into the tower, slammed shut the door, and jammed his shoulder against it, quite as if to tamp the exploding charge with the weight of his body.

A heavy jar. The rending of metal. Burst in all directions at once, the tin tower bulged and collapsed upon itself, burying Cass Odom from sight. Barrett came running a few minutes later. He found Nancy crying hysterically, and battering with her tiny fists against a shapeless pile of sheet tin.

"What on earth happened, child?" cried the man breathlessly.

He stopped. A part of the hodgepodge which had been the sun machine had started to move. Up, up—and then with a yell a bloody object emerged, the head of Cass Odom!

Still yelling, he forced his way out, brandishing a bar of metal which had been the jackshaft of his beloved sun machine. His head running rivers of blood, he started out toward Barrett, who grabbed Nancy and took to his heels.

"Where are the boche?" yelled Odom. He stopped, looking about him bewildered. The brandished jackshaft fell to the ground. Slowly he crumpled, falling face downward.

"Good Lord of Love, he thought he was still in France!" breathed Barrett in an awed voice.

EARLY Christmas morning Gid McCall drove up from Mobile in his glistening new sedan. He had almost burst from the attempt to save his good news for this day, and he had not heard of the trouble which had come upon Cass Odom Gid got the news from Cass himself. The latter was sitting up—for the doctor would not allow him to lie down on the back of his head. In a week or so when the danger of infection was over something would have to be done about replacing the silver plate—the faulty trephining which had caused the ache and trouble with his eyes—and possibly, too, the queer twists of mentality which occurred when this mental supercharger began to bear down upon his brain.

Gid heard it all and drew his own conclusions. Then he could restrain himself no longer.

"Merry Christmas!" he cried, and thrust a tissue paper package all covered with Christmas seals into the girl's arms.

Nancy kissed him. Then, with fingers that shook with excitement, she undid the wrappings.

Another doll! This was not the creation of bisque which Gid had brought out once, then returned to stock, but one that bore a queer family resemblance to the first crude bit of Cass Odom's workmanship. But it was not that doll, and certainly not one of the pair made by Cass for Gid McCall's mythical nieces.

This was a much more finished product, a doll turned out by lathes and dies, and whose enamel was shiny and solid.

"Let me introduce the Joker! He is the newest rage in toyland! He was invented and first manufactured by Mr. Cass Odom—and here are the documents to prove it!"

Chuckling, he tossed a bulging, legal sized envelope to Cass.

"I warn you, though, that both patent and copyright are applied for in the name of Miss Nancy Odom. The Grenda Falls Toy Manufacturers are manufacturing them just as fast as they can, and paying her royalties through me! Boy, the dolls have been going like wildfire! The first batch of orders were for twenty-six thousand, and——"

"You mean," interrupted Cass Odom, "that they'll pay her money just for the right to make those dolls?"

"H-r-r-rmph!" Gid cleared his throat pompously. "Will they?" he echoed with scornful emphasis. "Hell, they have! Lookahere!"

He drew a blue slip of paper from his pocket, a check. He held this up before the eyes of Cass—gray eyes that no longer blinked as if to clear away a blur.

Cass Odom slowly stood up. "You and Nancy get this—with Jessie," he said, his voice strong, but shaking a little at the end. His gaunt features twitched into a smile of happiness to come.

About two weeks ago, Alvin, my 3 year old nephew, was much amused while we watched a money dance to the tune of a hurdy-gurdy which was playing some classical selections.

Recently we were listening to a radio program. Alvin stopped playing suddenly to listen, and I think he must have thought it sounded the same, as he said, "Don't that hears like a monkey?" F. S.

Attractive English Type of Home Is Low Built and Low Priced

Stucco House Utilizes Every Bit of Space

Four and a Half Room Dwelling Has Attached Garage; Many Features.

(Next week will appear an interesting little 3-4 room house which may be built, according to the architect's estimates, for less than $4,000.)

By Louise Bargelt.

ONE small, English-basement type of home puts every one of its fifteen thousand cubic feet at work—that is, unless one excepts a few voids between the roof slopes! Note, too, the charm it reveals in the accompanying illustrations.

The cubage is low here and so is the house, dug into the ground as one might say, in an ingenius manner that reduces costs. Moreover, the "digging" in should be studied as it marks much of the saving. So, also does the careful adjustment of the floor levels.

Designed by J. T. Pomeroy, architect, Orland, Ill., the cost of building according to the briefly suggested methods and materials is estimated to be about 35 cents a cubic foot, or $5,300.

While this home appears to be designed for a sloping lot, it can be built on a level lot quite as well by exercising a little ingenuity. That is, by piling the excavated portion around the rest of the house, terrace fashion. Thus, the basement and garage floor levels can be kept within a couple of feet of the original surface of the ground so that "snow drifted drives" and other problems of sunken garages may be avoided.

And in any case, the surplus earth from the excavation should be piled around the other walls in such a manner that the foundations may be built in shallow trenches, yet be well below the frost line when the final grading is completed. This is a minor saving but it counts in keeping the total cost down.

Stuccoed Walls.

The general construction of the house is of concrete blocks, or hollow tile, stuccoed. The windows are steel casements and the roof shingled. The end wall, adjacent to the chimney is of brickwork laid in Flemish bond, which produces an interesting criss-cross diagonal pattern. The walls of the bedroom portion above the garage are of stucco on metal lath construction.

The interior plan, with its four and one-half rooms, bath, lavatory, and attached garage, has been carefully worked out. One certain way to plan an economical house is to keep a tight rein on the vertical dimensions as well as the horizontal ones. Time, usually a great deal of it, is ordinarily given to the utilization of each square inch of main floor plans; rooms are reduced, walls shifted, entrances, stairs, closets and doors all rearranged, time after time, with everything thoughtfully studied, weighed and adjusted.

Often, however, much wasted space is found in high attics and in large basement areas—space that costs money. For whether in basement or attic or living room every cubic foot of enclosed space adds to the total cost of the dwelling.

Here the style is old world, but not not only suited to modern living requirements but to modern psychology, too. It is adapted to those who ask a little romance, a little picturesqueness incorporated into their homes in contrast to the shiny, brittle, multiple gadgets of our workaday lives.

Planned that it may be built on a 50 foot lot, a sense of privacy is given to the interior by the fact that none of the important windows overlook the adjacent property.

English Basement Type.

The entrance to the house is of the English basement type with the garage and boiler rooms at the same floor level. This is a large vestibule with coat closet and inside entrance to the garage. The main floor levels are of the staggered type with the living room up six steps from the vestibule.

The living room has a fireplace, built-in seats and book cases filling one end. The ceiling slopes up under the rafters and at one side is a delightful dining bay, 7x13 feet. Here the floors are of colored concrete scored and waxed—a handsome treatment. As the floors are of special construction, being laid on a layer of hollow tile, there is no hint of dampness.

The long wall of the dining bay is almost entirely filled by wide casement windows. If one wishes on occasions to hide the bay from the living room portion, heavy hangings or draperies could be successfully employed. Furthermore, the bay, with its built in seat and long refectory table would be a tempting study spot between meals.

The kitchen is 8 feet by 10 feet with windows on two sides and a yard entrance.

Two Bedrooms.

Up six steps from the living room and above the garage and basement are two bedrooms and bath, with a short connecting hall. Each of the bedrooms is 10 feet by 12 feet in size and has been given cross ventilation and good closets.

Apropos of windows, there has recently been introduced a new unit in which prospective home owners or those already established owners who are contemplating any remodeling will be interested. This unit combines frame, double hung sash, storm sash and screen in a single pre-fit piece. Both the storm sash and the screens may be installed or removed as the seasons come and go without the need of even so much as a screw driver. They fit tightly, and can be handled from inside the house—this an appealing feature!

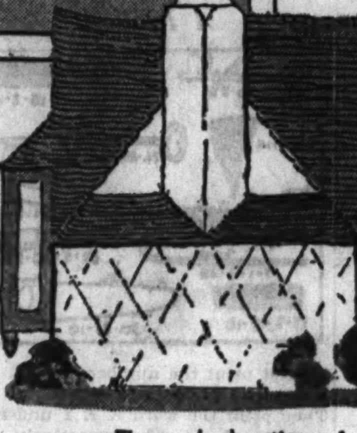
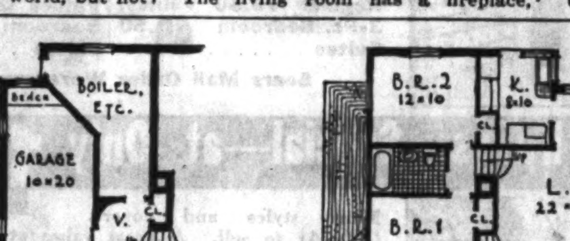
Adaptable to a level or sloping lot, this charming bit of old world architecture is a practical, economcal, easy to live in little home. Hugging the ground closely it contains some 15,000 cubic feet and may be built within a price range of from $4,500 to $5,500. Every cubic foot has been put to work and the result is a four and one-half room home, with bath, lavatory and attached garage. Note "rear" and "end" elevations of house and also brief sketch of floor plans. Architect, J. T. Pomeroy, Orland, Ill.



The end elevation of the dwelling.



Floor plan of this interesting little house.

Below is a brief list of proposed methods and materials as suggested by the architect.

Masonry.

Excavate the minimum amount of earth consistent with the design of the house and site. Trench as required to solid bearings for footings. Distribute surplus earth around building walls as required.

Footings, etc., of approved concrete. Damp proof garage and boiler room walls below grade. In general, exterior walls to be 8 inches thick, approved concrete blocks or hollow building tile ready for stucco. Build end wall of living room with approved brick laid in Flemish bond. Note diagonal chimney stack.

Concrete floors throughout all portions except bedrooms and bath. In vestibule, living room, kitchen and alcove prepare a solidly tamped, level bed of cinders on which spread a layer of 3 inch thick partition tile and on this surface put down a 2 inch layer of concrete with approved mesh reënforcement embedded therein. Finish these slabs with ¾ inch thick coat of cement, colored and scored as required. Include concrete stair from vestibule.

Insulation.

Exterior walls and roof.

Carpentry.

Exterior woodwork, cypress or red wood, rough sawed. Use solid timbers for posts, lintels, etc., around doors and windows. Note that overhang and exterior side wall of bedroom portion is of frame construction prepared for stucco on metal lath. Cover roof with approved colored shingles.

Interior finish, pine, with birch floors in bedrooms. Metal casement windows throughout. Mirror door in coat closet. In general, mill work to be of stock pattern where consistent with spirit of design.

Lath and Plaster.

Metal lath on exterior where frame wall construction occurs.

Plaster jambs with metal corner beads for all openings. Textured finish plaster in living room—hard finish for paper or paint elsewhere. Rough textured, tinted, portland cement stucco on exterior.

Painting.

Stain for all exterior woodwork. Stain and wax for all interior woodwork except enamel for kitchen and bath. Linoleum covered walls and floor in bath. Stain and wax wood floors. Wax finished concrete floors except floor paint in kitchen.

Plumbing.

In accordance with all government sanitary laws and regulations. Recessed tub, pedestal lavatory, siphon jet closet, two part laundry tubs, one piece sink, gas fired water heater. Include gas fitting for range, boiler, heater, laundry.

Heating.

Approved gas fired steam system. [Oil burner if preferred]. To provide 70 degrees F. throughout house during ten below zero weather.

Electrical.

BX wiring for a total of forty outlets in accordance with national electrical code and underwriters and local utility rules. Toggle switches; duplex, push type convenience outlets.

Sheet Metal.

Galvanized iron throughout. Line all valleys and flash all roof intersections. Gas vent flue. Half round hung gutters for all eaves. Down spouts as required.

Glazing.

Flat drawn sheet glass. Leaded glass where shown. A few tinted panes scattered here and there to relieve monotony.

Relative to costs, it may be said that 35 cents per cubic foot, which is the amount suggested by the architect for building the home, erects a very good dwelling these days. Always in this department the importance of good construction has been stressed, although at times certain possible economies, with resultant low figures, are given; since, if we must economize, we MUST, and eliminations of one kind or another often make for surprising cost reductions.

Even figuring 30 cents a cubic foot, which would necessitate certain changes in proposed methods and materials, this house could be well built for $4,500.

Everywhere we see forces at work which are exerting a slow but sure influence toward better homes, less expensive homes, and general improvement of the interior house plans. It is amazing what a varied assortment of arrangement schemes are possible for the small house. Not all are equally good, but each and all of them, if carefully drawn up by expert hands, can be those most suited to an individual family's needs.

More than a brief sketch of floor plans and perspective are necessary, however, to build a good house. Careful working drawings, detailed specifications, are vastly important if the house is to be a worthy, strong, substantial dwelling. With such drawings and specifications estimators may figure closely, mistakes can be avoided, and "extras" later on eliminated, and the owner, knowing what he wants exactly before even the first spade of earth is dug, may get what he expects when the home is finally finished and ready for occupancy.

Questions Before the House

We will be glad to answer any questions pertaining to home building and home remodeling. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Question: We are planning to remodel our second story and want to install a bathroom in connection with our child's bedroom. I have never seen any juvenile plumbing fixtures? Can I secure these?

Answer: Yes, there are Lilliputian fixtures made with the same care as the adult fixtures, obtainable in white or colors. Tiny closet combinations there are for children of different ages, small vest pocket editions of regular bath tubs, wall hung lavatories in small sizes, all for the nursery or junior bathroom ensemble. A good idea, these juvenile plumbing fixtures, since ones suitable for adults are often inconvenient for a child.

Question: We have a small, low lying—some people might call it a rather squatty little house. We are going to paint it this spring. We all like dark brown. Would you advise that shade?

Answer: Not unless I wanted to emphasize its "squattiness." Give it a light color which will make it seem merely pleasantly "low lying."

Women's Clubs Out to Reduce Buying Waste

Keeping Close Check on Merchants' Methods All Over the Country

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Working with the department of commerce, 2,000,000 club women have set out to reduce waste and overhead expense in industry.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is keeping a close check on merchants' methods all over the country. Women in all the states are watching the quality of goods, the delivery system, and advertising of their corner grocer and favorite department store.

Summaries of their observations will be sent to the department of commerce.

Seek Price Reduction.

The national consumers' viewpoint, hitherto given little publicity, will, it is believed, help solve many current problems. The club women's findings will be analyzed and published.

Reduction of retail prices to consumers without cutting profits to business and industry is a main objective.

When Mrs. Buyem of Brooklyn spots a misleading advertisement put out by Sam Short, her grocer, she will put it down in her report. When Mrs. Sendem of Salem finds a can of coffee unnecessarily hard to open she will note that.

Mrs. W. E. Minier, chairman of the committee on economic adjustment, has devised a "wise spending" study program for the women's clubs. This is followed by a quiz on local merchants' methods.

Convention Topics.

Reports on the women's observations will be made at the coming biennial convention of the federation in Seattle June 9-18. About 2,500 delegates are expected.

Problems such as world peace, prohibition, and unemployment form the principal topics of the program. The club women already have indorsed the world court and prohibition.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, Mass., is the only candidate this year for president of the federation. She would succeed Mrs. John F. Sippel of Baltimore.

Knitted Silk Bonnets Favorites with French

PARIS.—(AP)—Parisiennes are wearing bonnets made of knitted silk or wool. They have two peaked ears on the crown and fit closely to the head. Their light weight makes them comfortable and their collapsibility makes them practical traveling companions.

Mme. Maurice Chevalier, wife of the French actor, is among Parisiennes who are wearing them. She wears a black silk one with a black and white suit.

Furniture Styles for Children Continue to Grow in Their Attractiveness and Practical Qualities

Simple, Square Lines Characterize Modern Styles; Reproductions of Antiques Are Also Available for Juvenile Use.

By Edith Weigle.

WHAT Lewis Carroll once called "childhood's nest of gladness" is being beautifully featured, these days. Artists and artisans combine their talents to create a perfect setting for our modern youngsters. Sane and sensible, but colorful and charming are the newest pieces of children's furniture being shown in New York and Chicago shops. And just to prove that they're being highly appreciated by their future small owners we want to tell you that we saw one very small girl, the other day, personally trying out every chair in a fairly long row of 6 to 8 year models, smiling beatifically at her mother and declaring that she wanted them all. And she wasn't willing to wait until the next annual personal appearance tour of Santa Claus, either.

One of the nicest features about the latest styles in juvenile furnishings is that everything is what a child really likes and can use. Tables, chests and beds are just the right height so that Junior doesn't have to ask for help in using them. Lines are square and simple, surfaces plain and unadorned except for a generous use of the primary colors small people delight in, and table tops are covered with an imitation leather fabric that does not spot nor stain when liquids are spilled on it and that can be washed with a damp cloth.

And, as mentioned here before, much of the furniture now made actually grows with the child and thus proves a sound investment, unlike the old fashioned pieces that had to be relegated to the attic or passed on to little brother when they were outgrown by their first possessor. Side bars of cribs can be removed, the side rails lengthened and the first bed thus made to serve until the child is ready for an adult size. Chests that come in units can be combined, creating a bureau that is suited to the increasing height of the child. And other features go to show that much thought and skill have been put into the making of this apparently simple merchandise.

If you want to start your little son or daughter off early in life with an appreciation of the fine things of his ancestors you can fit his or her room with the most excellent reproductions of antiques, scaled down to child's size. From the time he is three or four he can sit down to a maple table in a fascinating little maple Windsor or ladder back chair; he can keep his Brer Rabbit books in a small open bookcase of maple, just his size, and he can go to bed in a tiny replica of a four poster of his grandparents.

From Germany and Italy come gayly colored rugs with childish figures woven in the pattern, and from our own factories a wide variety of fascinating wallpapers that people a child's room with his favorite characters from his story books, and his favorite animals, too. And most of these papers are washable.

Window curtains of red, yellow or blue chintz are just as jolly as the designers can make them. There's really no depression in a child's world.

In a bedroom for a small child the crib may later become a bed by removing the sides, or lowering them. A play cabinet group seen in this room comes in sections and these may be combined in any arrangement you choose. Drawers, open shelves, and a cupboard all help to have such convenient receptacles for them. These interchangable units rest on a square base which sets directly on the floor so that there is no space underneath for the accumulation of dust and dirt.

Square dominoe cushions of washable imitation leather form seats any child would love. Also, low tables come covered with the same material.

The picture today shows a little girl's room, and here the furnishings are from a firm that makes nothing but childhood furniture. This group was designed and built in their own workshop and is all hand made by excellent cabinetmakers. The chief motif of decoration in this room is a large mural of Alice in Wonderland done by a staff artist. This forms the keynote of the color scheme for the furnishings. It appears on the rear wall and shows Alice surrounded by her friends—the March Hare, Humpty Dumpty, the Red Queen, the White Queen, the Cheshire Cat, et al.

The furniture is painted periwinkle blue and the walls are lemon yellow. A rose red rug covers the floor, and the bedspread is a rose check material. The little barrel chair is aquamarine blue, and the lamp by the bed is rose-red wood.

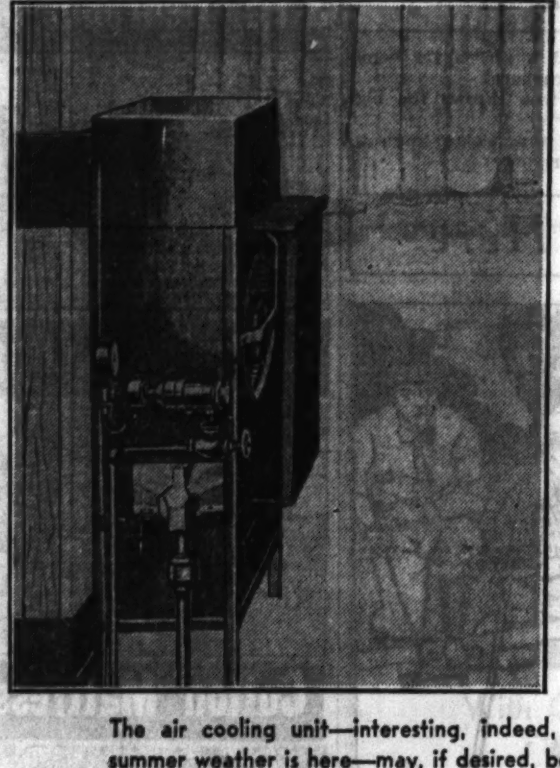
A round mirror with a rose scalloped line around its edge hangs above the chest of drawers with the curved front. The drawer knobs are of chromium nickel.

Besides this delightful modern group this company makes sets in early American design executed in pine or maple, French provincial styles in walnut or fruitwood, painted pieces entirely different from the customary painted nursery furniture, and Swedish and European peasant types either in natural wood or painted with authentic decorations. There are suites for children's playrooms and dining rooms, as well as for nurseries and bedrooms.

The children's world is so full of a number of things that I am sure they should all be as happy as kings!

The furniture in this child's room is painted periwinkle blue and the walls are lemon yellow. The rug is rose.

Air Conditioner



The air cooling unit—interesting, indeed, now that summer weather is here—may, if desired, be installed, out of sight, in some existing closet or corner. Different models of this unit are available, with different methods of installation, and it is possible, with certain of these models, to secure a complete, all year round air conditioning unit. Indoor comfort and health, in fact, all seasons.

A Convertible Sofa

A sofa, this, which plays a dual rôle in the domestic circle. By day it is a restful, inviting piece of furniture, its outer frame of solid oak or mahogany, its fabric in lasting weaves of smart patterns and harmonious colors. Within, however, there is a completely concealed bed of standard width and length. As easily as a drawer, the bed pulls out (with mattress) when night requirements demand. The mattress is of deep inner spring construction. For emergency or regular use the sofa gives us, whether we are apartment dwellers or small home owners, the advantages of that "extra bedroom" we may want but haven't got!

Shifting the Usual Household Scenes for the Warmest Summer Months Relieves the Monotony

Informal Curtains of Organdy or Glazed Chintz Can Be Made at Home by One with Clever Fingers and a Flair for Sewing.

By WillElla de Campi.

A SHIFTING of scenes is sure to relieve monotony and one of the simplest and easiest ways to change the general atmosphere of any room is by means of new curtains and draperies. Light, fresh colors and bright, airy patterns are in order now that the summer months are at hand. A spirit of informality and a holiday mood should rule the home during warm weather days.

Informal summer curtains can readily be made at home by any ingenious lady who has a flair for sewing. Fascinating materials on the market now, most of them remarkably inexpensive, are an incentive toward refurbishing every window in the house. Trimmings, edgings, and bindings which may be bought by the yard ready made are a great help toward giving to the curtains that professional look which is so essential to individuality and chic.

In choosing the material, a few general rules must be observed. If the walls are figured, curtains should be plain, or semi-plain. Striped fabrics, or those with inconspicuous all over designs in two toned effects may be used with figured walls.

With plain or semi-plain walls patterned fabrics may be used most effectively. The type of pattern, too, must be considered. If the room is small, the fabric design should be relatively fine. A chintz with large flowers, for instance, would be overpowering if used in a small or medium sized room. Large figures should be used in a large room. A diminutive pattern used in a large room is liable to produce a restless, spotty effect.

Today's illustration shows a delightful summer treatment of windows and French doors in a colonial bedroom Organdy and glazed chintz, the happiest of combinations for windows in summertime, are used most charmingly. The French doors leading to a sunny veranda open in. Rods are attached to the top of each door, and from these hang organdy curtains of a soft, cool blue. They are finished with shirred headings, and edged with deep ruffles. Cuffs to match catch the curtains back midway.

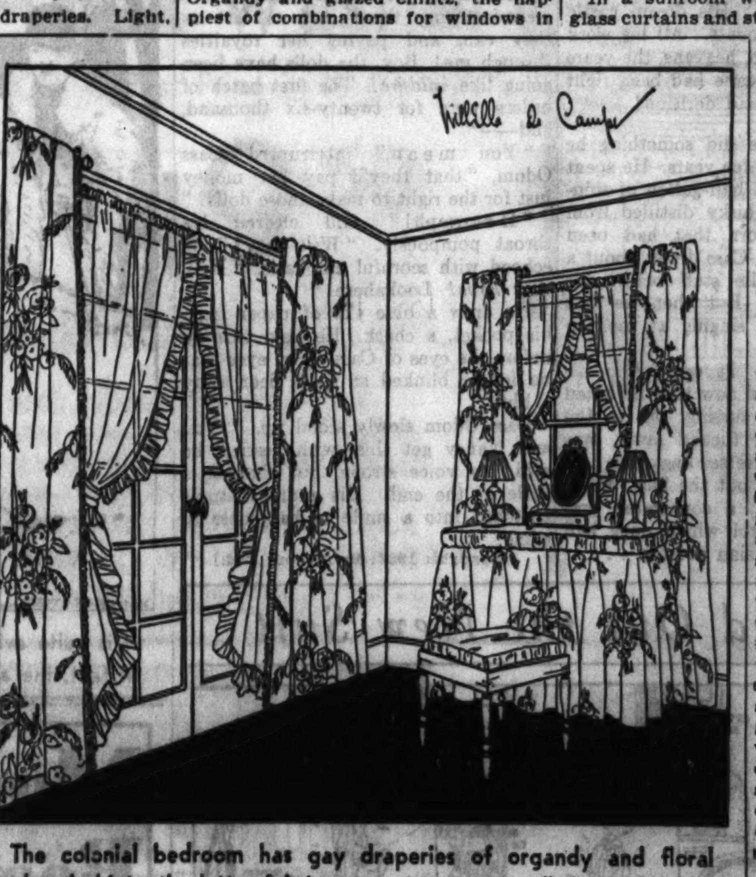
Long draperies of glazed chintz show a softly colored floral pattern on a blue ground. They hang straight to the floor at each side of the French doors.

Window curtains and draperies match those at the French doors, the only difference being that the organdy glass curtains reach just to the sill. A little dressing table placed directly in front of one window has a full petticoat of the flowered chintz. Its standing mirror has a maple frame, and the clear glass lamps are fitted with plaited white lamp shades. Walls in this room are painted a soft peach color and the woodwork is white.

In a sunroom where yellow gauze glass curtains and striped red draperies are used during the autumn and winter months, a complete change of window treatment is effected during the summer. All curtains and draperies are carefully put away for future use, and the many windows are fitted with roller shades of glazed chintz in a pattern of gay flowers on a black ground. These successfully exclude an overabundance of warm sunlight, due to their black background, at the same time giving a cheerful brightness by means of their flower pattern which virtually "comes to life" under the sun's rays. Stucco walls are tinted a soft green, and the woodwork is painted black. Green and black striped cushions are used on the white stick-reed furniture.

White organdy with its crisp, frosty appearance gives a delightfully cool atmosphere to a summer breakfast room. There are groups of three windows at opposite sides of the room. Glass curtains of white organdy are finished with finely plaited ruffles, and are caught back by matching cuffs.

Draperies at the end of each window group reach to the bottom of the apron (which is the flat molding under the window sill). They are of daintily flowered glazed chintz on a cool green ground. Double rows of narrow accordion plaited glazed chintz in gleaming white make an effective trimming. A short valance to match the draperies extends across the top of each window group. The whole effect is charmingly unusual and could easily be duplicated at home in color combinations to suit any informal room.



The colonial bedroom has gay draperies of organdy and floral glazed chintz, the latter fabric appearing on a small dressing table.

Glade. And he's not to blame, at all. I made him go with me for a walk in the fresh air, and we went down to the lake, and I suddenly decided to burn them near the spot where Bates found —my mother's body."

"Does Vicary know what they contained?"

"No. I didn't tell him and, of course, he didn't ask. But I shall tell him some day."

"Did those diaries contain the name of—of Solito?"

ELISSA covered her face with her hands and sobbed. Glade reached across the table and patted her arm.

"My poor child," he said soothingly. "Don't cry. I understand how you feel. I know what a shock it—it must have been. But it's all right. No harm has been done—and it may be all for the best that you did destroy them."

"I know," Elissa fought to control herself. "Poor mother; poor darling mother!"

She dried her tears and gazed bravely at the inspector.

"What other names in the little books did you find that might be of help to me? Bombarrassi was mentioned, of course."

"Yes. Poor mother; poor young girl; she had no one to go to for help except Aunt Philomena, God bless her dear, understanding heart! Her father and mother couldn't be told, and there was no one else except the fat Italian maestro. I wonder if he did blackmail my mother? It seems hard to believe, because she spoke so favorably about him in the diary, how he'd given up his career and everything to look after little Solito. I suppose that in after years he pressed her for money. Still, they had always been so friendly. It's all terribly mixed up."

"No, Bombarrassi didn't blackmail your mother, in the ordinary meaning of the word. He was just a greedy peasant who asked for more and more as he grew older and fatter and more helpless. They've a horror of poverty and hardships in their old age, those Italian peasants, and, like any one else who has access to limitless funds, they lose all perspective. No, the old Italian loved your mother dearly, and he idolizes Solito."

"Poor Solito! Mr. Glade, does he know?"

"No. Bombarrassi assures me the boy believes the story you all were told, that the world believes. Only Captain Orozco knew, before you learned it. And I'll see that he never divulges the secret. Speaking of Orozco, why didn't you tell me he had been an odious suitor for your hand, and that your mother upbraided him on the porch for presuming to want you to be his wife?"

"In the first place, I'm fully capable of taking care of myself as far as Orozco is concerned. I never gave it a thought. Secondly, I really did forget about it, I was so occupied with what she said about his blackmailing her, and connecting such a miserable beast as that with Bombarrassi. I couldn't get that out of my mind, and I did forget it when you talked to me. Mr. Glade, I had so much on my mind."

"Of course you did, my dear. Just forget it again. Now I'm going to call Solito in here. What do you think shall I tell him the truth?"

"O, Mr. Glade, do you have to question him? Surely he doesn't know anything about how mother died."

"One never knows about those things, your ladyship. If he does know anything I ought to find out—the very answer might be there. If he doesn't, why, no harm is done. But I'm wondering if he ought to be told the truth."

"My thought is this: unless you think it necessary to tell him now, why not let me do it at some future time, some day when it will be easier and more opportune? When all this horror is past I am thinking he might go with Vicary and me to some far away place, and I can tell him then.

"Good Lord, I've always wondered why I loved him, even more than my own brothers! Of course, I never dreamed the truth, and I couldn't have felt it instinctively. But the fact remains that I always looked on Solito as I might have looked on George and Brooke if they hadn't been so selfish and so indifferent about mother.

"But, Mr. Glade, if Orozco knew my mother's secret, what's to prevent his blackmailing Solito? And how in the world do you suppose he found out? I don't believe Bombarrassi told him; and mother's diary indicated that—that Arturo Benini knew nothing about Solito. So he couldn't have learned from Benini."

"It's a long story, and I'll tell you about it afterward—or you can get it from Bombarrassi. Bombarrassi's all right, your ladyship; I'll vouch for him. As to Orozco, you need not fear he'll ever again molest you or your family or Solito. No matter how he comes out of the murder phase of this inquiry, I have means for arranging things so he'll never reveal your mother's secret.

"Just one thing more, then, before I talk to Solito. Was there anything in that diary, names, or places, or events, or facts, that might, even in the vaguest and most remote way, be linked up with any person in the next room, or with any fact connected with anybody in there?"

ELISSA wrinkled her brow.

"There was something in one of the little books that, as I read it, I made a note to tell you about, Mr. Glade. It seems far-fetched, but—let me think a moment. Nobody in the library was mentioned except the two Italians. Now, what was it I noticed?

"O, yes, in the third of the diaries, the last one, mother wrote that when she returned from Lake Como, where she'd left Bombarrassi and an Italian couple in charge of the baby, she was so unhappy and so utterly alone, with no one to talk to, that she became ill, and that to cheer her up her father came in one day and told her he'd just bought her a gift, but that he thought he'd give it to her on her wedding day. She wasn't interested in marriage, of course but she had to pretend a great curiosity about the present, and he finally told her he had bought the queen of Jaipur, said to be the world's finest and most famous emerald.

"Now, when I read that, Mr. Glade, I remembered two things—that it was her father's wedding present when she finally was married to Beauty a year or so later, and that when she denounced Joolep on the porch she mentioned that emerald.

"She said she wondered, at the time he begged her to elope with him on the eve of her marriage to father, whether he was really in love with her or whether he was only trying to win her so he could add the great emerald to his collection. The maharajah, you know, is said to have the finest collection of emeralds in the world."

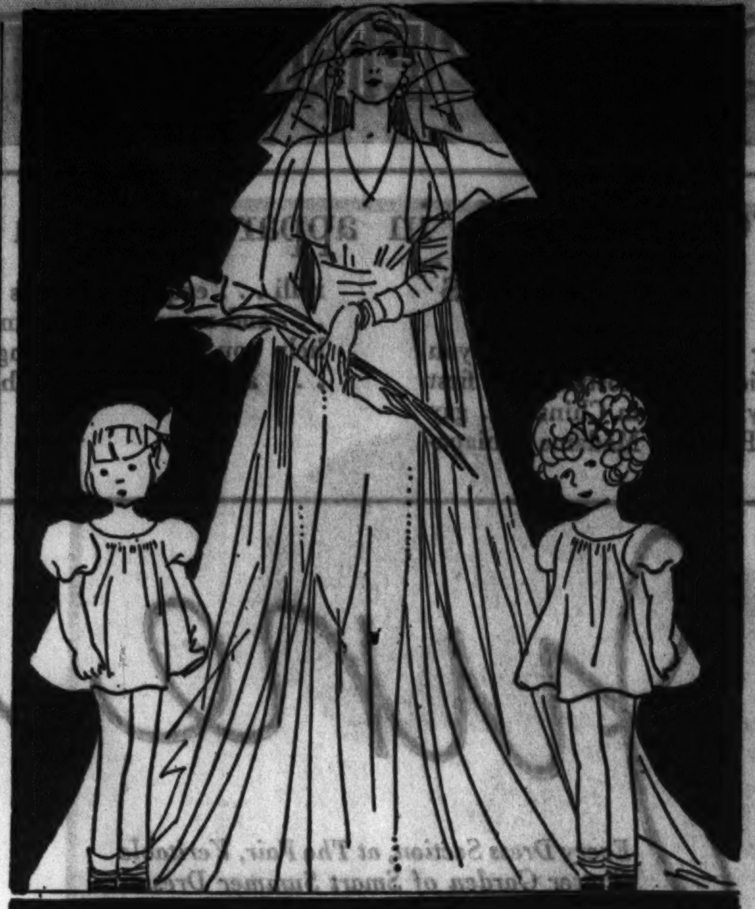
Solving Wedding Puzzlers

Good Taste Has a Simple, Definite Solution to Questions of Dress and Conduct That Worry About-to-Be-Married.

By Helen Bartlett.



TODAY'S space must be used in an effort to catch up with our voluminous correspondence, most of it, the season being what it is, about weddings.

"1. Must bridesmaids be dressed alike, that is, in the same color? 2. Should children [flower girls] be dressed in miniature models of the bridesmaids' dresses? R. V."

1. Not necessarily, although it is the fashion now to have them wear the same colors. 2. Children should never be dressed to look like adults in miniature. Flower girls should wear obviously childish dresses or costumes something like the picturesque Kate Greenaway frocks and bonnets.

Correct Gloves.

"What color gloves do the men in the wedding party wear? B. W."

With full evening dress white kid is worn. With daytime dress light gray is correct. Groom and best man, by the way, don't wear gloves during the ceremony; the others do.

"Do brides wear jewelry? O. N."

Very little. If the groom presents the bride with a necklace, bracelet, or brooch she may wear it, but she should use caution in selecting jewelry to wear that day. A bridal costume is usually so glamorous that jewelry is superfluous.

"Are 'At Home' cards sent with invitations? L. H."

Occasionally, but in that case the wording should always be in the future tense: Mr. and Mrs. John Jones WILL be at home, rather than the flat announcement that they ARE "At Home."

Gift Acknowledgment.

"When should wedding gifts be acknowledged? What sort of an acknowledgment should be made? F. B."

They may be acknowledged just as soon as they come. The bride would be very sensible to get this out of the way as soon as possible. She is obliged to write a personal note of thanks for every gift. In this note she expresses thanks not only for herself but for her husband; she also mentions the gift specifically. The note is signed by her with her Christian name, her maiden name, and her new surname.

"Please settle a discussion for us. Is it rude to exchange wedding gifts? M. L."

Not at all, nowadays.

"Should her own initials be put on the bride's silver and linen or may she use her new initials? F. R."

Most persons present linen and silver unmonogrammed so the bride may make her choice. At the shops I am told that more and more brides are using their husband's initials; it is about fifty-fifty now.

A Smart Crocheted Beret Is So Inexpensive to Make That You Can Have One to Match Each Summer Sports Outfit.

By Clotilde.

THE attractive beret shown can be easily made from the directions given, if one is at all familiar with crocheting. This beret varies quite a bit from the berets described before, as this one is made with more fullness, which is brought down to the right side in a tam-o-shanter effect, where a smart bow of peau d'ange ribbon is tied on the side to break the all-crochet and to make it a little more dressy.

The abbreviations are: Ch. for chain, s. c. for single crochet, and d. c. for double crochet. Ch. three stitches fastened in a circle. First row, 9 d. c. in circle; 2d row, ch. three stitches for first d. c., then 2 d. c. in each stitch of first row; 3d row, increase one d. c. after third stitch; 4th row, increase one d. c. in every fifth stitch; 5th row, one d. c. in every stitch, not increasing. You now have 28 d. c.'s. Keep your work flat, increasing gradually from the 6th row to the 9th row until you have 48 d. c.'s in the 9th row.

The 10th row increase six d. c.; the 11th row increase four d. c.'s; 12th and 13th rows, crochet plain, not increasing. Then begin to narrow gradually until you have 48 d. c.'s in the last or the 19th row.

Now begin to make the band from the 20th row to the 32d row, a s. c., taking up every stitch and crochet in all 13 rows of s. c. The head size is 22 inches. Decrease two stitches in each of the 2d and 3d rows. If larger or smaller head sizes are required, increase or decrease stitches accordingly. Two balls of crinkled mercerized yarn, of which there are several varieties, and a rainbow of bright colors are required to make this beret. A fine bone hook is used. Do not use a steel hook. The beret described is in all black.

Lace and Chiffon Make Capital Woman's Frock

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Mrs. Frederick T. F. Johnson wore to a breakfast club a dress of beige lace and chiffon.

The waist was of chiffon to the normal waistline with a skirt of lace that flared at the hem line. The sleeves were finished with a full wide cuff of the same lace.

Her hat was of golden brown straw with a back trimming of a beige colored quill of grosgrain ribbon.

PHYSICIAN SAID WOMAN LOST 16 LBS. IN 8 DAYS

WORLD FAMOUS CARLSBAD SALT BRINGS GLORIOUS HEALTH

Dr. A. L. Toboldt made the following report before the Ninth International Medical Congress:

HOT SPRUDEL SPRING—CARLSBAD

"The first case upon which I tried Carlsbad was so unique I was literally dumfounded at the result. A woman weighing 190 pounds came to see me for treatment. I used the Carlsbad Sprudel Salt. She lost 16 pounds and was, in consequence, losing all the symptoms of which she had so much complained."

Every year thousands upon thousands of men and women are sent by their physicians to Carlsbad Spring in Europe—some to overcome stomach troubles, intestinal disorders, liver irregularities, constipation, neuritis and rheumatism—a large majority to banish surplus, unhealthy fat.

If you can't visit Carlsbad you can still derive the same wondrous, health-restoring and excess-fat reducing properties by taking Carlsbad Sprudel Salt (powder) dissolved in warm water every morning. It's a mighty refreshing and pleasant-tasting drink. No rigid diet—eat sensibly—exercise moderately and be sure to get the genuine imported Carlsbad Sprudel Salt—which is obtained by evaporation from the famous Carlsbad Springs.

You'll be gratefully surprised to discover not only a big loss of excess fat, but you'll enjoy much better health. Then continue until you've reached your normal weight.

Beware of substitutes—Nothing equals the Genuine Imported Carlsbad Sprudel Salt—Insist upon the genuine. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Embarrassing Moments

From One Tongue to Another.

I had taken French in night school and, of course, liked to impress my friends with my knowledge of the language.

My boss has studied French in college years ago, and it was customary for him to say little things like "Good morning," or "thank you" in French.

One day he asked me to write up an order for retinning one copper kettle, adding, "S'il vous plait," which means, "if you please."

In my hurry I understood him to say re-tin one copper kettle with silver plate, and wrote up my order that way.

You may well imagine what happened when I gave the letter to my boss for his signature. At any rate, I am very meek and humble now, and just barely mention that at one time I studied French. E. R. J.

Bringing in the Potatoes.

The last time my sister and I came to Chicago we had our car loaded and most things on the running board. Just as we were coming down Michigan boulevard, a sack of potatoes rolled off and spilled on the road. We picked up what was left and got away as soon as possible. Z. M. S.

Madrid Men of Fashion Revive Caballero Capes

MADRID.—(AP)—The voluminous, velvet lined cape, long associated with the gallant Spanish "caballero," is being boomed for a comeback.

Friends of this sartorial institution have formed the "society of the cape" and launched a campaign for its revival.

Prices on capes suiting the taste of the gentry run from $25 to $100. In the old days of general use one could be had for as little as $3.

Spaniards say that only a Spaniard knows how to wear one of these garments effectively.

Answers to Love Queries

Indifferent About Calling.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I like won't come to see me as he thinks I don't like him. "SEVENTEEN."

I wouldn't keep after him if he doesn't show any more enthusiasm about calling.

Parental Interference.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl's parents will not allow me to take her out, yet they say that I am nice. What can I do? AL."

Probably youth is the reason. If so, you will have to wait awhile.

Probably Stubbornness.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend does many things he knows I dislike. "KISIL."

It's probably because you make an issue of the incidents and then he gets stubborn.

Win Enemy's Friendship.

"Dear Miss Blake: A certain boy is telling the boy I love lies about me. My friend snubs me. Please advise. "BROWN EYES."

Cultivate the good will of the other boy. That's the wisest procedure.

He Still Cares.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend hasn't seen me for a year, but wants to. Does he still care? TOOTSIE."

Don't you think he does? I do.

Rather Unlikely.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it possible for a girl of 16 to be in love with a man of 30? ONE THAT IS."

Possible, not probable.

It's Your Decision.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend threw me over twice, and now wants to come back. Please advise. DELICIOUS."

The decision must rest with you.

He's Merely Courteous.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I like pays attention to me when we're alone, but when with other people he does not. What should I do? G. B."

Don't be greedy.

GOOD MORNING!

This picture should teach
All the gun-shooting lasses
To keep their be-rouged lips
Awa' from wine glasses.

Finger prints, it seems, are not the only fashionable designs to arrest the attention in modern murder cases. . . . Lip prints are newer and, as you'll learn if you see "Man About Town," just as important. . . .

The bringing home of this fact constitutes one slightly unusual angle to the Oriental's current release. . . . Charming interiors prove another attention demanding note. Otherwise "Man About Town" is of ordinary caliber and tells an "expected" yarn that even excellent acting by the principals cannot make very interesting.

Most of the action occurs in Washington, D. C. It concerns members of diplomatic circles, their relatives, attachés of the intelligence service, and a handsome professional gambler of gentle birth who, early in the picture, forsakes his stigmatized profession to resume work as a United States sleuth, which position had been his, as I understood it, during the war.

Meets the One Woman.

While overseas Stephen Morrow had met—in Budapest—the One Woman. Just about the time he had contemplated requesting her to become Mrs. Morrow duty had called him suddenly and secretly back home—and the two lovers had lost track of one another.

Returning to private life broke and disillusioned, Morrow had turned his ancestral mansion with its lovely large rooms, high ceilings, old fashioned double doors, tinkling, prismatic chandeliers, marble fireplaces, white woodwork—O, those interiors ARE beautiful! How I would love to live in a house like that!—into a high class gambling resort—much to the disgust of his staid valet, who has been with him for years, and to the sorrow of his friends, who hate to see him become déclassé. [That may not be the longest sentence on record, but it's one of them.] And so Morrow practically becomes an outcast from the society that once had eagerly welcomed him.

One night, however, he is taken by his best friend, Bob Ashley to a party given at the foreign embassy. . . . [Producers DO have the oddest ideas of what might happen at such a function.]

"I want you to meet the girl who has promised to marry me. . . ." says Bob. "She doesn't love me yet—but I hope, in time, that I will be able to make her feel toward me as I do toward her. . . ."

Helena Again.

"Of COURSE, you will!" Stephen replies heartily. . . . You've guessed it! Bob's Helena is Stephen's Budapest beloved. Her sister is married to a foreign diplomat. . . .

Well—Stephen's love for his friend turns to hate, and his thoughts tend muddily toward revenge. . . . A sinister chap who once had been, very intimately indeed, concerned in the life story of Helena's sister, appears on the scene as an international spy and a blackmailer. . . . And so, and so, and so. You can almost call the turns from here on.

Warner Baxter, present day favorite, and Conway Tearle, whose sad eyes and corrugated brow caused maidens' toes to curl up in the good old "silent" days, are every bit as good as they could be considering their vehicle. Karen Morley, rather flat in her first entrance, becomes charming and animated toward the production's close. She's a girl who grows on you, both as to looks and performance.

Offerings of Stage on Eve of Convention

"Counsellor" Moves Back to Selwyn; New Revue Comes to Adelphi.

By Charles Collins.

A REVIEW of the affairs of that almost invisible institution called the American theater for the last week would call attention to the fact that "Counsellor-at-Law," the leading play of the Chicago stage for the last four months, became dormant at the Erlanger last night, but will awake at the Selwyn this evening. In other words, by a sudden decision it will move back to the theater where its run began. Therefore the delegates, alternates, and ringmasters of the Republican national convention can count upon instruction regarding the professional habits of New York lawyers during their sojourn in this city.

Elmer Rice's drama, which has had signal success because it was vivid, copious and somewhat exciting in presenting its realistic study of the inner mechanism of metropolitan law practice, has been a box office leader, both in New York and Chicago. It has had 253 performances on Broadway, and is still running there with Otto Kruger, formerly of the Chicago company, in its title rôle. The Chicago production, generally regarded as equal to the original in every rôle of the long cast, ended its sojourn at the Erlanger with eighteen weeks to its credit, and is now reaching for the laurels of "The Green Pastures," which stayed here for nineteen weeks.

On Honor Lists.

"Counsellor-at-Law" will probably figure on most of the lists of the "ten best" plays, including Burns Mantle's, which rates as the official pronouncement on the subject. It is not my idea of a notable contribution to dramatic literature, and among my souvenirs of playgoing it will not be cherished in glowing remembrance.

But it had substantial value in terms of the theater; its central character was deeply characterized and its story was well vitalized. Mr. Rice is a decidedly clever playwright, and a close observer of the American scene, in some of its New Yorkish aspects. He appears to be slightly petulant, however, about the older American folkways and viewpoints. In his expressionist drama, "The Add-

53 Organizations Entered for Music Festival

By Edward Moore.

OUT of all the maddening confusion of rumors, cross-rumors, and denied rumors regarding musical plans for the future, one event stands out with considerable certainty. The Chicagoland Music Festival of 1932 is going to be the big music show of the summer.

It is comforting to have one definite fact to which to cling, especially when that fact is a big one. Only those stationed in a focal point around which the rumors eddy, like the music desk of a newspaper, can realize what it means to try to fit them together into sanity. Luckily the Chicago Symphony orchestra has picked itself out of the welter. Its season has been made secure. But reports about the condition of the opera company have been something to provoke madness. I have been told that the company would be abandoned because its continuance would be a source of irritation to the unemployed, that it would continue because music is a consolation in times of stress, that it would move back to a rehabilitated Auditorium, that it would stay where it is, and these rumors are only a few.

Facts About Festival.

Wherefore this seems as good a time as any to announce a few facts about the Chicagoland Music Festival. Fifty-three organizations in and about Chicago have already entered for the program of Aug. 20. Between now and July 1 probably twenty-five or thirty more will enter. Incidentally, the Music Festival editor of THE TRIBUNE will be glad to receive new entries and to answer questions regarding requirements. The requirements are simple.

There were some sixty entries last summer, but already the number of individuals participating is greater than that of any previous season. The Negro chorus has been raised to 2,000 voices. Members of the Lions and Kiwanis clubs of the city will engage in a great song battle. There will be bands centering around the festival band of 100 players, drum corps, adult and juvenile, choruses, men's, women's, and mixed. Altogether, it is not in the least an exaggeration to say that there will be at least 10,000 participants in the program.

Gay Columbus Played Too Dully for Gotham Audience and Critics

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The producer of plays is not without his troubles, either. Recently, Brock Pemberton, who is a better than average judge of play material, produced a comedy called "Christopher Comes Across." In it, Tullio Carminati, who was the opera singing bachelor of "Strictly Dishonorable," played Christopher Columbus at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, trying to raise funds to sail west and prove the earth was round.

It is the quaint and perfectly good farcical conceit of Hawthorne Hurst, the author, that Isabella's interest in Chris and her reason for pawning the jewels was not entirely inspired by her belief in him as a navigator, nor in his theories.

Columbus, in the play, is a handsome fellow with a hypnotic eye. Spain being at war with the Moors and most of the ablebodied men away from court, both the ladies-in-waiting and their queen are dying for some one to make a fourth at bridge or to contribute such other of his social tricks as may prove mutually interesting.

Not the Lover Type.

Columbus becomes so fed up with this attention, and Ferdinand gets so tired of finding his guest's suite fairly crowded with ladies-in-waiting, that he petulantly orders the Pinta, the Nina and the Santa Maria to be brought to dock, and Columbus sails at dawn. If he fails to find the western passage to India and falls off the edge of a flat world, it will be quite all right with Ferdinand.

"Christopher Comes Across," as played the opening night, was a disappointment, both to its first audience and to Mr. Pemberton. The reviews next day, likewise. Most of the reviewers were agreed that Mr. Carminati was rather sadly miscast in that he betrayed nothing resembling a sense of humor. Also, that he was at least a shade too mature and much too heavy in action to be posed plausibly as a charmer of women or so successful a lover that kings were obliged to take action to protect their courts, not to mention their queens.

A day or so later Mr. Pemberton was discussing the situation. "On Monday night," said he, "we had a dress rehearsal of a comedy called 'Christopher Comes Across.' Tullio Carminati played Christopher Columbus. On Tuesday night we gave the first performance of a comedy called 'Christopher Comes Across,' in which Tullio Carminati played Hamlet."

Otherwise the cast was satisfactory. Walter Kingsford played the king, Patricia Calvert the queen. An attractive, pint sized soubrette, Gilda Oakleaf, was a gypsy charmer who made sailing a more attractive adventure for Columbus after he succeeded in packing her in his traveling bag.

Lindblom Senior Girl Wins 'S' in Each Course for 4 Years

When diplomas are awarded to graduating classes at south side high schools this week, a few in each class will be singled out as honor graduates. In this group at every school are three or four students whom teachers and classmates alike have recognized as outstanding in scholarship and leadership in school activities during their high school careers.

From a class of 495 Miss Dorothy Silberman, Miss Bonnie Bergstrom, George Cohen, and Berle Hufford have been singled out by Lindblom High school. Miss Silberman, graduating at the head of the class, is the only student in the history of Lindblom with an unbroken record of S's for her entire high school course.

Here's Future Professor.

Hufford, president of his class, is headed for either Yale or Northwestern university, intends to major in English, become a college professor, and eventually write. He has edited both the school annual and magazine and has been active in dramatics. He is twelfth in scholarship in the class.

Cohen, president of his class in the 3A semester, has been editor in chief of the Weekly. He wants to attend the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern university and become a newspaper man and fiction writer.

Miss Bergstrom, twice vice president of her class, vice president of the Honor society, and vice president of the concert orchestra, would like to take a general course at the University of Chicago, and thinks she may become a radio pianist.

Lindblom's honor graduates, in addition to these, are George Jerahek, Miss Elizabeth Jesko, Miss Irene Kedrowski, Norman Metzl, Miss Laura Renno, Boleslaus Petraszek, Davis Kenneth, and Samuel Schulman. Schulman won a $300 scholarship to the University of Chicago in competitive history examinations. Miss Grace Cashin and Miss Patricia Gillman have won scholarships to Mundelein college.

Waterlohn, highest ranking student, has received a one year scholarship in physics at the University of Chicago and intends to become a research worker. The radio branch of physics is his hobby. He has been president of the Civic Industrial club, and chief justice of the student court.

BALLOON RELEASED AT FAIR FETE FLOATS 500 MILES TO CANADA CITY

Forty years ago, just before the Columbian exposition, an apple tree was planted at Port Elgin, Ontario, near the shores of Lake Superior.

Last week word came from Mrs. Hazel Hendry that she had found under the ample branches of this same tree one of the 500 balloons loosed by south park girls June 1 as part of the dedication ceremonies for the Hall of Science of the World's Fair of 1893. She was the first to report finding a balloon and her letter was countersigned by C. Roy Wesley of the Port Elgin Times. The little gas bag was sent by Grace Kaplan, 10 years old, of Gage Park and traveled approximately 500 miles on an air line. Finders each are to receive a picture of the Hall of Science.

Englewood High to Rename Auditorium for Armstrong

J. E. ARMSTRONG.

Dedication of the Englewood High school assembly hall to Principal Emeritus James E. Armstrong, who headed the school for 37 years before his retirement in February, 1929, will take place at the annual alumni reunion to be held at 8:30 o'clock Friday evening.

The auditorium will be renamed Armstrong hall and a bronze tablet will be unveiled to the veteran beloved educator who wrote several of the school's songs and legends, and who still holds the position of special secretary of the Principals' club. Dr. R. A. White, pastor of the People's Liberal church, 65th street and Stewart avenue, will make the dedication speech and Mr. Armstrong will respond. Principal Daniel F. O'Hearn, who has arranged the dedication with the aid of Miss Josephine T. Allen, dean of girls, will preside at the meeting.

Sees School Increase Tenfold.

Jimmy, as Mr. Armstrong has come to be known to the thousands of Englewood graduates, taught 44 years in the Chicago public schools and went to Englewood in November, 1891, when the school consisted of a small building that housed 472 students and 16 teachers. He drew the plans for the four additions since then, and has seen the school grow to one housing 4,000 students. Englewood's crowded campus preserves intact every building and addition occupied since 1874 when the school was four years old.

Mr. Armstrong is credited with leading the campaigns for the first lunchroom, first gymnasium, first summer school, first organ, first scholarship fund, first study hall, first parent-teacher association, and first commercial course in Chicago high schools. He also drew plans for the first high school auditoriums to have balconies and galleries.

The veteran principal was graduated from the University of Illinois 51 years ago and was made a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity, last January at Urbana.

A dedication pageant will feature a procession of representatives, one from each class graduated during Mr. Armstrong's principalship, who will present to him a certificate of honorary membership in each of the groups.

Alumni Teachers to Take Part.

Teachers who were graduated from Englewood during the period are to appear in cap and gown to help review the years. They will be seated on the stage.

Plans also are being made to throw on the screen slides of old photographs which show the growth of Englewood and its faculty.

Dancing in the gymnasium will round out the reunion program, which, as is the custom, is in charge of the class graduated five years ago.

The June, 1927, class also will hold a banquet for its own members at 6:30 o'clock in the Rowan Trees hotel, 500 Englewood avenue, before the general reunion at the school.

Members of the class executive committee in charge of the reunion are Elmer Jordan, 7214 Wabash avenue, chairman of invitations and publicity; Charles E. Cohen, 5201 Wayne avenue, chairman of entertainment and dancing, and Theodore R. Heyman, 500 East 73d street, chairman of the banquet.

ENGLEWOOD HIGH CLASS PRESENTS OLD TIME PLAY

The good old fashioned romantic melodrama with a happy ending was in much evidence at Englewood High school last week when Charles J. Espenshade's opera class gave "Captain Crossbones." Miss Margaret Froning assisted with dramatic direction.

It is the story of an American planter who falls in love with a seniorita whose Spanish nobleman father is in haughty, violent opposition to the match. The planter and some friends assume the rôles of pirates and kidnap seniorita and several other girls, holding them for ransom. Then, by rescuing the captives, the planter gains the fair lady's hand.

Norman Bear played as planter-pirate, with Miss Nona Peters as the girl and Edward Olson as her explosive father.

Other rôles, some of them shared for the two performances, were played by Miss Ruth Gerst, Miss Esther Fox, Miss Rose Lorber, Miss Edith Fishman, Miss Lillian Smith, Kenneth Cooper, Sydney Barker, Algird Kuraitis, Keith White, Miss Roselyn Carrigan, Jack Atlas, and Leon Weiss.

The 1932 Purple and White, dedicated to Dr. Albert L. Smith, chemistry teacher at Englewood for 42 years, was distributed Friday. Remaining copies of the annual will be given out tomorrow. This year's book is called "The Scientific Edition" and is in silver and black color scheme. Bruce D. Cheadle is faculty advisor.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

GOOD news to prospective brides should be the tidings that Mrs. Jack Tennant, 3702 West 60th street, has made herself a wedding dress for 26 cents. She tells us that it's made of unbleached muslin which looks almost exactly like that new wool georgette. Its classic lines require no trimming, but she may decide to be extravagant and add a dime store gardenia or two. The occasion for the gown is her 10th anniversary on June 25—a big party of 40 planned and of course that meant a new dress. Because she hadn't a wedding gown 10 years ago she decided on one this time.

After almost 50 years in the general offices of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, Miss C. P. Palm is planning to retire June 30. What comes next isn't definitely decided yet, but the folks around 619 West 62d street are hoping she'll stay at home for a while before jaunting off.

A SILVER side of the dark depression cloud was noted humorously the other day by Albert W. Evans, Tilden Technical High school's principal. Seems his school has recently fallen heir to an aviation school's equipment, electrical machinery and architectural books which were no longer of use elsewhere.

John Miller's cheery countenance is missed around the Drovers National bank these days. The busy chief clerk is laid up at the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital for general repairs, and the incoming cattlemen are all sending him greetings and urging him to hurry back.

OUR friend Leonard Ryan's sympathies were divided when a team of Colony Improvement association officials played ball with the Leonard Pals at the picnic last week-end and got beaten, 8 to 2. The Leonard Pals are named for Colony president, you know, and he's been a goddaddy to them. And now they bite the hand that's fed them, so to speak! But we understand it was a grand picnic all the same—2,500 there, and 78 prizes donated by the generous Colony merchants.

Natalie Hanson, 7608 Normal avenue, has tales to tell about that summer formal down at Purdue. Would that time could turn back in its flight, and make us all prom trotters just for a night!

Gladys Ebert, 8th grader at Barton school, received a gold medal for her essay on "Why I Love My Country" last night at the Highland theater. Gladys' essay was chosen from 700 submitted in the contest sponsored by O'Donnell-Eddy American Legion post. Janet Wilson of Fort Deaborn and Pearl Wiora of St. Sabina school got silver medals, and Fern Scheibel, John Sheridan, James Murphy and Ellen Langrehr earned bronze medals.

Ogden Park Methodists to Dedicate Organ Today

The Ogden Park Methodist Episcopal church, 68th street and Loomis boulevard, will dedicate a new pipe organ at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Rev. John H. De Lacy of Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church and Dr. Frank Carlson of Rockford, Ill., will participate with the Rev. Lee Coleman, pastor of the church, in the service. A choir will sing and Walter Flandorf will play the organ.

Augustana Church Choir to Give Music Festival

A spring music festival will be given this evening by the choir of Augustana Lutheran church, 54th street and Kimbark avenue. The quartet of Olivet Baptist church will assist. Fred H. DARES ALDERMAN TO QUIZ WARD ON STREETRENAMING

Vincennes Av. Sentiment for Change Cited.

The one point at which the forces seeking a continuous "Broadway" from north to south city limits are at real odds with the viewpoint of Ald. O. E. Northrup [19th] is his contention that the benefits to be derived from adopting the New York bright light name do not offset disregard of names with historical Chicago significance.

This was stated last week by A. H. Krom, chief sponsor of the Broadway proposal now before the streets and alleys committee of the city council. Mr. Krom offers, further, to take Ald. Northrup on a tour along the southern part of Vincennes avenue, which would be affected, and let property owners and business men in his own district answer the question for themselves.

Mr. Krom thumbed through a sheaf of petitions, showing numerous signatures of men south of 87th street, in Ald. Northrup's ward, who favor the plan. Among them are E. H. Arnold, president of the Gresham Improvement association, and John Geringer, president of the Washington Heights and Ridge Improvement club.

Pritchard Answers Northrup.

Ald. Northrup's opposition, reported last Sunday in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE, drew an open letter to the alderman signed by A. J. Pritchard, secretary of the Sheridan Center association, which started the movement.

"I have just read your comments stated in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE," the letter began.

"It is the plan of the sponsors of this movement to build a through city modern business street of standard recognized name to replace run down, dilapidated parts of three streets. The better parts of these will retain the names to which they are doing honor.

Changing Name Only Beginning.

"Changing the name is only the beginning," the letter continued. "Leading representatives of 12 or more active business organizations along the proposed route will then organize themselves as the Greater Broadway association and combine their unstinted efforts to justify the magic name of Broadway for this new Chicago business street.

"This great standard through city business street would not interfere in any way with the building of a cross city speedway," wrote Mr. Pritchard, who also invited Ald. Northrup to meet with the proponents to consider the proposition further.

Ald. Northrup contends that the plan to take a New York name with dubious connotation would mean nothing and, in common with the local Daughters of the American Revolution, is opposed to dropping the name Vincennes avenue over the far south end, where it has real historical significance.

Two More Groups Join Move.

He also referred to the route as crooked and obstructed by street car tracks, thus being undesirable as a through traffic artery. Mr. Krom pointed out, on the other hand, that business men do not want a speedway.

Adhesion of two more civic bodies was reported last week. The Princeton Improvement association adopted a resolution favoring the plan and named as delegates to push the movement Carl F. Shean, president, and Ray L. Smith. The Englewood Business Men's association board of directors did likewise, appointing Elmer C. Krauter and John Williams its representatives. Edward E. Wyatt, president, and Arthur C. Swanson have been named by the Keymen of Englewood, while Gresham has selected Arthur R. Miller and Mr. Arnold.

1,200 FAMILIES COME CALLING, MAKING IT BUSY DAY FOR PASTOR

THE REV. JOHN H. DE LACY.

All day Thursday, from early morning until late at night, members of Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th and Paulina streets, streamed into the church study to greet their pastor, the Rev. John H. De Lacy.

The Rev. Mr. De Lacy had designated the day as "Pastor's Day at Church," and had sent a letter to each of the 1,200 families in his congregation, inviting them to come and see him on that day, since he could not visit all of them.

In the evening "Family Night at Church" was observed with an entertainment by the Sunday school. Envelopes with money donations to the church were placed in a box at the altar and the total sum of donations announced at the close of the program by F. W. Gronau, treasurer of the church.

JUNE FROLICKERS OF DREXEL PARK

These performers were seen Tuesday evening on the stage of the Viking temple, 69th street and Emerald avenue, when the Drexel Park Presbyterian choir presented "The June Frolics" for the benefit of the church. The girls, left to tight: Miss Virginia McVickers, Miss Elizabeth Drennan, Miss Dorothy Boller, Miss Dorothy Carroll, and Miss Eleanor McEnery. The young men: William Forbes, Don Lathrope, Robert Morris, John Florey, and Fred Farrel, musical director.

1,000 SOUTH SIDE GIRLS TO DANCE AT TRIBUNE FETE

Pageant to Be Part of Music Festival.

Garbed in Grecian gowns of green and yellow, more than 1,000 young girls of the south side are to dance while huge colored searchlights play upon the scene at Soldiers' field the evening of Aug. 20, during the esthetic pageant to be staged in conjunction with the Chicagoland Music festival, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and several associated newspapers of the middle west.

Three leading dancing schools on the south, west, and north sides of the city will enter and instruct free of charge girls who wish to participate in the event. Each school will be allowed five minutes for a specialty dance, to take place in the center arena of the stadium.

3,000 to Dance Together.

Following this, dancers from all schools will unite to form a group of 3,000, for a display of the largest group of dancers ever seen in this city or the middle west.

Strauss' "Blue Danube" waltz, played by a professional orchestra of 100 pieces, under the direction of Victor Grabel, will play the accompaniment for the colorful spectacle.

The Ethel and Gertrude Morgan School of Dancing, at 6711 Jeffery avenue, has been designated as the south side headquarters for entrants. Rehearsals will begin July 1, and all entries must be in by that time. Girls from 8 to 16 years are eligible. The only cost or requirement is that the entrant shall furnish her own costume.

Entry Blanks Available.

"Dancing is as essential as good literature," said Miss Ethel Morgan, in speaking of the festival. "Grace and poise are attained by this form of exercise. I feel that I must congratulate THE TRIBUNE on recognizing the value of esthetic dancing."

Entry blanks may be clipped from this issue of THE TRIBUNE or may be obtained at Tribune Tower, THE TRIBUNE office at Madison and Dearborn streets, or THE TRIBUNE Public Service office at 1101 East 63d street.

Lambda Alpha Chi fraternity held a cabaret dance Friday evening in the Southmoor hotel. In charge of arrangements were George Callahan, Maurice Callaghan, Frank Murphy, and Roger Sullivan.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, June 13.

Sow carrots and beets frequently if the small, tender roots are wanted.

Watch for aphids, or green fly, on roses and spray with a nicotine concoction. Repeat every ten days until the attacks cease. Leaf eating insects should be given a poison such as arsenate of lead.

It is not too late to plant tender water lilies. Do not crowd the plants in the pool, one every five feet being sufficient.

Tuesday, June 14.

Thin vegetable crops while the plants are small for least disturbance to those remaining.

Remove water sprouts on the fruit trees before they do any damage to the tree's growth. Continue to prune shrubs after flowering. Keep straggling vines tied up.

Sow seeds of perennial flowering plants, so they will be large enough by fall for permanent planting.

Wednesday, June 15.

Propagate such creeping plants as sedum, creeping phlox, hardy candytuft, aubretia, and arenaria. These cuttings grow easily and may be lined out in a frame where some shade can be given for a short time. Plant another batch of gladiolus corms. Give the risi plenty of water and plant food.

Pinch back the chrysanthemums that are to flower next fall. It is not too late to buy potted hardy chrysanthemums for outside planting.

Tuberous rooted begonias may be planted in a shady place out of doors.

Thursday, June 16.

See that newly planted perennials are not allowed to suffer from a lack of water. Mulching the ground between the plants is good practice, for it conserves the moisture.

Raffia is excellent for tying up plants. Stake tomatoes instead of allowing them to creep along the ground. Burn plants if they become so badly infested with insects as to injure them severely.

Layering of magnolias, roses, and many shrubs may begin this month. Remove all suckers from budded roses. They appear from the base because they are from the stock on which the variety was grafted. Black spot on roses, recognized by the black spots on the leaves, is caused by fungus. Spray with Bordeaux mixture.

Friday, June 17.

Plant a few ornamental grasses, for they are interesting and their heads are fine for bouquets. The various fountain grasses (Pennisetum Ruppelii, P. longstylum, and P. capreum) are attractive in clumps or with other plants.

Verbenas, petunias, and other low and spreading plants may be pegged down to cover the beds thoroughly.

Try planting a few hills of peanuts for the children. Few persons have actually seen the growing plants. Sow a few seeds of sensitive plants (Memosa pudica) for a curiosity.

Saturday, June 18.

Start the practice of jotting down garden notes, such as changes that may seem advantageous, the behavior of plants under your conditions, and whether other sorts might not be an improvement. Note the plants that please you, visit the flower shows for observation as well as recreation. Save these notes until winter, when the changes contemplated may be studied with care.

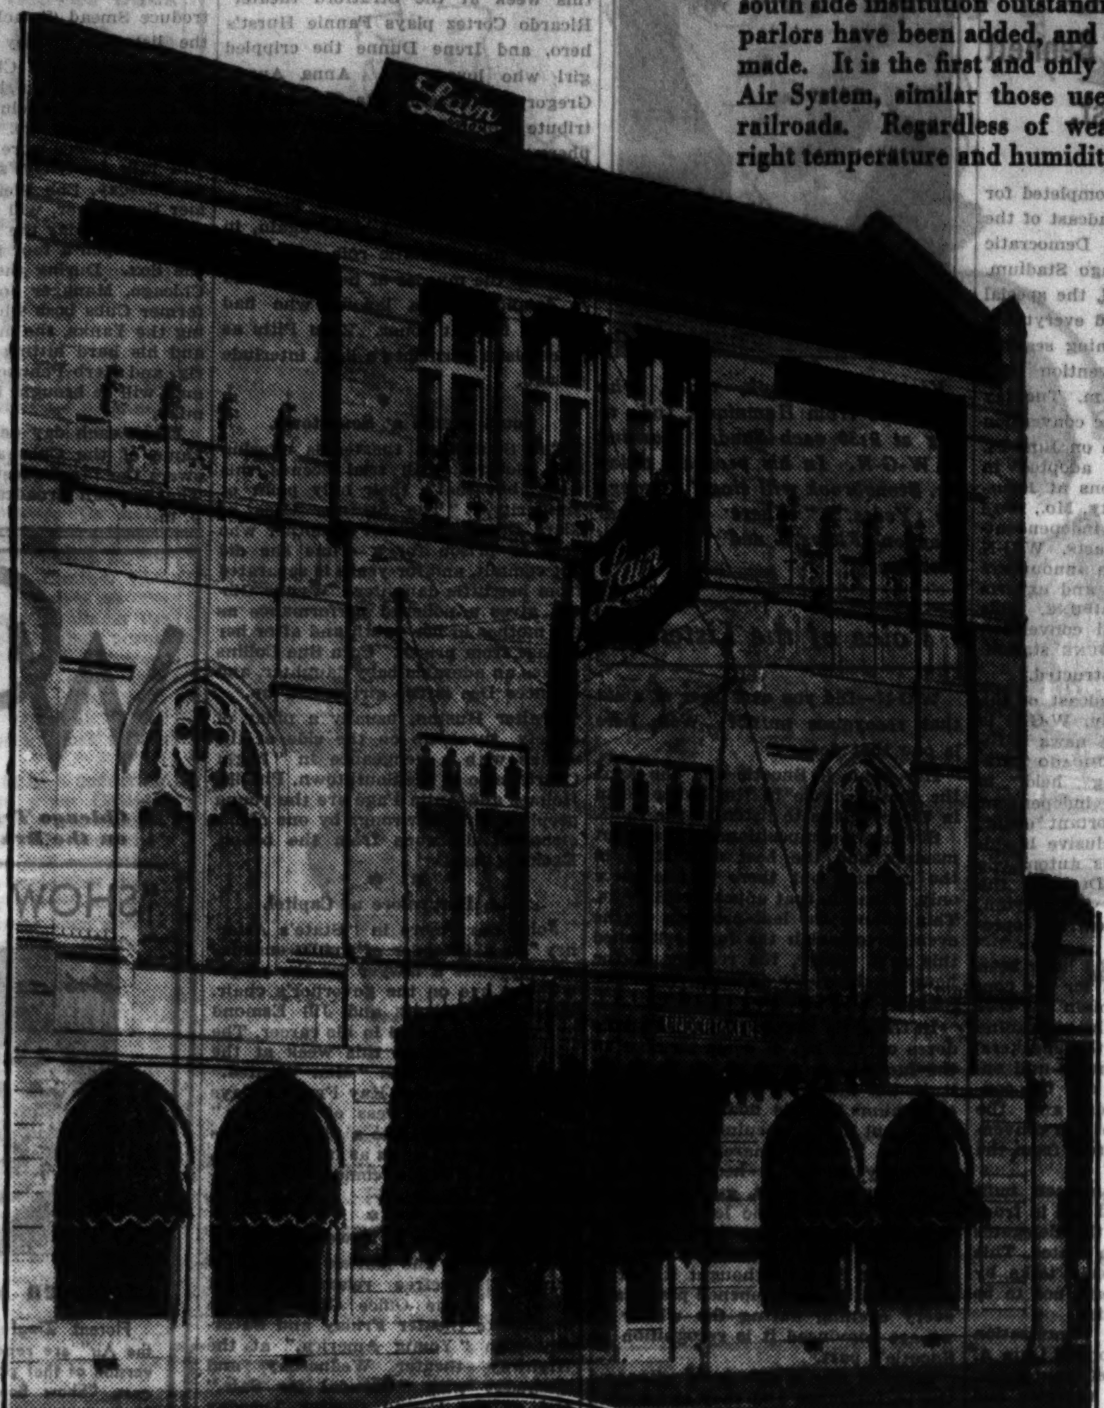
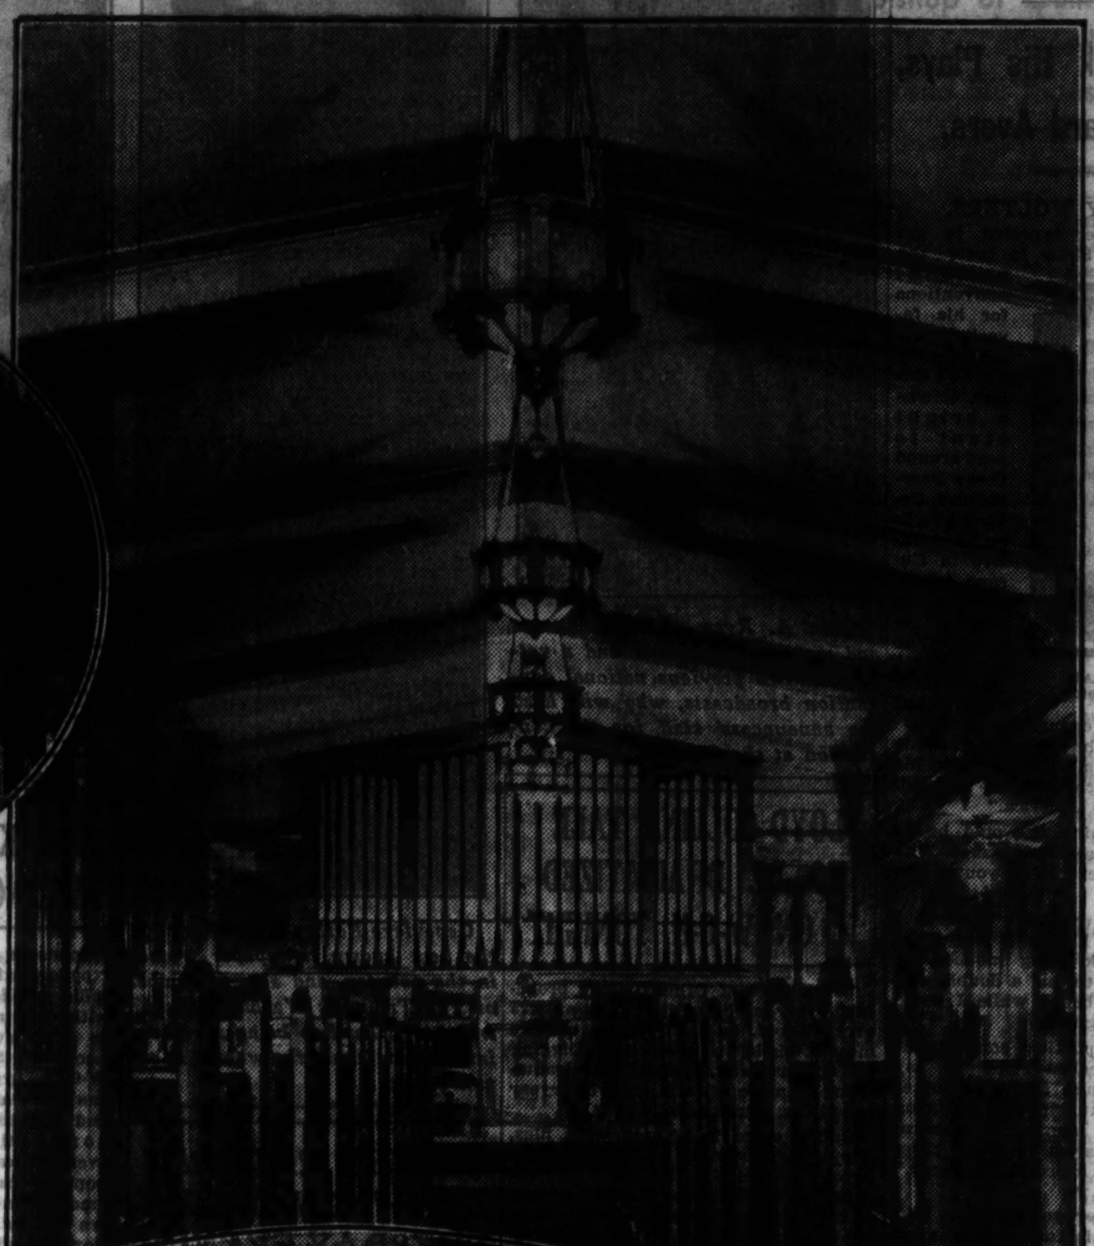
Lain & Son's $250,000 Funeral Home Is One of the Finest Establishments in the Country

Recent alterations, at an expense of over $45,000, have made this south side institution outstanding in architectural beauty. Two new parlors have been added, and many other improvements have been made. It is the first and only Funeral Home to have a Conditioned Air System, similar those used in the most modern theaters and railroads. Regardless of weather conditions, or attendance, the right temperature and humidity are maintained summer and winter.



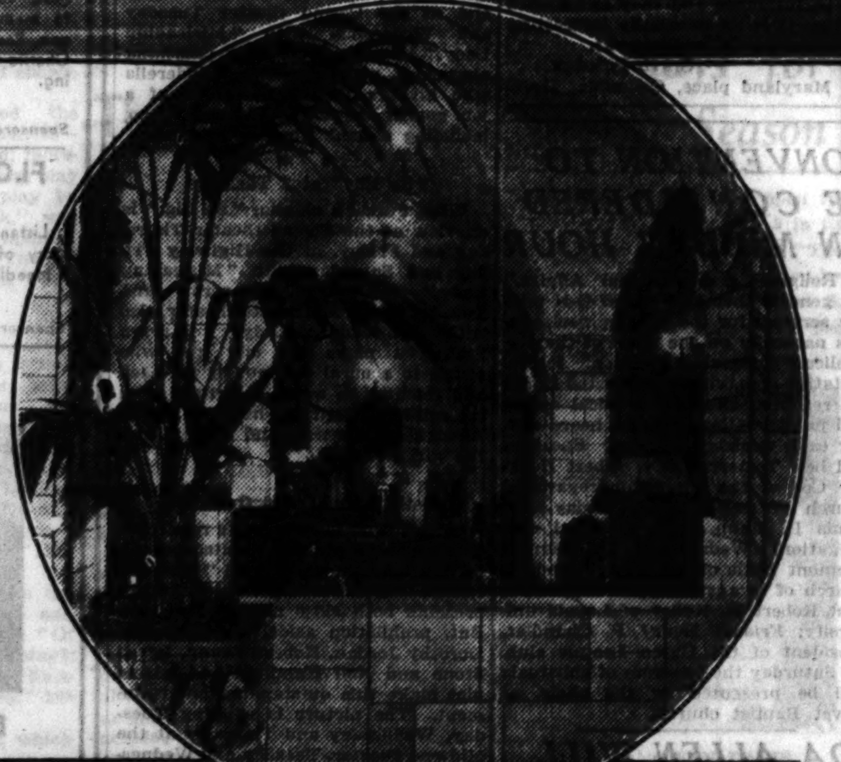
This massive canopy of solid copper is an architectural masterpiece, and is well known to all who travel on Sixty-third street.

Left: The entire front of the building has been remodeled, emphasizing the beauty of the Gothic architecture, which motif has been maintained throughout the entire building.



Right: This cathedral-like chapel is equipped with a specially built soft-toned organ. Seating capacity, 250.

Lain & Son occupy this entire building, which is located at 63rd and Harvard — convenient to "L," street cars, and railroads.



The Main Reception Room on the second floor is luxuriously furnished, and greatly increases the capacity of the Chapel, as the complete services and music may be heard over the Public Address System.

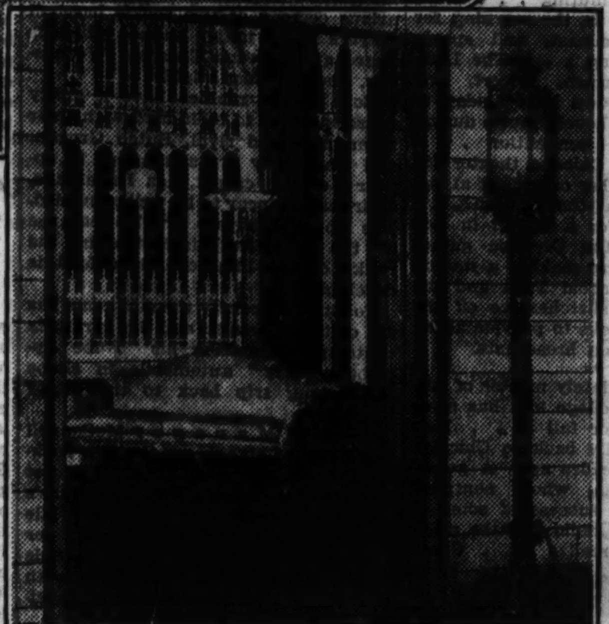
These views of the Main Reception Room are from the Main Stairway, and show the six conveniently located private rooms.

Control panel for the Air Conditioning System, in Mr. Lain's office, which shows air conditions and temperature throughout the entire building. It furnishes 6,000 cubic feet of washed air per minute, refrigerated in summer, heated in winter.

Large stairway gives easy access to the Reception Room on the Second Floor.

The Chapel is equipped with a magnificent soft-toned organ, specially constructed for Lain & Son. A microphone carries the organ music and entire services to the Main Reception Room over a Public Address System, so that all who attend may hear the entire services. Every feature has been provided to enhance the beauty of the services, and to provide comfortable facilities for any sized attendance.

A nurse is stationed at the head of the Stairway to give any assistance possible, and to furnish information.



The new East Parlor, which may be combined with the West Parlor, forming a private chapel, when greater privacy is desired.

One of the new West Parlors, showing the charm of the Gothic columns. This parlor is larger than a private room, and is beautifully furnished.

Soft, diffused light is furnished by the handsome Indirect Lighting Fixtures, which are used throughout this modern funeral home.

Forty-one years of dependable service to the people of Chicago and particularly the South Side, have made possible this beautiful funeral home of Lain & Son. Because of the fact that they handle more services in a year than any other single establishment in Chicago, it is possible for them to maintain the lowest prices. More than one-third of the complete services conducted by Lain & Son cost less than $200—and three-fourths of their total services were under $400. You are invited to visit this establishment at any time. SHAW SPURNS BID TO REPORT TWO BIG CONVENTIONS

They Wreck His Plays, Whitebeard Avers.

BERNARD SHAW.

Mr. Paley never expected to get George Bernard Shaw to cover the national conventions for his favorite radio network. Nevertheless, it was a bright stunt to send around Cesar Saerchinger, Columbia's representative in Europe, to get the whitebeard's refusal. The retort wasn't too clever, but it's still Shavian enough to print.

As soon as he had heard the words "come to America," Shaw put up his hand. "Stop right there," he said. "I'll never go to America."

"Don't you think it would be as interesting," Saerchinger asked, "as some of the other places you've visited?"

"Yes," Shaw replied, "and if I weren't so well known I might go; but I won't risk being mobbed. I would first have to find a double who would bear the brunt while I could go around in disguise.

"As for your political conventions, they nearly wrecked some of my plays. I have just stopped another manager from launching one during the convention month. Theatrical managers don't seem to know there is such a thing as a presidential year."

That new tenor soloist with Carl Moore on W-G-N is Tommy Crume . . . He also plays the guitar . . . Another newcomer is Hobart Grimes, who plays the fiddle, sax, guitar, flute, clarinet and trumpet . . . And he's a vocalist, too . . . Deacon Moore has two singing trios: Number one, Don Gersman, Jimmy Kirkwood and Ray Davis; Number two, Grimes, Crume and Cecil Reeder . . . Rudy Vallee and Irene Bordoni, who appear together on the air, are rivals this week . . . Irene is the headliner at the Palace . . . Rudy, with others from the "Scandals," is on the stage of the Chicago.

GUY LOMBARDO.

Journeyed over to NBC one evening last week to hear Gene Austin, who made a fortune out of records, making a bid for radio . . . Gene does some nifty tenorizing . . . Edgar Guest dropped in with his young son for the broadcast and offered congratulations . . . Guest holds some sort of record for long distance commuting . . . Runs over from Detroit in the morning for his network broadcast, and speeds back in the evening . . . The Lombardos—Guy, Carmen, Lebert, and Victor—come to town next Friday to provide sweet and lovely music during the Republican convention . . . They'll be at the Chicago theater for a week and will play one night at the Aragon and one at the Trianon . . . They may play for a month in Los Angeles during the Olympic games and are considering making a motion picture . . . Harold Teen and the Hoopers, W-G-N sketches, go off the air for several weeks to provide added time for convention broadcasts.

Julius Tannen, lately master of ceremonies at the College inn, has some radio plans for fall . . . He's bringing his family back to Chicago, his home two decades ago. A generous man, Tannen, whose contributions toward the success of some of the headliners of radio and the stage too few persons realize . . . Grace Hayes sings a little ditty titled "You've Got Me Between the Devil and the NBC" . . . "Tony Stoopnagle's Scrap Book" is coming out soon . . . When Downey returns to the air next season they say Tony Wons will be missing . . . Wons was enough.

CLAY BRYSON.

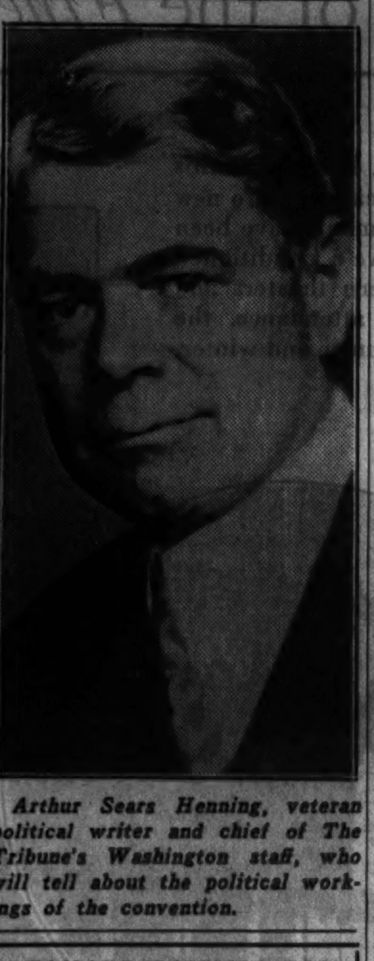
Clay Bryson, heard over W-G-N from the Blackhawk nightly, who was born down Shreveport way, learned his first tunes from Negroes in the cotton fields. . . . Resting during the noonday the colored folks passed the time singing and that's where he learned "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," . . . Bryson was a poor kid and had to work to help feed the family. . . . When he grew up he bought a home for his mother in Shreveport. . . . Recently he returned with his banjo and spent a pleasant afternoon playing and singing with the old Negroes. . . . Watch for Clay singing "That's Why Darkies Were Born" with more than usual feeling one of these evenings.

Chicago bade Ruth Betz auf wiedersehn last week . . . She's off for KMOX, for which CBS has big plans, including a southwestern network . . . Dorothy Gardiner, from the St. Louis station, takes her place here . . . One more reason why Charlie Agnew and Irene Taylor are so popular: They remember faces—and names.

COVERING THE CONVENTIONS WITH W-G-N

Quin A. Ryan, chief announcer and manager of W-G-N and a veteran of two previous national convention broadcasts, who will head the announcers' staff for the convention at the Stadium.

Genevieve Forbes Herrick, one of the best known newspaper women in the country, and also a member of The Tribune's Washington staff, will be on hand to bring first hand information about the women at the convention.



Arthur Sears Henning, veteran political writer and chief of The Tribune's Washington staff, who will tell about the political workings of the convention.

FLOYD COLLINS' TALE TO BE DRAMATIZED ON W-G-N TONIGHT

"Headlines of Other Days," broadcast every night of the week at 9:25 over W-G-N, by Quin Ryan, require most of his leisure moments. Digging up, summarizing, editing, and dramatizing famous events of yesteryear constitute a tremendous task.

Quin's office is littered with files, clippings, histories, and notes. He devotes himself for ten hours on Sundays delving into the bound volumes of old CHICAGO TRIBUNE's. Sometimes he dictates headlines, notes, and paragraphs from the old newspapers to a stenographer, but, in the final draft, he typewrites his own manuscripts. A man who has been a newspaper man is rarely able to dictate a story.

Tonight's broadcast of "Headlines of Other Days" will cover the exciting days, when hundreds of men worked in shifts, seeking to find Floyd Collins in the Kentucky cave.

Among the subjects he has chosen for recreation in the near future are the Gotch-Hackenschmidt championship wrestling match in Chicago in 1911; the first radio broadcast, by KDKA, in Pittsburgh, in 1920; Bobby Jones' winning of the American amateur golf tournament, after triumphing also in the American open, British amateur and British open; the nomination of Abraham Lincoln in the Chicago Wigwam, and other famous presidential conventions.

Listeners have been invited to submit suggestions. The events suggested by most persons have been the Iroquois fire and the Eastland disaster, both in Chicago.

SURPRISES AHEAD FOR APPLEBERRY AND ROOKIE PAL

Several surprises are in store for Rube Appleberry and Tommy Malloy in this coming week's episodes of "Big Leaguers and Bushers," W-G-N's hilarious comedy of two rookie baseball players in the major leagues which is heard at 9:30 each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday nights.

Both of the rookies have a guilty conscience due to their feud with their team mate and rival, Butch Grogan, and when they are summoned to appear "on the carpet," as Rube says, their fears appear to be well grounded. The boys anticipate trouble because of the apparent dissension in the ranks of the Panthers their feud is developing.

To Rube especially the summons has an ominous aspect and he seriously contemplates getting his "Rube Appleberry Day" automobile in shape for a long trip back to the minor leagues.

However, Manager McConnell switches the signals on the two rookies to such an extent that they get the surprise of their lives and Rube's enthusiasm mounts to the skys, while the only cloud on the horizon for Tommy is the fact that his trouble with Grogan is interupting the smooth flow of his love affair with the beautiful Betty Deering.

During the coming week Rube takes the mound in the games with the Pirates and pits his skill and his famous "Hurricane Hannah" fast ball against the great Waner boys and the other Pirate stars.

HERE'S CHANCE TO PICK ALL TIME ALL-AMERICAN 9

What would be your idea of the all time All-American baseball team? What nine men would you pick out of all baseball history for such a classic team? These are questions Quin Ryan will be asking in his sports review every evening during the coming week, starting tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. Prizes are being offered for the best answers.

Animal Circus to Visit Amusement Park Saturday

Now that summer is here and everybody is going to the amusement parks the animals of W-G-N's "Animal Circus" have decided to take a day off. Porky, the pig, is going to do his splash stunt on the chute the chutes; Daisy, the cow, will ride on the roller coaster. Minnie Cluck and Dickie Doodle are going to sell popcorn, peanuts, and nice fresh eggs.

Knitting Class Suspends During Two Conventions

W-G-N's class in knitting will have the next three weeks in which to practice the stitches described by Mrs. Mary Laura Simpson, the "Knitting Guild" having been taken off the air for that time because of the sessions of the two national conventions.

KASSEL RETURNS TO W-G-N NEXT TUESDAY EVENING

ART KASSEL.

Art Kassel and his orchestra return to the Bismarck hotel and W-G-N next Tuesday night. Kassel and his band have been touring the country for the last four weeks, but are returning to their old stand to broadcast the balance of the month on W-G-N and provide entertainment for the convention crowds expected at the hotel.

A pair of substitute bands for the Blackhawk restaurant and the Bismarck have been announced to allow Clay Bryson's and Kassel's boys a night off each week. On Monday nights Bryson's band will be replaced by Earl Hoffman and his orchestra, who will supply the music during the W-G-N period regularly occupied by Bryson. Johnny Maitland's orchestra will substitute for Kassel and his boys on Wednesday nights and will broadcast on W-G-N.

Other bands broadcasting over W-G-N will continue on their regular schedules. From the Aragon ballroom Bernie Cummins and his orchestra are heard every night except Mondays. Maurie Sherman and his orchestra broadcast from the Trianon four nights a week from Thursday to Sunday inclusive, while the Earl Burnett orchestra, with its great array of soloists, is heard every night from the Lincoln Tavern.

ARTHUR TRACY TO SING SONGS OF TWO NATIONS

Arthur Tracy, the Street Singer, who is combining stage performances in the vaudeville and motion picture houses with his appearances before the microphone, will be heard in a program of French and English popular songs during the broadcast tomorrow from 8:15 to 8:30 p. m., over W-G-N. Opening his presentation with a group of English melodies, Tracy will offer "One More Kiss," "Just a Little Love, a Little Kiss," and "Sylvia." His second group of selections will consist of songs from current French musical productions, including "Sous les Toits de Paris" [Under the Roofs of Pairs], "J'ai Deux Amours" [Two Loves], and "Elegie." In conclusion he will present the love aria, "One Alone," from "The Desert Song."

LEONARD SALVO'S MAIL BOX KEEPS LISTENERS ASKING FOR REQUESTS

LEONARD SALVO.

Sponsors may give away money or expensive gifts to lure letters from the radio public, but with only a song as a reward, Leonard Salvo W-G-N organist, has for a year and a half been conducting an ever increasingly popular contest among the listeners to his "Mail Box" program at 7:30 each week day morning.

Leonard has been having listeners from the five states of Chicagoland vieing like a bunch of school children for a single program a week by simply promising to play their favorite songs for them. He has allotted programs for the first five days of the week to listeners from the five Chicagoland states, respectively, saying to them, "This is your day. On it I will play your requests. If you send more requests than your neighboring states I'll give you my Saturday program." The listeners have liked the arrangement and the program has grown steadily in popularity.

The programs are assigned as follows: Monday, to Illinois; Tuesday, Wisconsin; Wednesday, Michigan; Thursday, Indiana, and Friday, Iowa. Saturday is the contest winner's day and the state sending in the most requests wins that day's requests. Michigan has been the most consistent winner.

Old favorites and the semi-classics bring the most requests. New dance numbers, played by the orchestras, are rarely asked for. Salvo attributes this to the fact that they do not adapt themselves to organ presentation. Approximately fifteen numbers are played on each program. These are chosen from the requests with regard to building a balanced program.

DR. LLOYD ARNOLD TALKS SATURDAY ON HEALTH HOUR

The story of a diagnostic laboratory, its purpose and work, will be described by Dr. Lloyd Arnold in his talk on W-G-N at 11:50 Saturday. Dr. Arnold is bacteriologist in charge of the Chicago Diagnostic and Research laboratories. He is also professor of bacteriology and preventive medicine at the University of Illinois. Other future speakers on W-G-N health periods are Dr. Louis Z. Fishman of the University of Illinois medical school, who will talk Wednesday on "Common Cold Sinus Infection"; Dr. Julius B. Novak, clinician, "Factors in the Control of Tuberculosis," on June 22; and Dr. Joseph Welfeld, dermatologist, "Tuberculosis of the Skin," on June 29.

CLASSICANA TO BE FEATURE OF RALPH GINSBURG

"Classicana," an overture comprising Director Ralph Ginsburg's individual arrangement of six of the most popular classic songs, is to be the feature offering by the Palmer House ensemble in its broadcast over W-G-N at 1:40 p. m. today. Edward Vito, harpist of the ensemble, has selected as his solo for the W-G-N program his own paraphrase on "Auf Wiedersehen, My Dear."

"Golden Shores" to Tell Story of Dune Country

"Golden Shores," a program telling the story of Lake Michigan's southern shores, will be told on W-G-N this morning at 11:45 by Quin Ryan, with the assistance of Lawrence Salerno, baritone, and Leonard Salvo, organist. Mr. Salerno has chosen as descriptive numbers to fit the program, "Moonlight for Two," "Let's Drift Away to Dreamer's Bay," and "The Sun's in My Heart." Mr. Salvo's organ selection is "Wedding of the Birds."

Lawrence Salerno Sings Italian Ballads Today

Lovers of the Italian songs of Lawrence Salerno will hear their favorite sing two of his most charming ballads at 2 o'clock today in a program with Allan Grant, pianist. Mr. Salerno will sing "Piccolo Amore," or "Little Love," and "La Spagnola." Mr. Grant will play his own arrangements of tunes from "The Vagabond King," with Mr. Salerno singing "The Song of the Vagabonds."

W-G-N READY TO PRESENT STORY OF CONVENTIONS

Ryan, Henning, Bennett to Broadcast.

All arrangements are completed for W-G-N's independent broadcast of the national Republican and Democratic conventions at the Chicago Stadium. Microphones are installed, the special broadcast booths built and everything in readiness for the opening session.

The Republican convention will open at about 9:30 a. m. Tuesday morning. The Democratic convention at the Stadium is to open on June 28.

Following the policy adopted in 1928 when the conventions at Houston, Tex., and Kansas City, Mo., were given to W-G-N listeners independently of the chain broadcasts, W-G-N again will present its own announcers and the political writers and experts from the staff of THE TRIBUNE. This is the series of national convention broadcasts for THE TRIBUNE station.

Special Booths Constructed.

In presenting the broadcast of the conventions independently, W-G-N is reflecting the world-wide news gathering activities of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. W-G-N has long held to the policy of making independent broadcasts of each important event, some of them being exclusive broadcasts of the Indianapolis automobile races, the Kentucky Derbies, the Scopes evolution trial in Dayton, Tenn., and the great theatrical spectacle, "The Miracle."

Special broadcast booths have been arranged at the Stadium for the conventions here. The main W-G-N booth has been built in the mezzanine of the Stadium back of the speakers' stand. Here the announcers and engineers will gather each day the conventions are in session and the speeches of the leaders of the convention will be picked up direct from the stand.

The second booth has been built under the speakers' stand and in front of the floor on which the delegates to the convention will be seated. This booth will be used for special talks, by political leaders, which are not to be given before the convention.

Heading the W-G-N organization assigned to the conventions is Quin A. Ryan, manager and chief announcer. Quin is a former news reporter and column conductor and one of the veteran announcers of radio. He went into radio work in the days of the crystal sets and he has covered every big news event W-G-N has ever presented.

Henning and Bennett to Speak.

From the special writers who will cover the news of the meetings for THE TRIBUNE, W-G-N has selected the outstanding men and women to assist in its broadcasts. Heading this lineup of writers are Arthur Sears Henning, dean of the newspaper correspondents at Washington, D. C., and James O'Donnell Bennett, a TRIBUNE veteran.

Mr. Henning is well known to W-G-N's audiences. He has broadcast from THE TRIBUNE many times and his political analysis of national conventions always have been accurate in every detail.

Arthur Evans and Parke Brown, who have covered local and state politics for THE TRIBUNE for many years, also will be presented on the broadcasts. Oscar Hewitt, economic expert, and Genevieve Forbes Herrick, also of THE TRIBUNE's Washington staff, will be the other speakers to be presented.

Political Leaders to Talk.

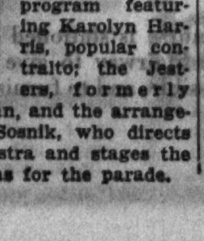
In addition to the special talks and the speeches from the convention floor, men prominent in national and local politics will also be presented on the broadcasts. A glee club and a band, part of the entertainment program at the meetings, also will be broadcast.

The broadcasts of the convention will be presented each day until the conventions are adjourned. At the present time no night sessions of the conventions are contemplated, but should the sessions go into the evening hours the broadcasts from the convention floor will have precedence over the regularly scheduled features of the station.

Grace Moore Will Sing on Circle Hour Today

Grace Moore, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will sing over NBC at 6 p. m. today on the Circle program. Miss Moore has skillfully combined operatic and light opera numbers with several old favorites in arranging an all request program.

PARADE OF MELODIES ADDS WILLIAM MILLER TO PROGRAM TODAY



KAROLYN HARRIS.

WILLIAM MILLER.

The Parade of Melodies inaugurates its summer season over W-G-N and CBS at 8:30 tonight by adding another artist, William Miller, young radio singer, to its cast.

Miller, although making his W-G-N and CBS network debut, is not a newcomer to radio. For a year he was the star soloist on WTAM. The Parade of Melodies continues to present an all-star program featuring Karolyn Harris, popular contralto; the Jesters, formerly with Paul Whiteman, and the arrangements of Harry Sosnik, who directs his 19 piece orchestra and stages the musical productions for the parade.

TENOR

Victor Stonebrook, tenor, who commutes from Hammond, Ind., to sing at 9:30 each Sunday morning on W-G-N. In his program today Mr. Stonebrook will sing "Through the Years," "Where the River Shannon Flows," and "Lilies of Lorraine."

Voice of the Listener

W-G-N—Did you ever hear of a cat that recognizes music? Well, here is one that does.

Her name is Snootie and she joins the family circle in the living room in the evenings to listen to the radio.

She hears compositions of the great masters and the best orchestras in the country, but there is one piece only, a march, that appeals to Snootie. This follows the last program of the evening to which the family listened this past winter, the reading of the news to the radio audience from the pages of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

In the early evening Snootie usually dozes on the lap of some member of the family. It matters not to her if it is the music of Bach, Beethoven or Brahms that is floating from the radio, but at the opening bars of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE march Snootie immediately raises her head, listens intently for an instant, gets down, and in time to the music leads the way in majestic fashion to the kitchen.

You can't fool her, she knows that piece. At first we thought it merely accidental, but it happened practically every evening during the winter so we are convinced it is recognition on Snootie's part.

Some of our friends have witnessed the performance and they agree with us that it is an unusually interesting achievement for a little cat.

CONVENTION TO BE CONSIDERED ON MIDDAY HOUR

"Religion and National Affairs," the general theme of the W-G-N midday services for the coming week centers naturally on the work of the Republican national convention. Representative men, vitally interested in the far reaching effect of political action and public welfare, will be heard during each weekday at noon. Speakers will be: Tomorrow, Dr. Albert Buckner Coe of the First Congregational church of Oak Park; Tuesday, Dr. Louis L. Mann, rabbi of Sinai congregation; Wednesday, Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle of the First Methodist church of Evanston; Thursday, President Robert M. Kelley of Loyola university; Friday, Henry P. Chandler, president of the Union League club. On Saturday the program of spirituals will be presented by the choir of Olivet Baptist church.

IDA ALLEN WILL TELL LIFE STORY OF BOBBY JONES

The life story of Bobby Jones, the only golfer ever to win the four outstanding golf tournaments of the world in one year, will be related by Ida Bailey Allen, nationally prominent home economist, during the broadcast of stories of the living great over W-G-N from 10:15 to 10:30 a. m. An instrumental trio, composed of Ralph Christman, concert pianist; Fred Sittig, cellist of the widely known Sittig Trio, and Harry Waller, violinist of the New York Philharmonic orchestra, will offer appropriate musical selections.

W-G-N SYMPHONY OPENS TWILIGHT SERIES THIS WEEK

A concert of light semi-classical numbers by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Delos Owen, will come to listeners from 5 to 5:45 week day afternoons, beginning tomorrow. In these programs Mr. Owen promises solo numbers by members of the orchestra and arrangements featuring the double pianos.

40 Flying Fingers Will Play 'Manhattan Serenade'

"Manhattan Serenade" will be offered as the novelty feature of the program over W-G-N from 6:45 to 7 today, when it will be played on two pianos by the Forty Flying Fingers, piano quartet. At the same time Ernie Golden and his orchestra will play "Walkin' on Air" and "Castles in the Air" and Rondoliers quartet will sing "Mean Music" and "Bells of St. Mary's."

Blanche Yurka to Play in Bunker Hill Drama

Blanche Yurka, Donald Meek, and John Beal, three of Broadway's favorites, will turn from the legitimate stage to the microphone during the presentation of today's episode of "Roses and Drums," over the Columbia network, from 5:30 to 6 p. m. The three will take colonial rôles in a radio drama of the days of '76, centering around the battle of Bunker hill.

Radio Tax Delinquents.

In the wake of its recent decision ordering eight stations off the air for "wave wobbling," or failure to maintain their assigned wave lengths, the Mexican government has announced that it will shortly revoke the licenses of other stations if they do not pay their federal taxes shortly.

Neighborhood Theaters

A young Jewish surgeon whose talents lead him from the ghetto to Park avenue and back to the ghetto again is the principal character in "Symphony of Six Millions," playing this week at the Stratford theater. Ricardo Cortez plays Fannie Hurst's hero, and Irene Dunne the crippled girl who loves him. Anna Appel, Gregory Ratoff and Lita Chevret contribute typical Hurstian family atmosphere.

Also at the Stratford is "The Trial of Vivienne Ware" which presents Joan Bennett, turned blond again, in another melodramatic rôle. She's on trial for the murder of her fiancé and is defended by a lawyer who had aspired to that honor. Zasu Pitts as a sob sister furnishes a light interlude or two.

Court Scenes at Southtown.

The Southtown theater is offering two pictures with trial scenes this week, but that's their only point of similarity. "The Strange Case of Clara Deane" is about a mother who goes to prison for a crime she did not commit, and for years is separated from her little daughter. Wynne Gibson gives a polished performance as the mother in her youth and after her release from prison. Cora Sue Collins makes an adorable baby daughter, and Frances Dee is the girl grown up.

Walter Huston, usually a pillar of society, turns up on the side of the crooks with a vengeance in "Night Court," also at the Southtown. Phillips Holmes and Anita Page are the young people whom he wrongs by one of his dishonest decisions from the bench. Exciting fare!

John Barrymore in "State's Attorney" is a defender of public enemies who becomes a lawyer for the people with an eye on the governor's chair. Helen Twelvetrees and Jill Esmond are women involved in his career. The picture is running this week at the Capitol theater with "Man Wanted."

In the latter film Kay Francis plays the attractive editress of the "400" magazine, married to a playboy. She hires David Manners as her secretary, and then it all becomes very complicated.

A Charming Newcomer.

If you're in the market for an evening of carefree relaxation don't overlook "The Office Girl" at the Marquette theater Friday and Saturday with "Young America," at the Highway theater Wednesday and Thursday with "Scandal for Sale," and at the Cosmo theater Tuesday and Wednesday with "Misleading Lady." Renate Mueller, a charming newcomer, plays a modern Cinderella who invades Vienna in search of a job, gets it and a whole lot more, too, including a bank director husband.

"So Big" at 2 Theaters.

Edna Ferber's classic, "So Big," is on view at the Cosmo theater Thursday and Friday, at the Highway Friday and Saturday with "Misleading Lady," and today, tomorrow and Tuesday at the Marquette theater, also with "Misleading Lady." Barbara Stanwyck plays the city girl who comes to a rural community to teach and remains to wrest a fortune from the soil for herself and her son. Hardie Albright is the son, and Bette Davis the girl he loves.

Both Sides of Wet Question.

Unless you're one of those rare souls who have no opinion whatsoever on prohibition, you should find "The Wet Parade" of absorbing interest, for it presents both sides of that question. But, prohibition aside, the acting of Dorothy Jordan, Robert Young, Lewis Stone and Neil Hamilton and a fine plot make this outstanding entertainment. The picture is running Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Midwest theater, Tuesday and Wednesday at the West Englewood theater and Wednesday and Thursday at the Highland and Oakland Square theaters.

GRANT TO PLAY ORIGINAL WALTZ AT 1 P. M. TODAY

Allan Grant, pianist, will play his own composition, "Concert Waltz in A Major," on the W-G-N program at 1 o'clock, which features him along with two other artists, Verne Buck, violinist, and Leonard Salvo, organist. Mr. Grant's other piano numbers are "Fantasy on Aloah" and "By the Brook." Mr. Buck has chosen for his selections on this program the "Obertass Mazurka," by Wieniawski; "Just a Song at Twilight," by Malloy, and "Rigaudon and Siciliana," from an arrangement by Kreisler.

"Better Housing" to Be Topic of Lea Taylor

Better housing for working families will be the subject of Miss Lea Taylor's talk at 1:50 Thursday on W-G-N. Miss Taylor, who is resident head of Chicago Commons and president of the National Federation of Settlements, will tell of plans now going forward for the betterment of housing conditions in the crowded areas and plans for emergency homes until business revival.

Singin' Sam to Present Bert Williams Number

Singin' Sam again will hark back to his minstrel days when he offers another Bert Williams number, "Mr Johnson, Good Night" during his program over W-G-N and the Columbia network from 7:15 to 7:30 p. m. Wednesday. Other numbers during this period will include "Gee, But I Hate to Say Good-By," "I Send My Love with These Roses," and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

Minstrel Troupe to Visit Paw Paw, Mich., Saturday

Interlocutor Hank Moeller and his troupe of minstrel boys will present their weekly W-G-N miniature minstrel show for the benefit of the citizens of Paw Paw, Michigan, next Saturday evening. Several new songs will be presented.

Crime Club to Broadcast "The Missing Millions"

"The Missing Millions" is the Edgar Wallace thriller to be offered over W-G-N and the Columbia network in dramatized form during the Crime club broadcasts from 8:30 to 9 p. m., Tuesday and Wednesday.

ELSON TO BRING RUTH AND GEHRIG TO W-G-N MIKE

Another procession of major league baseball players will parade before the W-G-N microphone during the coming week.

Today Bob Elson, the W-G-N sports announcer, will take the microphone on the field at Comiskey Park to introduce Smead (Smack 'Em) Jolley to the listeners. Jolley is making his first appearance in Chicago in a Boston Red Sox uniform, having been traded to the Boston club by the White Sox five weeks ago. Tomorrow Earl Webb, who once wore a Cubs uniform, will talk to W-G-N's audience while on Tuesday, Bob Weiland, also a former Sox player, will speak.

On Wednesday the New York Yankees will open a four game series with the Sox. During the Yanks' stay in Chicago, Manager Joe McCarthy, the former Cubs boss who is now managing the Yanks, the mighty Babe Ruth and his hard hitting mate, Lou Gehrig, and Herb Pennock and Ben Chapman will be brought before the W-G-N mike.

Elson each day describes the home game of the Cubs and Sox and answers the fans' questions on baseball. The baseball broadcasts start at 2:45 p. m.

Offerings of Stage on Eve of Convention

"Counsellor" Moves Back to Selwyn; New Revue Comes to Adelphi.

By Charles Collins.

ing Machine," he expressed a boundless contempt for the average American as represented by his fantastic characterization of Mr. Zero.

Shows Are Scarce.

Except for "Counsellor-at-Law" the current playbills are items of no importance. "Love on Approval," which mushroomed up at the Playhouse recently as an entry for the period of the conventions, is a comedy for naive audiences—an ungraceful oratorical jape at some of the fallacies of the Greenwich Village state of mind. "Do Your Stuff," which is new at the Adelphi, is an all-Negro frolic in the form of a revue. Lew Leslie's revue, "Clowns in Clover," which promises to be an ambitious song and dance show, is now definitely scheduled for a Chicago première on June 26, at either the Grand Opera house or the Apollo.

One does not have to be a doddering veteran to remember when Chicago was famous as a summer show town. But we can no longer point with civic pride to the briskness and refreshing gayety of our June-to-September theatrical amusements. For two or three years our summers have been almost barren of stage diversions. There is no present reason to hope for improvement this year.

New York Statistics.

The statistics of the theatrical year in New York, where the American stage manufactures ninety-five per cent of its history, are now available, thanks to the industry of the New York Times' staff of reviewers. The total number of productions submitted to the first-nighters of that vast metropolis from Aug. 25, 1931, to June 5, 1932, was 197, which surpassed the total figures for the same period in the preceding season by 1. In the matter of new plays [that is to say, with revivals omitted] 1931-1932 showed a marked advance—134, as against 124.

The new musical comedies and operettas totaled 16, as against 17; and the new revues were 7, as against 11. Revivals, including all kinds of shows, numbered 32.

"Counsellor-at-Law" scored the highest number of performances—245 when the score was added; moreover, as remarked above, this play is still in action. Another play by Elmer Rice, "The Left Bank," was a close third with 232 performances. Second place was won by the Theater Guild with "Reunion at Vienna": 235.

Long B'way Runs.

The other long run plays which had over 100 performances were "Cynara," 210; "Springtime for Henry," 199; "The Animal Kingdom," 170; "Mourning Becomes Electra," 167; "A Church Mouse," 164; "The Good Fairy," 154; "Whistling in the Dark," 143; "Blessed Event," 135; "Brief Moment," 129; "There's Always Juliet," 108, and "Hay Fever" [revival], 101.

The musical shows that broke the century mark were "The Cat and the Fiddle," 279 [still running]; "Of Thee I Sing," 188 [still running]; "Everybody's Welcome," 137; "Face the Music," 129, and "Hot Cha," 103 [still running].

In the middle flight of plays, which had between 100 and 50 performances, were "Riddle Me This," 100; "The Social Register," 97; "The Devil Passes," 97; "Child of Manhattan," 87; "The Warrior's Husband," 83; "After Tomorrow," 77; "The House of Connelly," 72; "Black Tower," 72; "Ladies of Creation," 72; "Cloudy with Showers," 71; "Payment Deferred," 70; "Trick for Trick," 69; "Louder, Please," 68; "The Good Companions," 68; "The Guest Room," 67; "The Constant Sinner," 64; "Too True to Be Good," 57; "The Bride the Sun Shines On," 55; "The Jewel Robbery," 54, and "The Breadwinner," 53.

Eight plays had between 40 and 30 performances; five, between 40 and 30; seven, between 30 and 20; twenty-three, between 20 and 10, and thirty-six, between 10 and 1. Ranking every play that did not run at least 50 performances as a disastrous failure, these figures place 79 titles in the total loss division. Eleven musical shows and three revivals must be added to the list of casualties.

The wrack-and-ruin department may arouse some morbid curiosity. Eleven productions had less than five performances, as follows: "Blue Monday," 4; "A Few Wild Oats," 4; "Housewarming," 4; "Yeah-Man," 4; "What's It to You," 4; "Hired Husband," 3; "New York to Cherbourg," 3; "Bulls, Bears, and Asses," 2; "Papavert," 2, and "The Pillars of Society," 2.

Third Edition of 'Americana'; Theater Gossip

Wm. Harris to Stage Mr. Wallace's Last Play; 'Anatomist' Abandoned

VINCENT YOUMANS will provide the music and lyrics for the third edition of "Americana," an intimate revue by J. P. McEvoy, which Lee Shubert will present on Broadway late in August. Rehearsals will begin next month and an engagement is scheduled for Atlantic City prior to the New York première. Thus far the cast includes Albert Carroll and the Humphrey-Weideman dancing troupe, which last appeared in "Lysistrata." The first edition of "Americana," which opened in New York on July 26, 1926, achieved a run of 224 performances. The second edition, presented two years later, was unsuccessful.

William Harris Jr. has abandoned his proposed production of James H. Bridie's "The Anatomist" because of the questionable status of its American copyright. In an effort to solve the complications surrounding the copyright of this Scotch play, Mr. Harris' attorney recently went to Washington and the decision to cancel the offering was made upon his return.

"The Anatomist" opened in London on Oct. 7, 1931, and immediately attracted wide attention. The play is based on the career of the notorious Dr. Knox of Edinburgh, who inspired a series of murders to obtain corpses for medical research.

Mr. Harris is now abroad and is expected to return in about three weeks. One of the objects of his trip was to see the widow of Edgar Wallace and arrange for the Broadway presentation of Wallace's last play, "The Green Pack," the title of which will be changed to "The Ace of Spades."

"Dread," a play by Frederick Herendeen, is expected to open on Broadway on June 21. In the cast will be Sterling Oliver, Harold De Becker, William Ingersoll, Frank Shannon, John Bohn, Edmund Macdonald, Curtis Karpe, Melville Anderson, Elizabeth Day, and Ernest Herbert.

Joe Cook will make his first London appearance in a revue when "Fanfare" is presented at the Prince Edward theater June 22. The show is the work of Dion Titheradge, with music and lyrics by Desmond Carter and Henry Sullivan. Joyce Barbour and Violet Loraine will support Mr. Cook, who will have the rôle of a magazine editor.

"Fanfare" is being staged by John Murray Anderson, assisted by Morris Green, who has been associated with Mr. Cook in several musical shows.

Lew Brown and Ray Henderson, one of the most active of the musical comedy writing teams, will stage their own shows hereafter. The collaborators have organized a company and will offer a new revue next fall. Rehearsals will begin in August under the direction of Seymour Felix and the score, songs, writing, and casting will be done by the new producers.

Brown and Henderson have written many successes, among them "Follow Thru," many of the "Scandals," "Manhattan Mary," "Hold Everything," and "Flying High."

Bertha Belmore has succeeded Edna May Oliver in the cast of "Show Boat," now in revival at the Casino theater, New York.

E. E. Clive, the Boston actor-manager who specializes in shriek-and-shudder melodramas, is outlining an extensive season in New York, beginning next fall. He believes that many "mystery" plays that have failed on Broadway during the last few years stand a good chance in revival under his competent management.

Theater Guild's New Plays for Coming Season

THE Theater Guild will open its fifteenth season on Oct. 3 in its New York playhouse with "The Good Earth," a dramatization by Owen and Donald Davis of Pearl S. Buck's novel of that name. "The Pure in Heart," by John Howard Lawson, will be the second production, and in all probability "Versailles," by Emil Ludwig the biographer, the third.

OWEN DAVIS.

The book from which "The Good Earth" has been taken was first published on March 2, 1931, and was received with immediate acclaim. Since then it has consistently held its place on best-seller lists and is now in its twenty-second printing.

Owen Davis, of course, is widely known as a playwright. He has written three hundred and eighteen plays, by his own admission. His son, Donald, who has collaborated with him in dramatizing "The Good Earth," has already shown promise in several manuscripts.

In their manuscript the collaborators are said to have captured effectively the Chinese feeling for the soil which is the essence of Mrs. Buck's novel. The production will be directed by Philip Moeller, and Lee Simonson will design the settings. Mr. Simonson and Lawrence Langner form the Guild's production committee for the play.

Mrs. Buck herself may attend the première. She has spent all her life in China except for a few years in which she completed her education at Randolph-Macon college and Cornell university. Her father and mother were missionaries.

Her husband, who is professor of rural economics and sociology in the University of Nanking, has decided to take a postgraduate course at Cornell and Mrs. Buck will arrive with him in July. She will remain in this country to attend the première and will give whatever aid is necessary in the production of the play.

The Guild plans to send three plays on tour early in the season. "Mourning Becomes Electra" will open in Newark. N. J., Oct. 17, playing its way through the east and into the south and then to the Pacific coast and back. "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, will open in Boston Sept. 19 for a tour of the larger subscription cities. "Too True to Be Good," George Bernard Shaw's latest contribution to the theater, will begin its midwest travels in Cleveland Oct. 31.

'Do Your Stuff,' New Musical, Opens Tonight

'Clowns in Clover' for Grand Opera House or Apollo June 26.

THE Adelphi theater will reopen tonight with a new all-Negro musical revue called "Do Your Stuff!" It is described as a "jazzed up" fantasy of Negro life, beginning in the jungles of Africa and continuing down the ages to New York's Harlem district. The skits are by Sammy Dyer and Ralph T. Kettering. The music was composed by "Tiny" Parham, who will also direct his own orchestra, known as the Granada Night Club orchestra to radio fans.

Blanche Walton's choir of forty voices will be a feature.

The cast includes Eva Waters, Rookie Davis, Pearl Edwards, Eddie Collins, the Three Brown Brothers, Winona Short, the Four Cotton Pickers, the Rhythm Ramblers, and other colored entertainers. The program contains sixteen musical numbers.

Eddie Collins was leading comedian for Josephine Baker in her revue at the Moulin Rouge, Paris.

Lew Leslie will stage his new revue, "Clowns in Clover," at either the Grand Opera house or the Apollo theater, beginning Sunday, June 26, with Walter Woolf as the featured player. Mr. Leslie, who is best known as an impresario of Negro revenues through "Rhopsody in Black" and "Blackbirds," is also adept at producing white musicals, as was evidenced by "The International Revue," which played on Broadway two seasons ago.

In preparing "Clowns in Clover," which is the forerunner of a series of revues to bear that title, Mr. Leslie engaged Dorothy Fields, daughter of Lew Fields, and Jimmy McHugh as composers. This pair of collaborators developed the tunes of "Blackbirds" and "Rhapsody in Black." The sketches in "Clowns in Clover" were written by Nat N. Dorfmán, a contributor to "The International Revue" and several editions of the Scandals.

Walter Woolf will be supported by Kay Strozzi, Janet Loft, Lew Hearn, Eddie Lambert, Dorothy Dare, Vercelle Sisters, Ina Ray, Hal Ford, Robert Hobbs, Victor Griffin, Larry Adler, James Karney, the Merriell Abbott dancing girls, and a chorus.

Summer Parks

RIVERVIEW PARK is now in full operation for the summer. Its 142 acres contain almost everything in the way of open air and "concession" entertainment. It offers a musical show as a free amusement every night. Among its new attractions are "Aladdin's Castle," and "Hell 'n' Back." The latest fashion in "rides" at Riverview is the "Whoopette."

White City announces a new "thriller" in the form of an act by the Fearless Greggs, who twice a day perform a somersault in a gap jumping automobile while another car passes beneath them. "Water Scooters" are a featured "ride." Other attractions bear the titles of Prehysteria, the Swiss Village, Mouse City and Hall's Mechanical Circus. There is dancing every night except Mondays and Tuesdays, and roller skating every night except Mondays.

Dramatization.

A novel by Viña Delmar, entitled "A Chance at Heaven," will be dramatized for production on Broadway next autumn, according to Robert V. Newman, who in October, 1930, presented "Bad Girl," adapted from Miss Delmar's book of that title.

call it, and its chief excuse for being is a small boy played by Jackie Kelk. I have never heard of Jackie before, but he is a talented youngster, poised and sure, but a little devil in this piece—such a child, the authors admit, as only a parent could love or live with.

Jackie is the offspring of Alan and Joyce Burroughs. Alan is a rich young husband who goes in for the horsy set in Maryland and neglects Joyce. She divorces him and marries her attorney. Alan takes on a wild young blond.

Jackie, expelled from school, is sent home about the time the new honeymoons are to start. What can they do with him? Nothing. Because he is also running a fever from overeating.

The Burroughs are forced to stay home with their son, and this leads to a reconciliation. Rather a silly comedy, written by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, who also did "Up Pops the Devil." Madge Kennedy does what she can for the piece and is helped by James Rennie.

Pictures Worth Seeing.

If you keep a date book in which you jot down the titles of pictures you want to see, I can give you a couple that should be included for future reference.

One is an animal picture, Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," which is to be released later this summer, and the other is one of those Rene Clair French pictures, "A Nous la Liberte," or "Liberty for Us," or, perhaps, "Give Us Liberty," done by the same director whose "Sous Les Toits de Paris" and "Le Million" amused a multitude.

The Frank Buck picture is one to get which Mr. Buck piloted an RKO outfit into the jungle back of Singapore, and staged a few of the most thrilling encounters between the man-eating beasts that have yet been captured by the camera.

Since it has been brought home and mounted for production, sound strips have been added to the picture, so you have the moving experience of hunting black panthers with a brass band, and watching a python curl itself around a tiger in a duel to the death while an excited orchestra agitates the atmosphere.

It took the camera men something over a month to get the picture of the python-tiger fight, and I guarantee it will keep any audience on earth a-tremble at the edge of its seats.

The producer, as I understand it, was to select an open space where there would be light enough to take the picture. This was near a water hole and was properly baited. Cameras were placed in several surrounding trees, and these were manned during all the daylight hours.

Day followed day and nothing happened. Then came the great thrill. The two jungle enemies got into a traffic jam. The tiger snapped and clawed. The snake struck and coiled itself about the tiger's body.

You see the tiger in distress a couple of times and breathing hard. Then you see him as he gathers all his strength, shakes himself loose, and goes back to the attack. I suspect the fight was a draw. The last I saw of the snake he was still wriggling and old Mr. Tiger was at the water hole cooling his dripping jaws. Or it may have meant death for both.

There are two or three other fight pictures, and a variety of shots showing how Mr. Buck, an old Chicago boy, leads the panthers into his traps and then packs them off to his compound. For twenty years he has been doing this sort of thing and has furnished material for two books, "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Wild Cargo."

Adventures of Jailbirds.

The Rene Clair picture, "A Nous la Liberte," is of a piece with his former comedies, but even more beautifully and originally pictured. M. Clair has the daring to shoot above the 14 year old mental average, which is the accepted American standard, and yet is not above including a sequence or two devoted to the familiar comedy chase and the tossing about of mushy foodstuffs.

The plot reveals the adventures of such a jolly pair of jailbirds as were the pals of "Erminie." Emile and Louis try a jailbreak. Louis gets away. Emile is captured and held. Louis, under an assumed name, becomes a man of affairs, organizes and builds up a gigantic phonograph business by applying the machine age discipline of a prison in its conduct.

Emile, out of jail, follows a smiling girl employé into the factory, is mistaken for an applicant for work, and given a job. He is a blundering fellow of the Chaplin-Langdon type, and though his job is the simple one of attaching a single screw to a phonograph as it passes him on an endless belt, he becomes dumbly absorbed in other things and lets one machine pass him. Then runs to catch up with it and piles up men and machines before the belt can be stopped.

Emile's further misadventures lead finally to his meeting with Louis the grand; the discovery of his own and Louis' identity, both by the police and the directorate of the phonograph company, and Louis' attempt to flee the place with a suitcase stuffed with francs.

The suitcase, hidden on a roof, is opened in a windstorm, the francs are blown into the street, and a panic is caused when every conceivable type of citizen rushes madly about trying to grab his share.

Of such simple stuff are the sequences builded, and yet with such skill, such admirable touches of satire and understanding of human weaknesses, and such solid yet fantastic backgrounds, that the ninety minutes of its showing are not too much.

Star at the Palace

QUEENIE SMITH

THIS popular star of the musical comedy stage, who hasn't visited Chicago for two years, appears on the current vaudeville program at the Palace theater. Queenie, quaint comedienne and brilliant dancer, will be assisted by Harry Puck, another well-known entertainer in musical comedies and operettas. Among the hits in which Miss Smith has appeared were "Be Yourself," "Hit the Deck," and "The Street Singer."

Wilder Adapts French Drama for K. Cornell

THORNTON WILDER, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," is translating André Obey's "The Rape of Lucrèce" from the French for Katharine Cornell, who will stage this drama in the Belasco theater, New York City, next season following her production of Sidney Howard's "Alien Corn." The plays will not be given in repertory. Both will be presented as long as there is public demand for them.

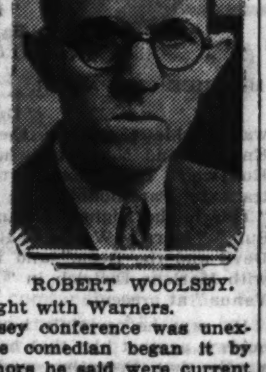
Wilder is better known for his novels than his dramas, though he has written four one act plays. In addition to "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," his most famous work, he is the author of "Cabala" and "The Woman of Andros." He now is finishing an adaptation of the Hungarian comedy, "The Bride of Torozko," by Otto Indig, which Gilbert Miller has announced for next fall.

"The Rape of Lucrèce," which was successfully played in Paris and in London a season ago by Jacques Copeau's company, will give Miss Cornell a rôle which is a distinct departure for her. The story more or less follows that of Shakespeare's poem. The treatment is modern in feeling.

Five out of the sixty plays in which Miss Cornell has appeared cast her as a lady of sins, a small percentage. So it is not to be wondered that the actress sometimes grows weary of being accused of having had a too exotic stage past. Her present rôle, Elizabeth Barrett in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," is beyond reproach in the matter of morals. Her next part in "Alien Corn" presents her as a girl who looks on life and love and remains steadfast to her aspirations, while "The Rape of Lucrèce" will show her as chaste as the dawn in temperament.

Woolsey Explains Break Between Him and Bert Wheeler

HOLLYWOOD.—Perhaps to stave off the rumors, Robert Woolsey called the press together to tell about the splitup of the team of Wheeler and Woolsey. It's becoming the custom to "tell all" in Hollywood. Ann Harding and her husband did it, and apparently the details of the Dietrich - Von Sternberg-Paramount story disagreement were not kept secret. James Cagney also did the unusual by telling all about his salary fight with Warners.



ROBERT WOOLSEY.

The Woolsey conference was unexpected. The comedian began it by denying rumors he said were current that he and his associate for five years had parted after exchanging a few blows.

And Woolsey intimated that no one was more surprised than he when Bert Wheeler said simply: "I'm going to New York—for good."

He said the trouble started originally when Wheeler objected to the terms of a contract, one under which they were to work without salary and collect a percentage of the profits.

Woolsey also admitted that Wheeler believes he can make more money playing a lone hand, and that he further felt he was losing his identity working in tandem.

Woolsey recalled—doubtless to show what he thinks of his ex-partner's idea—their separate starring pictures made a year ago at Wheeler's suggestion. They were box office disappointments.

The last contract they had, for four pictures a year, paid them each $195,000. They were teamed in 12 features since they first worked together five years ago on the stage in "Rio Rita."

Wicked French Often Exhibit Puritanical Air

Bishop of Quimper Alive to Evil of Modern Dance and Bus Rides.

By Alex Small.

PARIS.—[Special.]—No one who has been in France more than a few days and has had his eyes open should have any illusions about the French being a people of incorrigible sybarites, entirely given to the works of the devil. The reservation "should" is necessary, for I have met plenty of people, mostly Britishers, who had spent good stretches of time in this country, and who still retained uncontaminated the notions they had acquired in Birmingham or Stockholm.

As for those who have never been here—and curious as it may seem, that is a respectable number of millions—their minds have been made up. They know, as the Kansas farmer puts it, that "them French are loose's ashes."

The story got abroad some centuries ago that this amiable people is given to no other activities but the pride of the eye and the lust of the flesh. The legend is too well rooted now to be extirpated. No one wants to do the job, anyway, except a few misguided souls like M. Clément Vautel, who think it terrible the French should have a reputation they do not deserve.

From Brittany Battlefront.

It is, then, no crusading zeal for the propagation of truth which makes me wish that the widest publicity possible could be given to the news from the battlefront in Brittany. It might give a shock to the fixed belief that never, never, by any chance, does any one in France deviate into something resembling puritanism. Perhaps my motive for desiring this publicity is simply a mean private pleasure in spreading disillusion, but no matter.

It was a recent Sunday that the bishop of Quimper and of Léon, whose diocese corresponds to a good half of Brittany, launched his thunder against the wickedness of modern dances. There, to begin with, is a refutation of the charge that the clergy is not alert and up with the times.

Something resembling the so-called modern dances, it is safe to say, got out to Brittany about 1922. This is 1932, unless the calendar in the Café des Sports is all wrong. The good bishop has taken just ten years then to become aware of the grave danger to morality involved in the onestep and the foxtrot.

Branded as Public Sinners.

The circular, which has been, or is to be, read in all the parishes of the diocese, is inclusive enough. It starts with the owners of halls wherein are held dances other than those connected with marriages. These owners "are to be considered public sinners, and treated as such, from the point of view of the sacraments." They must repent with fitting contrition if they wish to receive final absolution and Christian burial. Their children, if they live at home, will have no right to religious ceremonies at baptisms, marriages, or funerals.

The dancers, male and female, not only "expose themselves to grave sin," but by their example they lead other souls "to a sure and lamentable downfall." They are to be given two or three warnings, and, if that has not made them enter the path of righteousness, they are to be refused absolution.

The interdiction is extended to "the players of accordions and of other instruments." Nor can any one avoid sin by keeping to private dances, which, it might be supposed, are properly chaperoned, for there "are executed the same immodest steps as in public dance halls."

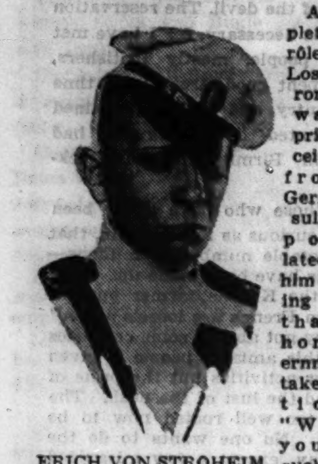
Berlin Keeps Wary Eye on Von Stroheim

Innocent Scenes Viewed as Intentional Anti-German Propaganda.

By Rosalind Shaffer.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—What international complications can follow when movies are misunderstood was graphically told by Erich von Stroheim in recent interview.



ERICH VON STROHEIM.

After completing his rôle in "The Lost Squadron" Von was surprised to receive a call from the German consul, who expostulated with him for playing a rôle that the home government had taken exception to. "Why did you accept such a part," asked the consul, "when you know that Germany is trying to rehabilitate herself in the opinion of the world?"

The part referred to was that of a German director, and the objectionable part to the German officials was a scene where Von Stroheim, as the director of the story, expostulates with the casting department of the American studio for sending him a crowd of bums and souses to play German soldiers. The officials claimed that thus Von Stroheim had lent himself to the giving of a false impression, that German soldiers were drunkards and ne'er-do-wells.

"The picture," says Von, who was once an Austrian officer, "did not represent such to be the case. The rub of the story was simply objecting to the degraded type of extras that I was being asked to use, yet German officials took offense.

"I am not under salary to the German government, and I am simply working for my living. Yet I must never play a German, which is the only thing I can possibly play in a picture. True, I was a Viennese, an officer in Franz Josef's army, but I came to America before the war and am now an American citizen. I am proud of my officership in Austria and I am proud of being an American citizen.

Unfortunate Experience.

"My experience in this matter was most unfortunate. A year ago I returned to Vienna to be with my aged mother when she underwent a serious operation. To amuse her, I bought a radio. Following 'The Lost Squadron,' she was listening to a broadcast from a news bureau given by a man who was formerly a German consul in Japan, and who broadcasts news from Hollywood to Germany and Austria. He said: 'There are two things America speaks about: One, the Lindbergh baby and the other, the terrific anti-German propaganda being launched by Erich von Stroheim in his new film.'

"Imagine the distress that brought to my mother. They spoke of me as if I were a producer hounding Germany, not as an actor playing an entirely inoffensive rôle.

"The Teuton mind is peculiar in its organization in that it has always used art and literature for propaganda. Germans cannot understand that it can be otherwise with other peoples. The picture 'Flight' showed the flight of squardons of planes to Nicaragua. It was designed by the picture industry solely as entertainment.

"'Aha,' said the Germans, 'this is America's threat. She is shaking the mailed fist, she is showing how well she is prepared for war in the air.' With this attitude it is not to be wondered at that Germany does not always understand and sympathize with American film portrayals and that 'All Quiet' was mobbed and theaters closed.

"They take themselves so seriously that they even objected officially to my hollering for help in one scene, saying, 'A German officer is not yellow: he would die before calling for help.'"

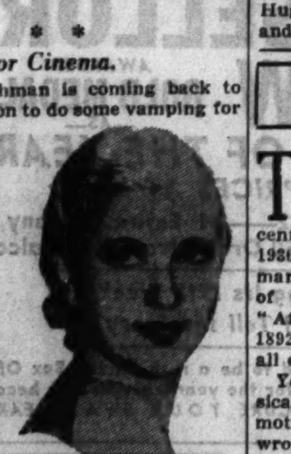
To Vamp for Cinema.

Lilyan Tashman is coming back to Hollywood soon to do some vamping for the cinema.



LILYAN TASHMAN.

Eddie Lowe, her husband, is breaking away from his personal appearances with Victor McLaglen and Fifi D'Orsay to come back and play the title rôle of Chandu, the magician.

The Brown Derby is now serving pot likker and corn pone, the famous Huey Long dish, and Hollywood seems to like it.

George M. Cohan has arrived in Hollywood, and his pink cheeked health and slender form are a revelation to movie folk. Cohan nearly stupefied Hollywood by walking four miles from the Paramount studio to the Ambassador hotel just for the exercise.

Age has no dignity in films. The older the player, the more strenuous stuff seems to be required. Alison Skipworth had to spend one morning recently going through a rough and tumble fight with Richard Bennett, and any one who had ever listened to a Bennett curtain speech flaying critics and audiences cringed in sympathy for poor Miss Skipworth. Then, the next day she had to climb out of a small bathroom window, run down a swaying fire escape, and hop into a moving taxi. A full day was spent sitting in a mud puddle. "Madame Racketeer" is the opus.

French Adventure in Wool.

Maurice Chevalier has a new sartorial wrinkle all his own. He is wearing a French blue wool shirt made of knit fabric, and with it he wears an eiderdown wool necktie, the soft downy kind they use in making baby bonnets.

MAURICE CHEVALIER.

Gary Grant will be used by Paramount in the revival of "Blood and Sand," in the rôle that Valentino played. Grant, who was Archie Leach on the stage in England and New York, has been in Hollywood four months under contract to Paramount. He played in "This Is the Night," "Sinners in the Sun," "Merrily We Go to Hell," "The Devil and the Deep," and is working with Marlene Dietrich in "The Blond Venus" at present.

He says he certainly hopes no one holds it against him that he is to play a rôle that Valentino made famous. "I hope people won't compare me with him: it would be too unfair. I believe people would resent any one trying to follow Valentino's footsteps."

Historiette

CONSTANCE BENNETT was a bald headed baby, which must be good for the hair, judging from her present sleek mop. So slow were her tresses growing that after the first six months, her parents, Richard Bennett and Adrienne Morrison Bennett, wondered if she ever would have any.

CONSTANCE BENNETT.

Miss Bennett was born in New York Oct. 22, 1905, at 123 West 124th street. She attended Fine Arts academy in New York and a finishing school at Versailles. An early marriage to one Chester Moorhead was annulled. She married and divorced a wealthy play boy, Phil Plant, and is now the wife of Henri de la Falaise, Gloria's Swanson's "ex." She has an adopted son, about 3 years old, named Peter.

This popular player's first movie contract was with Samuel Goldwyn. Her first movie lead was in "Code of the West" with Owen Moore. Then she was in "Sally, Irene, and Mary." Upon her marriage to Mr. Plant she left the movies, but later joined the Pathé organization. Her most notable pictures have been "Rich People," "Three Faces East," "Common Clay," "Bought," "Born to Love," and "The Common Law." She has blue eyes and blond hair, and her weight ranges between 100 and 105 pounds. The lady would like to be fatter. Miss Bennett writes poetry, some of which is said to have been published anonymously.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, June 11.—[Special.]—There will be only two premières along Broadway next week. One of them represents a revival. Here are the playbills:

"Back Fire" — Opens tomorrow night at the Vanderbilt. With this new play, by G. Jerrold Roberts, the group newly organized under the name of the Broome Stagers makes its Broadway bow. In the cast are Mabel Taliaferro, Alice May Tuck, Robert Ober, Donald Gallagher, Maurice McRae, Alf Helton, and Alice Campbell.

"That's Gratitude"—Opens Thursday night at the Waldorf. O. E. Wee, whose career has been to take Broadway plays on tour, now stays at home to revive Frank Craven's successful comedy of the 1930-'31 season. Taylor Holmes and J. C. Nugent will be featured in the cast, which will also include Maide Reade, Gerald Kent, and Helen Mehrmann, of the original company, and Warren Ashe, Frances McHugh, Howard Hall, Amy Atkinson, and Arthur Mack.

Popular Songs

THE ephemeral character of popular songs is shown in the transfer tax appraisal of the estate of Charles K. Harris, filed recently. Mr. Harris, who died Dec. 22, 1930, was the author of 154 songs, many of which reached a high degree of popularity, particularly his song "After the Ball," which he wrote in 1892 and which was sung and played all over the world.

Yet, notwithstanding the 154 musical compositions and the thirty-three motion picture scenarios Mr. Harris wrote, the latter in collaboration with others, his estate was valued at only $30,133 gross and $25,945 net. Another song by Mr. Harris that had great vogue was "Just Break the News to Mother," which was a favorite during the Spanish-American war.

In Vaudeville

THE program of vaudeville acts at the Palace theater this week includes:

Irene Bordoni — the Franco-American comedienne, in a program of characteristic songs.

Queenie Smith and Harry Puck—Each well known in musical comedy. They combine their talents to offer highlights from some of their successes.

Russian Revels — An elaborately staged and costumed entertainment with a dozen Russians offering samples of their native songs and dances.

King Brothers and Cully — They knock each other about to make folks laugh.

Hobart Bosworth—The dean of character actors from the films in a skit showing the evolution of the movies.

As a Film 'Man About Town' Is Easy to Take

Interiors Are Charming, Acting by Principals Is Hailed as Excellent.

By Mae Tinee.

Other rôles are played in routine fashion.

Sound and photography are commendable. Dialogue's poor. Direction is superior to the scenario.

While you may not enthuse over "Man About Town," you won't find it so hard to take.

JAMES CAGNEY, despite his recent salary disagreement with Warner Brothers, is scheduled to make four pictures for that organization during the season of 1932-'33. "Winner Take All" is ready for release. . . . SIGNS POINT to the doing away of double features and the reversion to single feature policy. . . . NANCY CARROLL has been borrowed from Paramount by First National to co-star with DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR. in "Revolt." She replaces ANN DVORAK. . . . Variety, re: The abolishment of the CHICAGO CENSOR BOARD says: "New censorship method has not yet been determined, though several notions are being considered. One plan is for the assumption of the censor job by the assistant corporation counsel staff; another would call for reviewing by members of the police force who are out on sick leave. Final plan is for another appointed board of well known local men who would work without pay."

Wouldn't you say that one up-to-date, broadminded, intelligent woman—with a sense of humor—who has reared children of her own, could just about hold down the chair to the satisfaction of everybody save the deliberately salacious producer? . . . BEBE DANIELS and her husband, BEN LYON, have been offered $4,500 to play "Always Juliet" on the coast in "legit." Those married lovers, EDNA BEST and HERBERT MARSHALL, did the piece on Broadway. . . . CONTRACTS being made now by Universal with players allow the latter a stipulated salary when they work and a smaller one during idle intervals. . . .

See you tomorrow!

The Voice of the Movie Fan

"Adults Only" Superfluous.

Dear Miss Tinee: "For Adults Only"—well, I've yet to see one of those moving pictures that contain anything that I would not want my son to see. On the other hand, there are gangster pictures galore that children may see and hear.

There are thousands of young couples like ourselves, whose only means of amusement is the neighborhood show. Of course, we want to take our child! What else can we do? We're all alone. There's no one to take care of him while we go to the movies. For years we've taken our son, but just recently have been refused admittance at "Adults Only" pictures.

Certainly it's up to the parents whether their children shall be admitted or not! Children accompanied by their parents should be admitted. No parents on earth want their child reared to good clean manhood more than we do!

Look over the list of "Adults Only" pictures for the last couple of years. Every one is perfectly fit for any child to see, regardless of age. If you think I'm wrong ask thousands of other American couples with children.

We've seen movies on the average of two or three times a week for the last seven years. We should know what we're talking about. Give us your opinion.

MR. AND MRS. STEED,
3430 Lincoln-av., Chicago.

Editor's note: There's a lot in what you say.

Political News Reel Taboo.

Dear Mae Tinee: I have just returned from a nearby theater and I am thoroughly disgusted and feel that I'd like to tell some one about it.

First of all, when I go to the movies I go with the sole purpose of having an enjoyable evening. Nothing annoys me more than to sit through the news reel seeing and hearing politicians speak. Haven't we had enough political talks over the radio? Things of interest such as army maneuvers, scenes of foreign countries, new machinery, etc., are always welcomed, but these dull, dreary subjects are taboo as far as I am concerned. I have also noticed that when these news reels are shown every one starts talking and little interest is shown. This, I believe, is a clear indication that more interesting subjects are needed.

Speaking of stars, how can any one compare Greta Garbo to Joan Crawford? As far as acting is concerned, an actress is considered great when he or she can make you laugh or bring tears to your eyes. Can Joan Crawford do this? Of course, she can. But when a star makes you feel fatigued and sleepy after seeing a movie, as Greta Garbo does, you no longer have the desire to attend a movie for relaxation.

As for James Cagney, Spencer Tracy, and Robert Montgomery—I certainly wish some one would put them wise to the fact that every one doesn't like the "smart aleck" type bubbling over with wise cracks. Give us the "he-men" like George O'Brien, Victor McLaglen, and Chester Morris. We're tired of seeing these puny, weak chested humans who call themselves men! Please don't think that I am a crab. I am an admirer of a great many movie stars. I think Wallace Beery's work in "Hell Divers" was perfect, not to mention Ronald Colman in "Arrowsmith" and Fredric March in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

I feel much better after this outburst.

Best wishes,
GLADYS SCHILLEN.

Editor's note: Outbursts do have a way of clearing the air.

Trail to Another "Tarzan."

My dear Miss Tinée: Ever since I was "knee high to a grasshopper" I have followed your columns and have found it all to my advantage. My ire has risen more than once at those who consider it a human possibility for you to do that absurd impossibility of pleasing every one all the time. They give you unwittingly a most pretty compliment. However, this is the first attempt at writing to you. I'll probably get cold feet and not mail this, but I do want to know something most desperately.

Taking your advise as usual, I "hot foots" it out to see "Tarzan." Now, I want to know what trail Jane followed into those jungles. No, it is not for dead elephant ivory, gold, or diamonds. What she found in the jungles that has me all het up is a man that was absolutely clean shaven, when even the men in her party, who must have had facilities for its removal, had a "young" beard.

I'm off for the jungles for a real man that is always ready for dress suits and evenings out with no grumbles about shaving. What if he is part ape, swings through trees, and cannot talk. So much the better. No taxi bills and he will not be able to talk back. Won't you be kind hearted and let me in on this secret world?

Admiringly yours,
VIRGINIA LEWIS.

P. S.—Why can't directors make films that are consistent?

Editor's note: You mustn't take pictures like "Tarzan" too seriously. They're supposed to be more or less fairy tales, you know.

Colleen's Husband O.K.'s Her Desire to Return to Films

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP)—Colleen Moore is back to seek in the films that something that a two year vacation from them failed to bring.

COLLEEN MOORE.

Nor is it the need of money that returns to motion pictures a star who, when she left them two years ago, had been drawing $12,500 weekly.

From the films Colleen got not only the million dollars she is said to have tucked away in securities, but also a satisfaction that two years' vacation failed to bring.

The result was that all of a sudden the "glorious time" she had been having made a bore of her vacation—a vacation which interrupted a career that began when she was 15.

Since she left the films she and her former husband and manager, John McCormick, have been divorced, and her new husband, Al P. Scott of New York, is willing for her to try one more picture, hopeful that it will "get it out of her system."

And Colleen, now 32, wants to make the test. That accounts for the stage play in which she appeared in order to show managers her ability—and for the M. G. M. contract that followed the demonstration.

"Stardom may be a hard master," says Colleen, "but I love it."

Music in Colleges.

Among other projected musical activities is one which may have the effect of clarifying information with a few sets of statistics. Acting on the expressed feeling of the National Federation of Music clubs, the Carnegie corporation has appropriated $25,000 to the Association of American Colleges for a survey of music study in colleges, something about which a good deal is talked and not much known in tabulated form.

The federation believes that music should be a part of the general cultural education of every college student. It is an admirable sentiment, even though it has one great weakness. The weakness is that by the time young people get to college age it is too late to influence them much with music, culturally or otherwise, unless they have had a start before. The time to begin working the benign influence of music is the first year of kindergarten, not the first year of college.

There is a general feeling that colleges are not doing much to help spread this form of culture. The feeling may or may not be correct, but if it is, the reason is obvious. Unless there should happen to be a group of young people of musical tastes and background, the student body has passed its most formative years, and in any event it is being led along the paths of learning by a faculty group mostly trained in other interests than music. Consequently, there is little impulse on either supply or demand. The real answer would seem to be to start the young when they are very young.

Music Notes.

The Gordon String quartet, with Jacques Gordon, former concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra as first violin, will give a series of fifteen Sunday afternoon concerts beginning June 12 at the home of the organization, The Hall, Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. During the week of Aug. 14 there will be the third annual festival of chamber music participated in by other distinguished artists. A note in the program states that Music Mountain is now easily accessible by automobile from the Connecticut highway serving that part of the state.

Mr. Stock has been taking time from his other duties to issue two songs, both dedicated to and sung by that lovely artist, Claire Dux. They are published by the H. T. FitzSimons company. They are brief but beautiful and can be confidently recommended as additions to the soprano repertoire.

"The Letter," to a German poem by Theodor Sturm with an English version by Luther Moffitt, is a charming, fluent melody in the folk music manner and uncommonly persuasive. "To a Firefly," the poem by L. H. C. Hoelty and translated into English by Albert Noelte, is somewhat more complex harmonically and melodically, but sprightly and imaginative and a first rate work of its kind.

Edward M. Beck writes that there is a well defined movement to establish a permanent light opera company in Chicago with a season of twenty-five weeks, presenting a different work each week. The entire repertoire will be in English, and the plan is to make the company all-Chicago, a chorus recruited from Chicago music schools, the principals, as many as possible, developed from Chicago artists, and a Chicago orchestra.

Mr. Beck adds: "If Chicago wants to pioneer a movement for the establishment of a truly American opera company we will give them opera in the language they can understand at prices they can afford to pay. Furthermore, we will give productions that are modern, with intelligent stage direction, free from the hidebound traditions of the past, in short, opera which is enjoyable as well as educational and in tune with our present day and age."

Among the musicians of note expected here next season comes the name of Heinrich Schlusnus, the German baritone. He is worth hearing and he has been away for two years. Last fall he was reported seriously ill, but the announcement of his coming would seem to indicate his recovery.

In New Revue

WALTER WOOLF.
[Bloom Photo.]

"Clowns in Clover," a revue designed for a summer run in Chicago, will have its premiere at the Grand or Appollo June 26 with Walter Woolf as its featured player. Mr. Woolf has been a star in operetta and comedy, and has a fine baritone voice. His last acting was in "Experience Unnecessary."

Another American visitor, but a newcomer, will be Myra Kinch, who is described as a dramatic mask dancer and whose publicity heralds admit that she is the new concert sensation of Europe.

Musical Competitions.

New competitions are being offered those musicians who find themselves able to indulge in the luxury of composition. The Society for the Publication of American Music announces one for chamber music compositions; the Juilliard School of Music another for a composition playable by a major symphony orchestra. Both state that only American composers are eligible, the chamber music list including American citizens or those who have applied for citizenship, the orchestral composers to be native born or naturalized American citizens.

Neither offers a monetary reward, merely publication and its opportunity to get the chosen composition before the musical public. Both organizations have the same address, 130 Claremont avenue, New York. The orchestral compositions must be delivered by Oct. 1, the chamber music by Oct. 15.

Jerome Siegan will give a piano recital this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Kimball hall. At the same hour there will be a joint appearance by Dorothy Ford, pianist, and Ethelgene Roscoe, reader, at Baldwin hall.

Of summer musical activities outside of Chicago, the Cincinnati Zoo company, at first reported abandoned, has been revived, and will carry on for ten weeks. Isaac Van Grove, Chicagoan and a conductor of the Civic Opera company, will be the musical director, as in former years, and several Civic Opera singers will be on the roster of artists. Cleveland will give its second summer season in its municipal stadium in the week of June 29 to July 6. The works scheduled for presentation are "Tom-Tom," by Shirley Graham, Negro composer, "Carmen," "Aida," and "Die Walküre." St. Louis has already begun its municipal operetta season, a series which from the beginning has been attractive and prosperous.

Conchita Supervia, the Spanish mezzo-soprano, who made a brief visit to the Civic Opera last winter, is now touring in Spain. She will return to America for another season in September.

Paderewski, with a record of sixty concert appearances here last season, is planning to spend the summer at his home at Morges, Switzerland. He will come back next February for another tour of three months, his eighteenth in the United States.

A concert will be given at Bowen hall, Hull house, this afternoon by the Woman's Symphony orchestra under the direction of Ebba Sundstrom. Six soloists and a chorus from the music school of Hull house are featured on the program.

Mary Wigman May Mold New Art on American Deserts

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Mary Wigman's impression of America's vast west may find interpretation in some of her new dances.

So, at least, think associates of this German artist, who has returned to her country after a 17,000 mile tour, her second one.

On her first visit to the United States she was enthralled by the stark, elemental quality of Niagara Falls—and the new cycle of dances she created after her return to Germany showed an emotional reaction to this spectacle.

So now there is the possibility that the desert will prove a new inspiration to her.

"My impression of the desert was different from all others I have felt in my life," she said.

"A crazy sentence kept running through my mind—like this, that I was nearer to the hour of birth of the whole world—you understand, I can't explain.

"It was always land without end, and light seemed to be the architect."

An impression, likewise lasting, she carried back home this time in remembering the little automobiles she had seen all over the country.

Miss Wigman said she would like to take one of them and drive right up to the door of her family's home in Dresden.

Shunted Twice, Ricardo Cortez Reaches Goal

Opportunity Knocked for Him More than Once, but Fate Intervened.

By George Shaffer.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—In spite of being shunted, sidetracked, dropped, and withdrawn from the movies several times in his career, Ricardo Cortez just now enjoys as conspicuous a boom as any actor in the talkies.

It's always a pleasure to chronicle the success of a chap who cleaves his way upward by his own gameness, and that's the story of Cortez's third and most successful launching in pictures.

RICARDO CORTEZ.

In 1917 a tall, good looking brown eyed fellow named Kranze was finishing up at De Witt Clinton High school in New York after a school career whose high spot was his place on the championship basketball team of the city. Young Kranze pushed his way into and out of several jobs, among them runner for a broker's firm, "leg man" on police station routine for a newspaper, and clerk in a shipping company office. He even at one time sold tinsel postcards near old Madison Square Garden. All the time he thought it would be great to be an actor.

His Ups and Downs.

The chance came when a friend, not knowing he was working for a brokerage house but imagining because he saw Kranze around the streets in the afternoons that he was an actor, remarked that there was an acting vacancy at the Forty-eighth street movie studio, in a film in which Ruth Roland and the late Milton Sills were playing.

Robert Ellis, the director (later husband of May Allison and then of Vera Reynolds), gave the newcomer a part which required him to walk up a flight of stairs and thrust a gun on Sills. Sills, not overlong out of his own original job as instructor at University of Chicago, was to twist the gun out of the assailant's hand, but Milton Sills never did things by half, and he did the wrist twisting so strenuously that the new actor, partly affected by stage fright anyway, went skidding down the entire flight of stairs a lot faster than he came up. Next day another actor played the part, while the ambitious broker boy stayed home with the arnica.

Fate Intervenes.

However, Ellis remembered him. A small part in "The Imp," with Elsie Janis and Joe King, came up, and the ex-basketball player acted in it for a forty foot flash, and felt he was on the threshold of success. Walter Morosco, Corinne Griffith's husband, sent him to Mickey Neilan, then directing Marguerite Clark in "Out of a Clear Sky," at the old Fort Lee, N. J., studios, and Kranze was in the heights of delight when he was tested and ordered to take a fitting for a uniform for his part. Salary, $60 a week (but he didn't get it, as fate again intervened).

Going home, he found his father, who was in the wholesale clothing business, suddenly stricken with flu, and his sister in a grave condition with the same disease. The father died in three days. The sister died the same week in that flu epidemic of 1918. Neilan's movie job couldn't wait while Kranze was helping care for things at home, and the youth was out of the movies a second time, before he really was in.

A Passable Cousin.

Back to clerking, to help support the family, he was accosted some time later by Johnny Walker with word that "we need some one who looks like my cousin in an O. Henry two-reeler." Walker introduced him to the director, E. H. Griffith, former Chicago newspaper man. Griffith decided he would make a passable cousin. That was Cortez's real film start; salary, $100 a week, while the engagement lasted.

It took some time before the movies provided enough salary to permit Kranze to drop all other work and devote his time to acting. Biggest rôle, "heavy," to Walter Hiers, with Jacqueline Logan as heroine, in "Sixty Cents an Hour" at the now abandoned Paramount Long Island studio.

"Valentino's Successor."

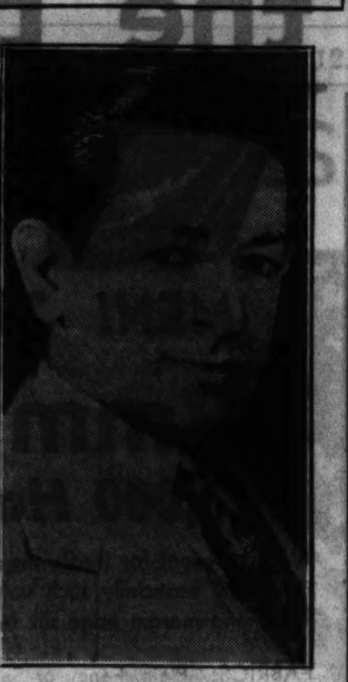
Coming west to stake his whole livelihood on films in 1922, Kranze landed in the midst of Paramount's search for a successor to Valentino. A few rôles here and there, and Jesse Lasky signed him to a long Paramount contract. His name was officially changed to Cortez, so that a Spanish name could succeed an Italian star's.

Cortez was advertised as "the successor to Valentino." "Don't say sheik, girls; say 'Spaniard.'" The funny thing was, he didn't speak a word of Spanish.

The first film he was given to make was called "The Spaniard." Cortez grits his teeth now. "I was new; I thought, of course, I must leave it to the studio; that they knew their business. I now know there can be no second anybody. All that billing as a 'second Valentino' ever got me was bad will and sneers. But I had never been a good mixer; I didn't know how to undo the impression; all I could think of was to become as good an actor as possible, treat every one as well as possible, and live everything down."

"Argentina Love," with Bebe Daniels, was one of his films of about this time, and he appeared in "Feet of Clay," made by DeMille; "Eagle of the Sea," with Florence Vidor; "Sorrows of Satan," a D. W. Griffith story in which Carol Dempster, the late Lya da Putti, and Adolphe Menjou appeared; and "The Swan," with Frances Howard and Adolphe Menjou.

Revue Veteran



WILLIE HOWARD

This famous comedian of many Broadway revues, who recently ended a season in George White's "Scandals," does not believe in vacations. Instead of taking a rest until the "Scandals" begins to travel again, he is now making 'em laugh at the Chicago theater.

He Liked Garbo.

Then came "The Torrent," in which Cortez' name led Greta Garbo's on the billing . . . the first and last time that any man or woman on this side of the Atlantic had his name given precedence over Garbo.

"I liked Garbo," Cortez said. "I understood her. She wanted to sit on the side of the set by herself and keep aloof from people. I understood that perfectly. She was ill at ease and she was frightened. She didn't speak English. I don't make friends readily myself, and I knew the feeling of being misunderstood and sneered at, and I was drawn to Miss Garbo. I have since run into her on the boulevard, at a store, and found her very pleasant. She chats, and she always remembers one she has known."

The effort to create a synthetic Valentino gradually died down at Paramount, and in a difference with studio executives, Cortez withdrew. He married poor, ill starred Alma Rubens on Jan. 30, 1926, at Riverside, Cal., and tragedy soon snatched at beautiful, brilliant Alma—at one time the screen's greatest dramatic actress. Disappointment and bad luck dogged their four years of married life until her death in Los Angeles, in January, 1931. The tragedy in Alma's closing years made Cortez happy to leave Hollywood. The curtain seemed definitely down on his movie career. His path deviated from his wife's.

"Ric Loves Me."

"I went east on Jan. 12, 1930, went into vaudeville and did a stage sketch around New York. Alma came east also, but was doing her own stage work, and we followed different schedules in different cities. I went on to Chicago to see her, and then went to Europe. I was to come back and meet her in Cincinnati, but on June 1, 1930, I returned to New York and a long distance call from Hollywood invited me to fly here to confer over one more film rôle. It was in 'My Man.'

"I had a hunch and decided to come west, although they wouldn't pay my fare."

He joined a cast including Helen Twelvetrees, Jim Gleason, Philipps Holmes, Slim Summerville, and Marjorie Rambeau. The film made a hit and Cortez seemed launched again, but the sensations surrounding Alma Rubens' last days, her arrest at San Diego, accusations of narcotics violations, final illness and death again intervened. She passed away Jan. 21, 1931. In her last breath she whispered, "Ric loves me; I shall always love Ric." The actor now says those dark years will always be illuminated by these words.

Cortez set about paying off the bills. He applied himself to his revised screen career. Few friends and no Hollywood bright lights saw him. As if to reward heartache and hard work, a series of successful pictures followed. There were rôles with Barbara Stanwyck in "Illicit" for Warners'; with Miss Stanwyck, under Lionel Barrymore's direction, in "Ten Cents a Dance," for Columbia; and the R. K. O. studio sent for him and offered a five year contract.

His Last Contract.

This was the second contract [and last] that Cortez ever signed in his screen career, and he still has three years to work under it. His succession of pictures since signing include: With Mary Astor in "Behind Office Doors"; with Loretta Young in a film for which he was lent to First National, "Big Business Girl"; in "Maltese Falcon," on loan to First National, and most recently in "Symphony of Six Million" and "Is My Face Red?"

"I'm one actor that feels he has no kicks or grudges," Cortez says. "I've been through plenty. I'm not worrying about trying to get more money. I have no secretaries, chauffeurs, swimming pools, or engagement rumors to worry me. I have a few friends, and I am able to keep a horse and go riding—by myself—along that seventeen mile bridle path into the Bel-Air foothills. I ride on mornings when I am not working on a picture. I play golf in the afternoons. I have the little place on Wilton avenue left from the happier days with Alma, and it is fixed up exactly right. I'm 32 years old and I'm still hoping to get farther along, but nearly everybody has forgotten that I was ever launched out as a synthetic Spaniard, and a 'second Valentino,' and I want to make everybody forget all of that by the way I do my work now."

Cortez brought a 23 year old brother, now known as Stanley Cortez, out from New York, and made it possible for him, a photography fan, to get a tryout as a film cameraman. The brother made good on his own merit and now is a regular second camera man. This is the big delight of Ric's present days.

Light Crop of Summer Shows for Broadway

Ina Claire in "Reunion at Vienna" for Frisco; News of Stage Affairs

NEW YORK, June 11.—[Special.]—A forecast of the summer theatrical season by the Times for tomorrow's issue suggests that Broadway is going to have an exceedingly dull time between this date and the first week in August, except for the successful productions that are now running along indefinitely. The new shows in sight are few and unpromising.

"Dread," a play by Frederick Herendeen, is listed for a première June 21. "The Lingering Past," by Leonard J. Tynan, is expected to appear at the Provincetown theater late this month. An "Actors' Theater," not inheriting in any way from the defunct organization of that name which dates back to 1925, intends to stage Marion Gering's version of George Kaiser's "Gas" on June 23, and threatens to give it in the sky-scraping Chanin auditorium. "Gold Coast," by Bernard Merry, is a prospect without a theater or an opening date. "Fresh Faces," an intimate revue, is promised for the Sam H. Harris theater late in July. . . . And that is far into the future as the prophets can see at this moment.

The theatrical firm that goes under the name of the Abbot-Dunning corporation says that it will stage a play called "Exit" in mid-September with Mary Duncan in the leading rôle. Also on its program are "Caresses," by Caesar Dunn; "Notions About Love," by Carl Fisher; and "Little Old Boy," by Albert Bein.

After his summer in Hollywood, Paul Muni will return to the stage to head the No. 1 touring company of "Counsellor-at-Law." Otto Kruger will head the No. 2 organization; and between the pair, Elmer Rice's drama will cover as much territory as possible before the film version is released, which will not be until the fall of 1933. Mr. Rice, who is now tripping in Russia, will make the screen adaptation.

"The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," a drama in sixteen scenes by Jean Bart, will have its première in Philadelphia next Thursday night under the management of Arthur Hammerstein and J. Lawrence Weber. A revolving stage will be used. This appears to be an ambitious flight into the higher drama. Herbert J. Biberman, who has directed several productions for the Theater Guild, is staging the piece.

Ina Claire will act Lynn Fontanne's rôle in "Reunion at Vienna" in San Francisco, beginning July 4. Two weeks later Helen Gahagan will appear there as prima donna of the Pacific coast production of "The Cat and the Fiddle." Los Angeles will also see these two shows. This week that city will get a view of "Whistling in the Dark," with Ernest Truex at the head of the cast.

From London comes word of early closings of three of its most impressive shows. They rate as possessing international renown, for they are Noel Coward's "Cavalcade," "Helen," and "The Miracle."

Mr. Coward's work is a pageant to music of important events in British history from the Boer war until the present, as seen by the central character, a woman. Its episodes represent the funeral of Queen Victoria, the tragedy of the Titanic, the terror of the world war, the night of the armistice, and the post-war despair. "Cavalcade" begins its London run Oct. 19.

"Helen" is a modernization of Offenbach's operetta, "La Belle Helene," which was written in 1864 by Mm. Meilhac and Halevy. A. P. Herbert, author of "The Water Gypsies," supplied it with a new libretto. Offenbach's score has been retouched and supplemented by E. W. Korngold, a Vienna composer. This piece has had a great European vogue. Its London run began Jan. 30. Max Reinhardt's revival of "The Miracle" is a more recent affair, dating back only to April 9.

Every city on the map that boasts of a few theaters is proclaiming that the play-going season of 1931-'32 has ended. The Boston chroniclers have dutifully reviewed the history of the period and have found that their town has seen 81 plays and 33 musical shows since last September. This record surpasses Chicago's by 41 titles.

Broadway gossips are saying that George White, the "Scandals" man, will be associated in the American production of the Offenbach operetta, "Helen," when Arch Selwyn imports this famous European hit. Evelyn Laye will come from London as the heroine.

Leslie Howard gave the Theater Guild a little competition for the rights to "This Side Idolatry," by Talbot Jennings—a play that deals with Shakespeare as a journeyman actor and house author. He had read it; he liked it well enough to contemplate a production in London, with himself as Shakespeare; and he was ready to buy it when the Guild announced it for next season's schedule. This incident suggests that the Guild might do worse than engage Mr. Howard for the leading rôle. Alfred Lunt, to whom the organization would assign that part under normal conditions, will be on leave of absence, co-starring with Noel Coward, when "This Side Idolatry" goes into rehearsal.

Mr. Ziegfeld's success with the revival of "Show Boat" has started Arthur Hammerstein thinking along similar lines. He has an idea that the public would take kindly to a revival of his eight year old lyric melodrama, "Rose-Marie," and many experts in the so-called show business are inclined to agree with him. "Rose-Marie" was the banner show of its time for box office receipts, and it is remembered fondly by play-goers.

New Show, Old Hit.

"Tell Her the Truth," a musical version of James Montgomery's once popular farce "Nothing But the Truth," is scheduled for production this week at the Saville theater, London, with a cast including Bobby Howes, Peter Haddon, Alfred Drayton, and Polly Luce.

17-Day-Old Babies 'Act' Half Minute at Time in Movies

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—"Eighteen babies, stand by," read a call sheet, briefest of all Hollywood written orders.

The babies varied in ages from seventeen days to seven weeks. They couldn't sit up, let alone stand by. What "eighteen babies, stand by," really meant of course, was for eighteen mothers to stay at home, ready to start for the studio on a few minutes' notice.

If a baby must be seen, he is shown in one or two closeups and for the long shots a life-like doll is substituted.

The law set seventeen days as the minimum age limit, although younger children have been in the movies. A director says he once "hired" a friend's eleven day old infant for two scenes.

The baby weighed only five pounds, and so it photographed like the two day old it was supposed to be. The director paid his friend $200 for the day's "work," $125 more than customary.

Babies for pictures are obtained through the Los Angeles board of education, which requires the studio to sign an agreement to be fully responsible for any possible injury resulting from the work for six months following the appearance. There is no record of a baby ever having been injured.

The children cannot be photographed for more than 30 seconds at a time nor more than 30 minutes in one day. Baby and mother receive $75 for each day's work, if the baby is under 30 days; $50 if the child is between 30 days and six months.

It would be a good idea not to bring your babies to Hollywood to put in some $75 days; one infant a week is the average used.

Three Barrymores to Star in One Film; Pity the Director!

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—A film starring the three Barrymores is approaching actuality. Ethel is in town with her name on the proper paper, and writers are conferring on possible story material.

Two stories are being considered for the "royal" trio, one an untitled modern piece, the other "Rasputin," which probably will be the eventual choice, since it has three acting parts of equal importance: the mad monk (Lionel), a duke, and a duchess.

Lionel's comment about the forthcoming reunion is merely: "Heaven help the poor sucker who has to direct us."

School of Acting

AN illustrated prospectus has been issued by the school of drama of the Art institute of Chicago. The school occupies the Goodman theater and gives performances in there every month during the season by members of the advanced classes. The theater contains studios for the construction of scenery and properties, costume making, scenery painting, wardrobe rooms, scene studio, and various class and rehearsal rooms. An intimate studio theater, seating 158, is reached through the same lobby as the larger theater. This is used for class rehearsals and occasional performances and lectures.

The faculty of the school, besides Robert B. Harshe, director, and Charles Fabens Kelley, dean, is as follows: Maurice Gnesin, head, acting and production; Mary Agnes Doyle, assistant head, voice and diction; David Itkin, dramatic art; Muriel Browne, dramatic art; Diana Huebert, dancing; Butler Mandeville, makeup; Virginia More Roediger, scene and costume design; Clarence D. Johnson, technical director. Assistants, Ardys Bellah, costume; Robert Brower, technical; Frances Carlon, diction; Adelaide Clyman, diction and production; L. Lawrence Olinger, technical; Sam Russell, scene painting; Thelma Ham, production.

Wynyard Wins

IT took only one play, "The Devil Passes," to convince Hollywood that Diana Wynyard was the sort of actress needed by an industry feverishly seeking new talent. Accordingly, when the play ends its spring tour, Miss Wynyard will go to Hollywood and take up work at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Miss Wynyard began acting in 1925 in a touring English stock company. She went to London with twenty-five rôles to her credit, intending to teach elocution. The next season found her touring with Marie Lohr in "The Love Game," and then for two years she was with the Liverpool stock company.

Two years ago she made a London success in "Petticoat Influence," playing the same rôle that fell to Helen Hayes in this country. "Honours Easy," a Roland Pertwee melodrama, gave her another boost, as did G. B. Stern's "The Man Who Pays the Piker." She won praise for her acting opposite Leslie Banks in the English presentation of "Lean Harvest." Then came "The Devil Passes."

Sober Political Frocks Remain in Washington

Congresswomen Plan to Don Colorful Costumes for Convention.

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—Even if congress is in the Republican national consession when the gavel taps the trio of G. O. P. congresswomen desert Washington for Chicago. And my reason is not political but sartorial. For I want those three—Florence Kahn, Ruth Pratt, Edith Rogers—to have the opportunity of putting on their pretty light colored frocks and of ditching the dark dresses that seem to be the price a woman must pay for a seat in congress.

Black is the feminine uniform. O, the cynics will say that it's really widow's weeds, that the women who succeed in Washington are the women who succeed their husbands. More kindly citizens will tell you that a congressman's feminine colleague can't compete with the gay gowns of the congressman's wife, up in the gallery. Anyway, the congress ladies dress in black. These last sizzling days they have pioneered in discreet gray. Further they do not adventure. But their costume plans for Chicago are grand. Hope they get to carry them out.

And while we're on the subject of dress: Did you happen to notice the glamorous creature who strolled into the senate gallery the other afternoon? She was wearing pajamas. But then it was a pretty sleepy session.

Limelight Reactions.

Let a hitherto obscure gentleman come down here and he gets so important that he has his telephone number suppressed, hides behind seventeen secretaries and half a dozen butlers. But Gen. Dawes, who has held more celebrated jobs in a year than an Alger book hero would hold in a lifetime, is easy to get to. The day he resigned from the Reconstruction Finance corporation he was up in his hotel room, answering all the telephone calls himself, running to the door whenever there was a knock.

And I like that card hanging out over the door of Senator Tydings [Dem., Md.]. It reads "Walk In."

Here's a tip: If you're going to call on Senator Borah, don't smoke. He won't let on that he doesn't like it, but he doesn't.

Word comes that Carlos Davila, of the black mustache and the red wine, is having quite a busy time these days leading a revolution down in his native Chile. Washington remembers him as the former Chilean ambassador here. Remembers his parties. Remembers his genial fury with a waiter who poured rare embassy wine into a pitcher with ice in it. Remembers his well dressed wife who was something of a painter. Remembers his bon mot as he watched the tight rope walker at a Washington circus: "Being a diplomat is like juggling on a tight rope. Only if you fall there is no net to save you." And munched a peanut.

Parties, Large and Small, to Honor Notables at Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas H. Strawn Lead Off Tonight with Gala Administration Fete.

By Cousin Eve.

YESTERDAY a small gay voice greeted me on the telephone: "Are you week-ending?"

"Niente."

"Well, it's a great life if you don't week-end."

I agreed. The week before it was Lake Forest and nipping air. Very cold, in fact. Sitting indoors wrapped in winter woollies is not ideal for the last of May. But one braves the cold and dashes forth to see the lilacs. This has been a great spring for lilacs right here at home. And that great old-fashioned white house of Lawrence Viles which belonged to his mother has the most magnificent lilacs in all Lake Forest. In great clumps, the bushes, deepest purple of the Persians and faintest mauve, a medium shaded lilac, and off by themselves the white lilacs, heavenly sweet. There are lilacs, to be sure, in every Lake Forest garden, but none to compare with Lawrence Viles', and this year the cool air has kept them in a state of perfection.

About a month ago Mrs. Howard Gillette left town for her country place at Biddeford Pool. An old-fashioned Maine house, it is surrounded by lilac bushes, and Mrs. Gillette goes up late in April to open her house for the season and to be there in lilac time. For years she has gone through this ritual all on account of the glorious lilacs, taking with her Mrs. Charles I. Pierce of Chicago and a friend from New York and one from Boston. The poetical things they say of the fragrant blooms nodding at their little quaint windows and the early unfolding of the satin leaves make one glad that we do not have to travel so far to see lilacs.

But evenings of contract bridge before roaring logs and jaunts across the long causeway to the lively town of Biddeford and the movies make this a cheerful holiday.

An Administration Party.

Here we are, in the middle of everything! President making. The cynosure of the world's green eye. Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Silas H. Strawn are leading off with a large administration party at 209 Lake Shore drive. Their prominence at Washington during the present régime gives them the pas in official circles at home and abroad. Mrs. Strawn is a handsome, sparkling brunette and Mr. Strawn a debonair lawyer who until recently headed the United States Chamber of Commerce. Now they are home to stay a while.

For Friday night they have cards out for a dinner in honor of the ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter

Gotham Mothers Escort Youngsters to Annual Fair at Whitney Estate

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Seldom indeed does one get a chance to see Gotham matrons in public, acting as escort or being escorted by their young sons and toddling daughters. However, the annual fair at Greentree, the Payne Whitney estate at Manhasset, always brings out the members of the very youngest set, and the recent one was no exception.

For many years, long before the passing of Mr. Whitney, Greentree has been famed for its gardens, lawns, and products. Mrs. Whitney adores throwing open the estate each year, and delights in meeting every one who chooses to attend the fair in aid of the New York hospital and the Family Welfare association of Nassau county.

All sorts of donations are received. This year the prizes disposed of included a chestnut gelding named Ingle Nook, which came from Mrs. Whitney's famous Greentree stables, and was bred by the owner at her Kentucky stock farm.

Lively Donations.

Genial Joe Widener was not appealed to in vain. His donation was a 2 year old filly, named Unfair, sired by Fair Play. Mrs. William F. R. Hitt, the former Katherine Elkins, gave a 2 year old filly named Rosy Dawn.

Horses were not the only animals donated. Mrs. Marshall Field gave a blue blooded heifer, and "Brose" Clark a ram of azure tinted vein content.

All the other concomitants of a fair abounded. A midway, prize vegetables and flowers, plants of all sorts, carrousels, ponies to ride, and scores of society's young, in starched frocks and blue and pink ribbons, accompanied by their adoring and noted mothers.

Aiding Mrs. Whitney in running the fair, the fifteenth annual one, were Mrs. George Whitney, Mrs. Robert E. Strawbridge Jr., Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, Mrs. William Deering Howe, Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, Mrs. William Langley, Mrs. Richard Dilworth, Mrs. Palen Snow, and Mrs. Averell Clarke.

Pink Bridal Costume.

Every now and then some bride rebels at the traditional white satin, and appears in blue or smoke gray—but Lillian Emerson, who is to meet Bill Hart Jr. at the altar of St. Bartholomew's on the 28th, will be all in pink.

As one of the loveliest of the June brides, Lillian need not worry about her departure from the traditional. Either great wealth, or great beauty gives a girl the right in New York to dictate her own wedding costume.

Another novel note to Lillian's costume will be a hand illuminated transcript of the wedding service enclosed in a cardcase which belonged to the late Queen Alexandra of England. The queen gave it to Mrs. Lawrence Townsend of Washington on the occasion of the coronation of Alexandra and Edward VII. It is of pale gray suede, studded with fleur de lis of turquoise and pearls.

Just as soon as the sun gets hot—and you may as well know that it has been burningly so of late—society goes in for bazaars and charity shows at cool spots.

Then there will be an all-day fe

When Chicago Was Young - - -

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, July 15, 1880.

DEAR JULIA: I was awakened a few minutes ago from an afternoon nap by a noise in front of our Rush street house. Voices of hoi polloi shouted something like: "See de fellah on de wagon wheel, wit a pie tin in de back." Looking out I discovered that one of Martha's admirers was approaching on a bicycle. I have seen bicycles before, but never have seen one ridden by any one I knew, so I was quite fascinated, as this young man brought his wheel to a halt, descended gracefully, and, charging the youthful crowd not to touch it, rang our bell. He had come to ask Martha to accompany him to a picnic. Poor youth! He hadn't heard that Martha and Sandy are engaged and that she never goes anywhere without him. I heard much discussion in the hall, for the young gentleman is a rather persistent person. Apparently Martha succeeded in declining the invitation, and he finally went off, while Martha came upstairs, bearing a book he had left for her father.

I have been turning over its pages, and find it rather interesting. It is called "The American Bicycler"—rather an odd subject for a book, but the author has made it quite readable. He calls man "The animal that rides." Isn't that a curious definition? I have heard humanity denominated "The animal that laughs," but this is a new term for our race. He says that the bicycle is now ten years old, and that it has been taken up in a quiet way by those who need it for healthful exercise or as a practical vehicle. There are now, he says—the book came out last autumn—about 500 riders in America, and he thinks it is one of the permanent acquisitions of the age. He sees a great future for it and thinks there will be many more riders in a few years.

I have to smile a little at the young fellow who brought the book. He evidently thought to propitiate Will by loaning him this work on the bicycle. But even if Martha were not engaged to Sandy MacLeod, and even if she liked the bicycler, the hobby would not appeal to Will. He says it irks him to see these young fellows flying around the country, frightening horses, having accident themselves and contributing to other accidents, and generally living lives of luxury.

"You would think," says Will, "that these young sportsmen might be content with a nice driving horse, but no" [as near a sneer as Will is capable of appears on his face at this point] "no. They must make twelve or fifteen miles an hour, with this new invention." Will is quite convinced that the young generation is going to the bad, because of its love of speed, and he shakes his head over them, calling them pleasure loving and speed crazy, and other harsh names. He takes them much more seriously than I

Edge. Mrs. Edge, still in her twenties when she married Mr. Edge, senator from New Jersey and a widower, has filled her high position in Paris with much charm. During the warm weather in the French capital she has days at home at stated intervals, receiving usually in the gardens of the embassy. Passing from group to group in a most engaging and unaffected way, she has made many friends.

However, as to dinners, hostesses never know. What with all these important caucuses and minor struggles and conferences, a beautiful dinner is a secondary matter. So nobody is quite sure, whether this or that great man will be free to dine. Indeed, many of the eastern visitors are all set to return home on Thursday the sixteenth, feeling that the worst must be over by that time. Another thing, many people who thought they were coming to the convention decided that it is less expensive to stay home and hear it over the radio.

For Mr. and Mrs. Sims.

On Monday night, June 13, Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany Blake are having a big party to dine in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sims [the former Ruth Hanna McCormick]. The Walter Wolfs are dining a dozen guests the same night. In the general mêlée of smaller dinners the Laurance Armours are having a party for Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moore, who are coming out from Long Island. Also arriving are Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field. Coming with them are the Charles C. Cushings, who will stay with Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler in the country. The Cushings have dropped their plan of summering at Le Touquet near the Glidden Osbornes and will instead be neighbors of the Marshall Fields. With their two children they are occupying a small house on the Field estate, Caumsett, at Lloyd's Neck, Huntington. Both Mrs. Field and Mrs. Cushing are terribly good looking and smart. Charles Cushing's determination to stay home may mean that a better stock and bond market is in the offing. There are those who think so.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Livingston Mills are others of distinction. Mr. Mills, secretary of the treasury, is a relative of the late Whitelaw Reid, noted editor and ambassador to England. His parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Mills of New York, had great social prestige and wealth. Mrs. Mills [an old New Yorker tells me] was a Miss Livingston, daughter of a noted early New York family whose forbear was a "signer." A daughter is now Countess Granard of Ireland. Mrs. Ogden Mills today is a dark, aristocratic beauty, formerly Mrs. John Fell. Ogden Mills' first wife was Margaret Rutherford, a daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt. She came here once, and one lunched and played about with her a bit—an amusing but aloof person. She also remarried and became Lady Dukes, the wife of Sir Paul Dukes, a romantic character of the British secret service. She has recently married again.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike will be home from Europe for the Republican convention, and from California come Mr. and Mrs. Mark Requa, friends and neighbors of the Arthur Meekers at Santa Barbara.

From Newport, R. I., is coming Miss Edith Wetmore, sister of Maude Wetmore, both members of an inner circle of eastern fashionable life. They are daughters of a former Republican senator from Rhode Island and influential in politics. Miss Wetmore will stay at the Blackstone.

Comes also James W. Wadsworth of Geneseo, former senator from New York.

A Glimpse Into Future.

A shadowy rumor of exciting import: One or two convention hostesses at late supper parties will entertain a beautiful and mysterious guest. Her name is Gene Dennis. She is charming as she is good looking, and her long lashed eyes are said to see far into the future. Who will be our next President, perhaps? I was teasing with the exotic creature one day when she powdered her nose from a new oblong gold compact inscribed, "From Mary Pickford to Gene Dennis."

That charming young matron and hostess, Mrs. Nathaniel Owings [Emily Otis that was], had such a nice luncheon the other day. The table was set out on the veranda of the Administration building of the Century of Progress. I am quite mad about eating out of doors. So were the others. We were all sniffing the lake breeze and saying how grand it was, and casting an eye over the lagoon where the bridge is rapidly going up, which will be covered with chic little shops like the Ponte Vecchio in Florence, or the Rialto in Venice. And there were men at the luncheon—Mr. Owings snatched a few moments from the concessions, and her Skidmore from his architectural duties, Shepard Vogelsang and several others. And there were other parties, but not on the porch—the Rufus Dawes had a large one and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank a smaller group.

Afterwards we all meandered over [by limousine and foot] to the official opening of the Hall of Science which was held in the open. And one had a prophetic vision of one's World's Fair sufferings to come. Long speeches from science men, hot sun, hallelujah choruses, little tin chairs, megaphones, long walks, and crowds. Mr. Dawes introduced Dr. Jewett of Northwestern, who was the official opener, although I understood that Dr. Frost, the celebrated astronomer of Lake Geneva, will open the entire Century of Progress the first of next June with a ray from Arcturus, his new planet. And that will be a chic novelty. Expositions are mostly pleasurable by night.

I happened to be sitting next to Mrs. Ralph James, one of the most amusing and best informed women there is, and she was saying this: Since the depression the newest idea is for inventions to be curtailed, and that science shall take a holiday in the field of invention for fifty years. Too much money is being squandered on improvements piled on improvements. Dr. Jewett referred to this holiday in his address.

Women Seek Concessions.

The World's Fair is now open daily for visitors at a small tariff. Quite a few women are rushing in boldly for concessions. Mrs. Frank Hubbard has very cleverly foreseen that her "Conveniences" will surely reap a huge fortune—a tiny shop in Oak street which thrives on small jobs done for busy people.

Mrs. John L. Cochran Jr. has, as I understand it, taken over the entire children's section at the exposition; will run a little theater, a playhouse, costuming, health department, etc.

Mrs. Helen R. Walton, lovely amateur actress and intellectual, has seized and signed for the International theater. And I have heard elsewhere about religious plays that are to be given by some member of the Booths, of Salvation Army fame.

Another interesting luncheon of last week was Miss Alice Gerstenberg's at the Casino. Her guest of honor was the fascinating actress, Miss Mary Servoss, playing in "Counsellor at Law." Some years ago it was this same gifted girl who was Alice in Miss Gerstenberg's play, "Alice in Wonderland." Miss Servoss has been living and playing in London for some time. Judith Anderson, the O'Neill leading woman, was expected at this same party, but I understand had a rough trip through the air and was hors de combat.

It is very amusing indeed to hear people speak casually of their air trips now. Mrs. Walter Kirk told me one day that she had flown out from Boston the day before, landing twice en route, and had vastly liked the adventure. And ten days ago Mrs. Walter Wolf left the fast train at Cleveland and flew home—her first flight. She was greatly struck with the enormous number of people coming and going at the airports, huge planes swooping in from every direction, and then motor cars arriving with passengers like a railroad station. Brightly uniformed men rushing with baggage, everything organized, and an elegant mise en scene, as abroad. There were planes from the east, west, and south, and everybody apparently as nonchalant as if taking a street car as they nipped up the gangway into the bodies of the huge winged dragon flies. The world keeps getting queerer and queerer.

Monday Night Concerts.

Again our fancy soars to the autumn. In the probable year's holiday for civic opera, concerts are coming to the fore. And a series called "the Monday night concerts" is taken over by Mrs. William S. Monroe, chairman, to finance the Girl Scouts. These recitals will take place at Orchestra hall and will begin with the gorgeous Lucrezia Bori, lovely Spaniard, Oct. 17, ending with Sigrid Onegin Feb. 13; Tito Schipa, Chaliapin, and Jascha Heifetz being the other artists. Season tickets for the boxes and seats are being sold by subscription, as at the Theater Guild, but I daresay when the time comes separate tickets will be available. This is one of the great enterprises of Chicago, this work for the girls. I see that Miss Grace Denton, director of the Town Hall series, is also directing this musical merger. The committee includes Mrs. Richard Bentley, Mrs. John Bremner, Mrs. Britton Budd, Miss Clifford, Mrs. W. J. Corbett, Mrs. Nathan Davis III., Mrs. Edison Dick, Mrs. James H. Douglas Jr., Mrs. George Farnsworth, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, Mrs. H. J. Friedman, Mrs. Charles Lindsay Jr. and Mrs. Lindsay III., Mrs. Monroe, Mrs. Paul Magnusson, Miss Pam, Mrs. A. K. Selz, Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, Mrs. Carroll Sudler, and Mrs. Jay Whipple.

Thirteen boxes already have been sold for the five concert series. The box holders include Mrs. J. Alexander Waller, Mrs. John B. Bremner, Mrs. Frank J. Loesch, Miss Joanna Fortune, Miss Harriet Clifford, Mrs. David Hall, Mrs. George Ranney, Miss Caroline Pam, Mrs. Edward Litsinger, and Miss Helen Drake.

Party for the Innocents.

A few nights since Mr. and Mrs. Eames MacVeagh had a party for the Innocents, the lively French circle founded last season by the former French consul, Comte Charles de Fontnouvelle. Being late in the season no set program was kept, and no discours. A very lovely place the MacVeagh habitat. Way up over the roar of Michigan avenue the living room is a two storied, high ceiled salon appropriate to a French chateau, with door arches and chimney piece of Caen stone. It somehow is a restful, delightful sort of place, full of charm.

After an informal reception a few reels of movies were spun, including dear old Paree, but fortunately not those darling Italian horsemen, which would have been a dreadful gaffe. After which the rugs were rolled up and the Innocents danced. A petit souper followed and thus the Innocents wound up the season. Mr. and Mme. Weiller were not there, being dated up for the Rufus Dawes dinner in Evanston, their 43d anniversary, which included 40 guests, and was a gay affair, where the men changed places after every course. Neither were the Ira Morrises there, they being detained in New York.

Comtesse de Fontnouvelle has joined her husband in New York, where he is now consul general, and the family has taken a house at Greenwich.

An engagement and a wedding in town came to pass last week; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Rend announced the engagement of their second daughter, Helen, to John Clarke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Clarke.

Helen Rend is very accomplished, also a delight to the eye—a white skinned Spanish type, an unusually charming companion, and most popular in society. On top of this she is a composer.

Her fiancé, John Clarke, is tall and good looking, and for the years since leaving college has been studying for the diplomatic profession, if one may call it that. Just at present he is in that stricken area called La Salle street.

A Quiet Ceremony.

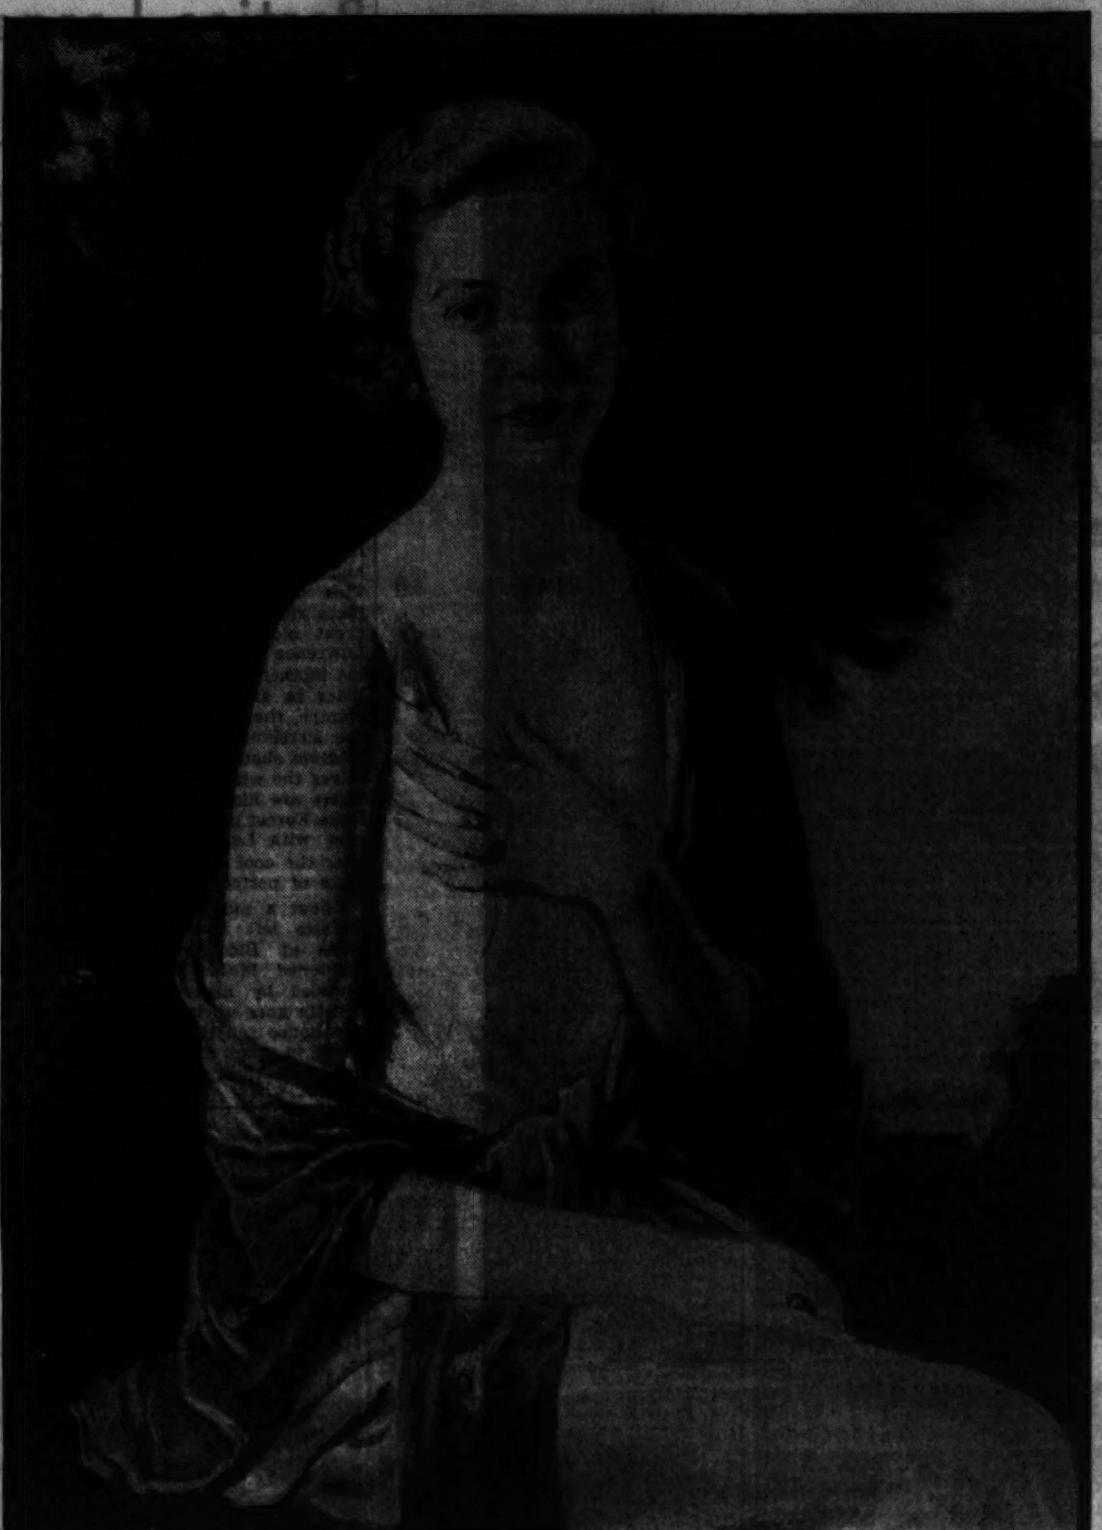
The notable wedding was the quietly celebrated ceremony that united Rue Winterbotham and Alfred P. Shaw, an architect, unrelated to any of our local Shaws, being from Boston. It appeared that the Misses Badger, tiny flower maidens, rather stole the show. The daughters of Shreve and "Dodo" Badger, aged 2 and 3, serious, in quaint white satin frocks, bouquets, and yellow fillets on their infant brows, were so sweet as to be fairly edible.

A married sister, Louise, now Mrs. George Schiefflin of New York, has turned out to be very beautiful and was much admired. And so was another bride, Mrs. Potter Palmer III. A tall, graceful creature, she is a radiant blond, with larkspur eyes, blooming complexion, and the added gift of perfect pearls for teeth.

The two recent Palmer weddings were celebrated out of Chicago, Bertha Palmer's being an event of the late Bar Harbor season. The returning guests from that faraway affair reported that Bertha Palmer, whose wedding gown was of that strange shade called ice blue satin, and her tulle veil also of the same unusual tint, was the loveliest bride that Bar Harbor had ever seen.

But that was not surprising, as good looks run riot in the several generations of Honore and Palmer families.

A Debutante of Next Season



LOVELY and blond Miss Nancy Traylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Traylor, is to be a debutante next season. This portrait, painted by Ernest S. Klempner, pictures her in a white satin evening gown with a green velvet cape, effective against a background of dark foliage and sky. The portrait is at the Knoedler galleries in an exhibition of Mr. Klempner's work, opening tomorrow.

Debutantes to Model.

Helen Kountze has got together a group of our best tanned debs to act as models for her fashion show, and the mannequins include Barbara Babcock, Nancy Morgan, Mary Trimble, Frances Stevens, Catherine Morley, Annette Ponsio, Jane Doughty, and Mrs. Richard Trimble.

June 18 has been set as the date of the wedding of Mildred Phelps Stokes Hooker and Dyson Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan of Newport and New York.

While the arrangements, including the selection of the bridal attendants, have not yet been made, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ranson S. Hooker of town and Bedford, N. Y., and young Duncan will meet at the altar in Newport and all the notables will be in attendance.

Mildred, who attended the Briarly and Foxcroft schools, made her debut three years ago. She is a granddaughter of the late Anson Phelps Stokes, and her family has long been connected with Newport, as has that of her fiancé. Dyson is a nephew of Mrs. William M. V. Hoffman, of Mrs. Albert Gould Jennings, of Mrs. Frederick Parsons of Paris, who is coming to be at the wedding; of Mrs. Ottomar H. Van Norden, and of Mrs. George E. Dunscombe, which is a gallant and notable array of aunties.

A Portrait of Lincoln Greets the Delegates

The Tribune Reproduces in Color a Painting of First G. O. P. President.

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

THE first of its candidates whom the Republican party elected to the presidency greets from THE TRIBUNE'S color page today the delegates who this week hope to nominate a man who will be their party's twelfth successful contender for the highest office the American people can bestow.

Abraham Lincoln was the first of the thirteen Presidents whom the Republican party in the seventy-eight years of its existence has given the nation, either by election or by vice presidential succession, and he was one of the three whom it elected twice. The others were Grant and McKinley. Counting Mr. Cleveland as two—which is the method historians adopt because his administrations were separated by four years—there have been only five Democratic Presidents in the seventy-eight years of the Republican party's existence—Pierce, Buchanan, Cleveland, and Wilson. In the one hundred and forty-one years since the Democratic party was founded by Thomas Jefferson there have been twelve Democratic Presidents.

Beginning with 1856, when the Republican party, then two years old, nominated its first presidential candidate, John C. Fremont of California, there have been nineteen presidential elections. Of those contests the Republicans have won fourteen and lost five. Fremont, Blaine, Benjamin Harrison, Taft, and Hughes were the party's defeated nominees, although Harrison and Taft were elected in their first campaigns.

The Republicans have nominated fourteen individuals for the presidential office and have elected eleven of them. Four Republican Vice Presidents—Johnson, Arthur, Roosevelt, and Coolidge—succeeded to the presidency through the death of elected incumbents, but two of those Vice Presidents did not receive the honor of nomination at the close of their partial terms as President.

A Curious Fact.

It is an arresting fact, although no significance attaches to it, that no Democratic Vice President has succeeded to the presidency through the death of a President. John Tyler, however, although elected Vice President as a Whig, became for all practical purposes a Democrat after his succession to the presidency through the death of President William Henry Harrison, and he died a Confederate.

The foregoing analysis of the number of Republican presidential victories and defeats as contrasted with the number of Republican Presidents produces apparent contradictions. But the contradictions are not real. They are only intricacies caused by renominations of certain individuals and by vice presidential successions. A soothsayer safely could prophesy almost anything by playing with American presidential statistics.

One fact abides without modification or contradiction: Nearly seven decades after his death Abraham Lincoln remains the supreme historical figure among the thirteen Republican Presidents.

Supreme, too, in the affections of the people.

Americans of the present generation have been surfeited with rhetoric about Lincoln. But they never tire of intimacies about him. In Illinois there is a hamlet which unfolds a vivid chapter of Lincolnian intimacies, and THE TRIBUNE hopes that its reproduction in today's rotogravure section of Hamilton Crawford's beautiful mezzotint of Lincoln will serve the double purpose of a greeting to the Republican delegates and an inspiration to its readers to visit a Lincoln shrine distant from Chicago by only five hours of brisk motoring, if you take the shorter route, which is Route 4, via Joliet, but which is far from being as beautiful as the Peoria route.

Really to Know Lincoln.

I am sure, countrymen, that you will never know your best beloved countryman until you make the pilgrimage to old Salem where he passed from a raw, untutored youth to strong, sapient manhood.

I mean knowing him as neighbor, friend, struggler, aspirer, lover, and mourner; I mean knowing him in the intimate, homely way in which he—strangely enough—can be known to you even in this, the sixty-seventh year after his death. In old Salem he takes possession of you now even as one hundred and one years ago, when still in his twenties, he masterfully took possession of that community.

Thither he went in 1831 when he was twenty-two years old and there he dwelt until 1837. Spiritually and culturally those six years were the formative years of his life. There he was hewer of wood and drawer of water, but there also he was eager reader of Shakespeare and Burns—and of the great horizon widening book, Paine's "Age of Reason." There he devoured the volumes of Blackstone which he had bought for 50 cents—some say a dollar—from an encumbered pioneer who was pushing on, and in old Salem today you will see the Onstott cooper shop where, by the light of the cooper's shavings, he read those books. "Never," said he years afterward, "never in my whole life was my mind so thoroughly absorbed. I read until I devoured them."

Of Treasured Memories.

Old Salem—"New Salem" in his time never ceased to be dear to Lincoln. Always he treasured his memories of it—liked to yarn with oldtimers about it—and in it he expected to make his rural home after his second presidency.

In 1864 when he was fifty-five years old and Salem lay seven and twenty years behind him, he told Russell Conwell that it was his ambition to "carry on a farm with Tad for a partner"—little Tad was sitting in the President's lap at the moment. The father added, "I have bought a farm at New Salem, Illinois, where I used to dig potatoes at 25 cents a day, and Tad and I are to have mule teams and raise corn and onions."

Affecting secrecy, he leaned forward and said, "Mrs. Lincoln does not know anything about the plan for the onions."

He who had been thirty years in law and politics, and had highly succeeded in both, added, "Farming, after all, is the best occupation on earth."

In planning your Salem pilgrimage, beware lest you become confused.

There are three Salems in Illinois—the considerable town of Salem that is capital of Marion county, south of Vandalia, and New Salem in Pike county, and this Lincolnian old New Salem, which is the one you want, but which now has no postoffice identity. In making your pilgrimage you must think solely of "Old Salem State park," Petersburg, Ill., in Menard county. Petersburg, the county seat with a population of around 3,000, is fifty miles southwest of Peoria as the crow flies, and 20 miles northwest of Springfield. Reaching either of those large towns you will find plenty of obliging persons to give you the specific routes to Petersburg.

Chicagoans taking the longer route, the one via Peoria, which passes through some of the most beautiful scenery in the United States, will reach Petersburg in the late afternoon, if they make an early start from Chicago, and they can be comfortably back home on the evening of the next day.

"Salem" is the old biblical word meaning "peace," and perfect peace broods over and blesses this lovely Salem, two miles outside Petersburg, where you will wish to lodge for the night. It is a serene, stately promontory of green pushing out into a quiet sea of prairie and woodland. That is its note—the calmness of a sunny, happy sea!

Now a Deserted Village.

In its most active days, which were in the mid-thirties, Salem never had more than twenty-five structures, nor a population of more than one hundred. Now it is a veritable deserted village save for its thronging memories.

In 1839 the then new Menard county was carved out of Lincoln's old Sangamon county, and Petersburg, more accessible than high throned New Salem, was made the county seat.

That was New Salem's doom as a community, but, by one of the more gracious ironies of history, it was also the cause of the preservation of the aspect it had when Lincoln lived there.

Most of the Salemites moved bag and baggage, and some of them house and housage down into Petersburg. The matter of moving the houses was fortunate, too. The cooper, Henry Onstott, for example, took down his New Salem combination home and shop of logs and set it up again in Petersburg, and ultimately he sheathed the log structure with boards. The important point for us is that the sheathing perfectly preserved the logs.

So when the fine work began fourteen years ago of restoring the deserted village to its aspect in Lincoln's time it was found possible to bring the old cooper shop of split walnut logs in which Lincoln had read Blackstone—the most important thing that ever happened to him—back to the original site. That possibility was lovingly worked out by Menard county men of the "Old Salem Lincoln league," a goodly organization which Lloyd George thought it worth while to join. Today the state of Illinois owns "Old Salem State park" and pays for its care.

Buildings of the village that had rotted away even by the time Mr. Lincoln died have been replaced by careful replicas constructed after pictures in old county annals and in accordance with testimony of Salem residents who lived nearly 80 years after the town was abandoned.

The work has been so tactfully done that no beauty is blemished. The semblance of a vanished era is perfect, and the "association places"—the tavern, the stores, the homes, the well, the paths—of a great life are eloquently and subtly imparted to you. Every glade, every glimpse of water, every field in these eighty acres of shrine speak to you of Lincoln.

It is biography in natural panorama.

For Your Pilgrimage.

Herndon's "Life of Lincoln" gives in seventy small pages the story of Lincoln's Salem days. Those pages unfold the piteous story of Ann Rutledge, the beautiful, sensitive girl whom Lincoln wooed and won, and whom death took from him in 1835.

Alonzo Rothschild in his good book on the emancipator—"Lincoln, Master of Men"—calls old Salem "the town of central Illinois in which Lincoln began life on his own account." In other words, he here found himself. His townsmen also found him, for here he first won from the people official recognition of his ability to lead them. Here he was clerk, storekeeper, rail splitter, surveyor, pilot, postmaster, farm hand, and law student—sometimes by turns and sometimes simultaneously—and from here he first was elected to the Illinois legislature. Here happened the shrewd Yankee episode of his getting the stranded boat over the dam—remains of that dam still to be seen—and the punitive episode of the smartweed applied to the man who had uttered outrageous language in the presence of Storekeeper Lincoln's women customers, and the Homeric episodes of the wrestling matches, and the episode of the classic letter to Col. Allen in which Lincoln, then only 27 years old and taking his first steps in politics, told a loose talker that he was a liar, a slanderer, and an irresponsible in terms at once so patient, so courtly, and so proud that a dean of diplomats in a sophisticated European chancery would despair of equaling the subtlety and the skill of the language.

Ann Rutledge's Grave.

You will not wish to be bothered with my banalities when you make your pilgrimage to Ann Rutledge's grave, which lies in Oakland cemetery on the outskirts of Petersburg. There you will wish to muse alone. I will only recall to you now that Mr. Lincoln dearly loved the Ann Rutledge who was untimely taken from him, and that, long years after her passing, when he was a great man and the world was thronging upon him, he said, "I have loved the name of Rutledge to this day . . . I did honestly and truly love the girl, and think often of her now."

And this:

"He told me once when the hurt was new," said Lincoln's lifelong friend, the late William G. Green of Salem, "that he didn't want to live. He couldn't bear the thought, he said, that the rain was falling on her grave and she sleeping in the cold ground."

A poet has done a beautiful thing for this shrine spot. In a few heart-searching words Edgar Lee Masters has told the whole story of a love and a loss, of a desolation and an inspiration, and now these words are carved on the granite monolith which devoted Lincolnians placed eleven years ago beside the grave of Ann Rutledge.

Hear their sorrow and their song:

> Out of me unworthy and unknown
> The vibrations of deathless music,
> "With malice toward none, with charity for all."
> Out of me forgiveness of millions toward millions,
> And the beneficent face of a nation
> Shining with justice and truth.
> I am Ann Rutledge who sleeps beneath these weeds.
> Beloved of Abraham Lincoln,
> Wedded to him, not through union,
> But through separation.
> Bloom forever, O Republic.
> From the dust of my bosom.

Some lines out of a great book came back to me as I stood reading and musing in the long summer twilight by that grave—the closing words of "Middlemarch":

". . . for the growing good of the world is partly dependent on unhistorical acts; and that things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been is half owing to the number who lived faithfully a hidden life, and rest in unvisited tombs."

Originality and Independence Mark Exhibition of Students' Work

Compositions Awarded Traveling Fellowships Merit More Praise Than Those of Past Years.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE annual exhibition of work by students of the Art institute art school, which opened last Monday, proves to be one of the best the school has ever held. Particularly fine is the division of commercial art in which many of the pieces shown, such as wrappers for boxes, wall paper designs, and advertisement material, are extremely clever and effective. The etching show has its good moments but on the whole is possibly the least professional part of the exhibit. The oils and drawings are exceptionally good. Emphasis seems to have been placed on correct anatomy and on modeling, and the result is a glorious relief from Matisse and podgy limbs.

The students seem to stand on their own feet, free from the influences that have been sweeping the horizons of creative art. The Art Students league exhibit, in the farthest gallery, is the only place where shades of modernist painters flicker. In the league show you will see work distinctly suggestive of Matisse, Dufy, Segonzac, Modigliani, and others of like fame.

Traveling Fellowship Awards.

The Art institute traveling fellowships were awarded this year for general excellence and for the best solutions of a three part problem which included a composition, a figure study, and a life study. For the first time in several years, the compositions hung possess life. One of them is best fitted for the cover of a grewsome mystery story, it is true, but another has beauty of line and plane in addition to a well conceived and executed plan of design.

The mystery cover, with surgeons like sheeted ghosts of skeleton form directing a magnified ray of mystic properties at the heart of their helpless victim upon the operating table, is the work of Julien Binford, who, by the way, in another room shows an admirable nude of a colored girl, full length, lying with her back toward you. He was awarded the Edward L. Ryerson traveling fellowship of $1,500 plus another $1,000, contingent upon the excellence of his work during the first year. Mr. Binford comes from Richmond, Va. He intends to travel and paint in Persia.

"AN ORPHAN OF THE STORM," by Elisabeth Haseltine, Chicago sculptor and member of the Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors, whose exhibition in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, is one of the brilliant exhibitions of the month. It will end July 1.

The composition of symmetry, balance, beauty, and intelligent development, with the added charm of delightful color, is by Aarre Lahti, Ironwood, Mich., to whom was allotted the James Nelson Raymond fellowship of $2,000. Mr. Lahti plans on the north of France as a good place to continue his development as a painter. The Anna Louise Raymond traveling fellowship of $1,500 was awarded to Dorothy Doennecke, Davenport, Ia., the only woman student to be so honored. Her figure study and life study are both fine. Miss Doennecke has made no plans beyond a tentative thought to make Paris her starting point next winter.

Rufus Bastian, Milwaukee, Wis., was awarded the John Quincy Adams $1,500 fellowship. He intends to go with Mr. Binford to Persia. In the exhibit he offers an excellent figure study, a dark-skinned youth in a turban.

The American traveling fellowship of $250 was awarded to A. Kenneth Ness.

In the Arts Students league exhibit four prizes, given by the Municipal Art league, of which Paul Schulze is president, were awarded: Portrait prize of $25, to Keith Martin; first prize for composition, $30, to Genevieve Augustin; second prize for composition, $20, to Mildred Waltrip; first, best group, $25, to Betsy Hancock. In addition, the Alumni association of the Art institute awarded the following: Second, best group, $15, to Grace Spenberg; third, best group, $10, to Louis Hellwig.

Most Interesting Exhibit.

The most interesting one-man exhibit of the month in town is that of portraits and paintings by Amy Irwin McCormick (Mrs. R. R. McCormick) in the Chester H. Johnson galleries, Fine Arts building. Two things stand out in Mrs. McCormick's painting, her reading of the character of her sitters and her ability to convey that character on canvas. She has an immediate appreciation of the personality challenging her and an amazing skill in answering the challenge. There is nothing doll-like nor saccharine about her portraiture; there is nothing of the amateur, though something of the student. Her work is free, vigorous, finished, and intensely personal.

A suggestion of Matisse is discoverable in her quick study of Katherine Cornell, but one feels it is instinctive and not labored. Realizing Mrs. McCormick's alert interest in modernism, it is the more remarkable that her painting should be free from the aberrations so often accompanying individualism. That quality of originality which literally connotes individualism is peculiarly her own. You have only to look from the delicate portrait of Mrs. William Clow Jr., a portrait much in the Rossetti mood and one that fits Mrs. Clow exquisitely, to the robust, almost primitive manner in which "Mr. Joseph Medill and His Grandchildren" is painted to understand the infinite grades of inflection at the command of her brush.

"Ten feet—and boots!" was Mrs. McCormick's gasp of dismay when she first thought of painting the portrait from an early photograph. She has succeeded with the boots, they are nonexistant to the casual eye—and than that what more can one want of boots?—but the rugged reality of the group in the Ross Moffett manner is most effective. It is a capital piece of honest painting, painting which must have given its perpetrator a great deal of fun.

Eyes Particularly Fine.

Mrs. Howard J. Cunningham has been painted repeatedly, but never with so sensitive an appreciation of the changing qualities of her features as we find in the portrait in this show. The eyes are particularly fine. And eyes, as one looks from canvas to canvas, are one of Mrs. McCormick's great successes. Her modeling is another good point, and the tones of her flesh. Her color sense never deserts her, and as a result her work is both honest and picturesque. Her "Nude Seated" is a case in point of the excellence of her modeling, her knowledge of structure, her quality of flesh, and her sure feeling for the security of simplicity.

"The High Jump" is another painting which was done rapidly. Its tempo fits the fact. The gray horse is clearing the bar, its rider well forward. As a swift impression of an instant in time gone before it has scarcely been, the painting is a triumph. The wise perception of the lack of necessity for detail has not failed the painter. This is a portrait, as many will realize, but it is also a successful, impetuous rendering of an excitement charged moment.

Owing to public interest the exhibit will continue to July 1.

At the Chicago Galleries.

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors offers a brilliant members' show in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, through the month of June. If any of you listen in to "Easy Aces" over W-G-N you will have no trouble in placing "The Dummy," by F. R. Harper, for she is a most delightful "Jane." The painting is one of the best in the exhibition, in fact, it is one of the most entertaining and one of the best pictures we have run across for some time at the various group shows. The accessories are beautifully handled and the girl is exquisitely drawn.

Joseph Allworthy and Claude Buck vie for our favor in their several still life compositions. Both these men possess a clarity of technique which is fascinating. Sheer craftsmanship weaves a spell it is hard to resist; coupled with intriguing color and balanced design the charm of their work is irresistible.

Karl Brandner offers a beautiful landscape, "Lifting Clouds," purple hills of great loveliness and rising mists. Oskar Gross shows a delightful portrait of Mrs. Gross. Oscar Erickson shows "Across the Valley," a picturesque landscape. Elizabeth B. Millard submits two arrangements of glass and pottery and color that are fascinating. A youthful ardor pervades these expressions of Mrs. Millard, which makes them an inspiration to many of us who see life, perhaps too often, in drab colors.

A Magnificent Canvas.

Edward T. Grigware is represented by his magnificent canvas, "Lower Town, Quebec," which was one of the few important paintings in this spring's Chicago artists' exhibit at the Art institute. Leonore S. Jerrems offers a tantalizing arrangement in "Ship in Bottle." Frank V. Dudley shows a fresh summer day on the dunes with fishermen trying their luck from the beach. John T. Nolf has, among other pictures, a clever painting of two farm women gossiping over a fence. Otto Hake offers a formal figure study in "Imperial Cathay." Frederick Hibbard, in sculpture, shows a charming girl figure to be used as a garden piece. Elisabeth Hazeltine shows, in sculpture, an admirable "Persian Cat," just the head, and a wistful, roguish bit of dog, "An Orphan of the Storm."

Leo Marzolo shows "Cousins," an exquisitely painted still life of roses in a jar and apples and pears at its base. Ingeborg Christensen offers a lovely flower piece in "Say It with Roses," and a jolly portrait of a little girl and her dog, "Prize Winners." Pauline Palmer has a beautiful study, "The New Book." Anna Lee Stacey offers a romantic interlude, "May Moonlight." Eugenie Glamen is decorative with "Painted Pig."

"The Lunar Moth," by Gerald Frank, is a charming composition of woman and child. Karl Plath shows his splendid "Cockatoo" and another decorative bird painting, "Whydah Birds." Charles W. Dahlgreen shows an excellent landscape. Elizabeth Peyraud offers a stunning still life of flowers in a jar. "The Old Mill," by Oscar Soellner, is delightful. Mary Wicker is at her finest in a beautiful, romantic landscape, "Sartene, Corsica," and Frank C. Peyraud submits a lovely winter landscape.

Current Exhibits.

The Chicago School of Sculpture, Viola Norman, director, opened its annual student exhibit last Friday in the Tobey gallery, 200 North Michigan avenue. It will continue through June 18. Among the sixty-five pieces which make up the exhibit are "Architectural Birds" and a beautiful relief, "Canterbury Pilgrims," by Peg Siddle; "Temptation," by Ernest Wanroof; "Pierre Marquette," by Bernard Frazier; animal studies by Bernard Bartnick; a formal group of deer by Jeanette Peterkin; "Portrait of Frances Weary," by Varonese Beatty; "The Cow That Jumped Over the Moon," by Lucile Hansen, and "Torso," by Julius Ayers.

From the children's Saturday morning class Cherry Sue Orr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carey Orr of cartoon fame, shows a friendly group of bunnies and a centerpiece for her bird fountain at home.

The flower show in Diana court, Michigan Square building, is one of the very beautiful events of the month. In the studio gallery, Increase Robinson, director, an exhibit of flower paintings is being held in conjunction with the real flowers showing just outside. The two exhibits will continue through June and will be enlarged upon at greater length next Sunday in this column. They are worth much praise. Meanwhile, do not miss enjoying them. They will repay several visits.

The exhibition of Modern Architecture opened last Wednesday evening in the Sears galleries, sixth floor, Sears-Roebuck building, Van Buren and State streets. Its opening made it too late for use in today's column.

The Knoedler galleries offer a superb opportunity to view unique etchings, the dry point portraits by Walter Tittle of the twenty-five leading statesmen who took part in the conference on a limitation of armaments in Washington. They will remain on view during June.

John W. Norton has painted two murals for the Chicago Normal college, which were presented by six classes of the college as a composite class gift.

Abuse Is English Reward for Merit

LONDON.—(AP)—There is no equal to the "cacophony of abuse" to which a British chancellor of the exchequer must submit when he introduces an economy bill, Winston Churchill told the commons.

"I made a calculation after my poor little economy bill of 1926 by which I tried to save £17,000,000 [gold $85,000,000]," he said.

"The word 'robbery' was used 87 times, 'confiscation' 10, 'plunder' 10, 'steal' 3, 'raid' 11, 'theft' 2, 'filch' 1, 'grab' 1, 'cheat' once—the present foreign secretary [Sir John Simon] contributing that one—'breach of faith' 19, 'betrayal' 5, 'outrage' 1, 'infamy' 1, 'rascality' 1, 'perfidy' 1, 'mean' 15, 'paltry' 1, 'despicable' 1, 'shabby' 1, and 'dastardly' 3.

"A new one was introduced after the general election when the present chancellor of the exchequer was pilloried for having 'pinched the babies' milk.'"

Mellon Settles Into Routine of London Duties

Quiet Dignity of Embassy Disappoints Seekers After Lavish Display.

LONDON.—(AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, new American ambassador to the court of St. James's, has settled down to quiet comfort in the embassy home at Prince's Gate, facing the green of Hyde Park.

MR. MELLON.

Despite his 77 years his health is good, and the rigors of an unusually ill tempered English spring have not disturbed him. With his art collection, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, Ambassador Mellon finds the London he has known for fifty years much like home.

He was busy, but perhaps a little lonely, in the big official residence until Mrs. Bruce arrived. A staff of eighteen servants was on duty when he got there. He brought his own valet and chef.

Disappoints Newspapers.

Simplicity and quiet dignity characterize the days at the embassy home. British newspapers insisted on heralding the return of lavish social affairs, as in the days of the late Whitelaw Reid. Mr. Mellon is disappointing them. Even the serving of wine will be chiefly a diplomatic ceremonial, although the ambassador is a clear-cut "wet" on the embassy liquor issue.

The new ambassador's recreation has been arranging the paintings he brought from Washington. The walls of the large reception rooms have been done over from white to soft gray to make a suitable background.

Evenings Spent at Home.

Only paintings on canvas were brought to London. Those backed by wood panels and likely to warp in the damp climate were left in America.

The ballroom has been hung with English works, Gainsboroughs and Romneys; the library with Dutch pictures, including Mr. Mellon's Rembrandts. His precious Spanish Goya has a special hanging.

The ambassador spends his evenings mostly at home. Theaters and concerts haven't attracted him as yet. He hasn't made definite plans for the summer, but he may take a country place. It's one of the things to do in England.

some variety that I don't know. But they were lovely. This year the fountain is bare. I made inquiries. These hanging grasses need fertilizer in the spring of the year. In the spring of this year the treasury employes raised their aesthetic noses in the air, objected to the fertilizer interlude. No fertilizer, no lovely grasses. And so the fountain is bare.

Get over the idea that Washington is a woman's town. It's a man's town. Every woman is introduced everywhere not as Mrs. So-and-So but as the wife of Mr. So-and-So. She takes her social rank from her husband's official rank. I knew all these details. Nevertheless I admit I was rather startled to come upon a society column notice here the other day which told of a nice luncheon that one Mrs. Roy Roland Gill had given and which added, seriously, that Mrs. Gill "is the wife of the chairman of the executive committee of the Columbia Basin Irrigation league."

Suicide Wave Is Problem for Riviera Police

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NICE.—An epidemic of suicide is ravaging the Riviera. More than sixty suicides were recorded between Cannes and Mentone during the last two months and the number of people ending their lives seems to be increasing in catastrophic proportions.

The main cause, of course, for such a suicide craze on the Riviera is attributed to heavy gambling losses combined with a slight touch of business depression. Love comes next, and, in most cases this kind of suicide goes by pairs.

Despite the efforts of the police and municipal authorities to prevent people from ending their lives, it seems that a kind of acute "suicide fever" has gripped the Azure coast. Even the "anti-suicide" club which was created in Nice a few months ago to improve the morale of unfortunate gamblers is also impotent and a real suicide mania has developed.

British Wits Nimbly Offset Drinking Bans

Enjoy Liquor Legally Just About Where and When They Please.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON—[Special.]—Although the stern Mrs. Grundy and Dora, her more clever post-war stepchild, still live in our midst, Londoners are slowly learning how to escape their vigilance.

Dora determines the times and places one can drink liquor. At the licensed places one must stop drinking at a certain hour, even though all other festivities may proceed. But it appears that at the nonlicensed places drinking can go on indefinitely, provided the liquor was brought there by the people who are consuming it.

We now have a new type of nonlicensed roadside refreshment house in which alcoholic beverages can be consumed without interference or supervision from any authority the whole round of the clock. These places are springing up like mushrooms all over the home counties. The proprietors provide dinners, suppers, a car park, a dance floor, a band, and all the appurtenances—except one—of what Kai Lung styles a high class profligacy. The missing link is hard liquor and this the visitor is invited to bring with him with perfect impunity. If brought liquor is consumed on licensed premises it is an offense, and conviction and punishment quickly follow.

That is one way of being gay in spite of Dora.

Others Take to the River.

Another is to join a boat on the river. Old Father Thames is on the side of the revelers. As soon as a boat casts off from the pier the bar is open even though the public house on land is closed. And so we have London's show boat, the Royal Eagle, carrying 2,000 merrymakers from Westminster pier to the mouth of the Thames and back each day, leaving Mrs. Grundy and Dora watching sourly from the bank.

And still you don't have to go into the home counties or onto the river for a drink if you know your way around. A new night club hostess makes it possible to drink at all hours and stay within the law. She is a Mayfair shopping agent. You ask her to buy your champagne and you say you will call for it on such and such a night. Whenever you like you ring the bell at her address to call for your goods. A footman shows you in and announces you to the hostess, who might, from appearances, be a duchess.

"I am so glad you have come," says she. "Would you like to dance?"

And so you dance and ask for supper, which is supplied by a catering company, and call for your champagne. Later your agent gives you your bill and you pay her—no law can prevent you. In addition to the items you have ordered there is one pound storage fee—or the price you pay to drink legally "after hours."

London is not so dull.

Auction Sales Continue.

Along with the general heightening of social and business activity during the London season we have some remarkable sales in the auction rooms. On June 13 and 14 at Sotheby's, the executors of Alexander Carlyle, nephew of the great Thomas, will sell his uncle's effects. Furniture, pictures, china, and books from Carlyle's home at 5 Cheyne walk, Chelsea, are in the sale. There is a very rare offprint from Frasier's magazine of "Sartor Resartus," with an inscription, "To Jane W. Carlyle, this little book, a little milestone in a desolate, confused, yet not [as we hope] unblessed pilgrimage we make in common, is, with heart's gratitude, inscribed by her affectionate T. C."

Also Carlyle's first present to his future wife—a copy of Schiller's "Don Carlos." The wrought iron necklace that Goethe sent as a wedding present to Mrs. Carlyle is here. There are three volumes of Turgenev's works inscribed with the author's "homage." There is a letter from Dickens about an appeal being made on behalf of a goddaughter of Samuel Johnson. A Thackeray curiosity is a signed sketch of Thackeray on a tight rope inscribed "Equilibrist and tight rope dancer in ordinary to the nobility and literati." A Ruskin correspondence also is up for sale.

All household gods to seek new homes.

Brook house, the palatial home which Lady Louis Mountbatten inherited from her father, Sir Ernest Cassel, is to be sold, and the contents came under the hammer the last of May. Collectors of old Dresden porcelain flocked to the rooms. One hundred and seventy-two items appeared. It has been many years since so important and extensive a collection of Meissen came into the market. Precious examples of French furniture also found new homes at prices approaching what they cost 200 years ago.

Passing of a Court Favorite.

The passing of court favorites has always been a subject of interest, but to animal loving England the passing of Cora is a blow—and "to think the prince would do it!" Cora is the tiny Cairn terrier, the favorite pet and constant companion of the prince of Wales. She has been "retired" and sent to live in the country—Fort Belvedere, to be exact. Her place has been taken by another and even smaller Cairn, called Jacques, and he has his own special corner everywhere the prince goes, even in his private airplane.

Cora's devotion caused the trouble. Whenever the prince was out of England Cora mourned. The prince couldn't take her out of England because he would have to leave her in quarantine for six months every time he wanted to return. When he was in Africa more than three years ago Cora mourned so much that the queen sent a special car to fetch her to Buckingham palace. When the prince went to South America Cora was assured the companionship of John and Hamish, her playmates at York house, but no one could console her. The enforced partings were too much for Cora and, some say, the prince. Jacques seems to be more philosophic.

American Actress Starring in London Wears Cotton Frock

LONDON.—(AP)—Peggy Wood, pretty American acress starring in the London version of "Cat and Fiddle," has brought a message from the southern cotton fields to the women of Mayfair.

She wears a cotton piqué evening dress with such good effect in the last act of her show that London couturiers report a considerable sale of similar models to other women.

The piqué evening dresses, much of the beauty of which is in their starched unblemished white, show up particularly well in artificial light of the ballroom.

They have an expensive air, rumpling so easily that they can be worn only once without laundering, and hence probably will remain a luxury.

Most models shown thus far are from the shop of the French designer, of cotton cloth of French manufacture from lint imported from the southern states, but the designer in point is undertaking manufacture in England of British woven fabrics.

The piqué seems to do up best for evening in plain, severe designs, with a few piqué covered buttons, perhaps, but no ruffles or fluff.

This last touch is given to Peggy's gown by a boa made of piqué bits, and with all the appearance of feathers of some strange, exotic bird. Only plain white has been shown thus far.

British Spend 60 Millions on Fox Hunting

LONDON.—[U. P.]—Between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 is spent on fox hunting in Britain every year, says the British Field Sports society.

This figure includes the maintenance of homes in the country, and many other expenses incidental to hunting.

For hunting alone the cost is estimated at $22,750,000, an extremely large proportion of which goes to the country over which the hunt is conducted.

For instance, agriculture takes a toll of about $8,750,000 for fodder and other supplies; the shoeing smith and the saddler draw $2,000,000; veterinary surgeons $425,000; wages absorb $9,890,000; clothing $590,000; other hunt expenses $250,000; while $100,000 goes to the revenue for licenses.

Grooms and hunt servants alone number over 20,000, whose wages are circulated in the villages.

Nothing is here taken into account of the cost of the maintenance of the supply of 40,000 hunters or kennel costs to maintain a pack of hounds in the necessary state of efficiency.

Some idea of the huge proportions of the industry of fox hunting, which has just closed to reopen next November, can be gained from the fact that there are 200 packs of foxhounds in England, Scotland, and Wales which keep no fewer than 6,869 couples of hounds.

When Chicago Was Young

do, and says they should have the vehicle his father presented him with, in the fifties. He thinks they would find then that "Life is real, like is earnest." He calls the wheel he had to propel a "unicycle"—a wheelbarrow, of course. O, well, I don't feel that this new hobby will hurt the young men. I'm glad they don't have to work quite so hard as the previous generation had to.

Speaking of picnics reminds me to copy for you a four line verse that Will put at Martha's place at breakfast today, cut from the morning paper. Jokes about Sarah Bernhardt's fragile form never lose their savor, apparently. Newspaper writers seem to enjoy ringing the changes on the subject:

"How slim is Sarah Bernhardt,
Pa——
That shadow of a shade?"
"My boy, she's just about as thin
As picnic lemonade."

I am trying to read Browning this summer, preparatory to joining a Browning class at the Chicago Woman's club next winter. But I find him very difficult to understand. It sometimes seems as if he willfully made his meaning cloudy, but I suppose it is just his way of writing. I saw an extract from a letter he wrote recently, in which he said: "I can have little doubt that my writing has been, in the main, too hard for many I should have been pleased to communicate with, but I have never designedly tried to puzzle people, as some of my critics have supposed. On the other hand, I never pretended to offer such literature as should be a substitute for a cigar or a game at dominoes to an idle man. So perhaps, on the whole, I get my deserts and something over—not a crowd, but a few I value more."

I intend to struggle on, hoping for a little more ease in understanding him, as time goes on.

We had such a delightful evening this week, out at "Oakton," the beautiful summer villa of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Kirk, about two miles south of Evanston. It was an elegant reception, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Starr Kirk [the bride was a Miss Condit]. The beauty of the house and the arrangements made for the comfort of the guests made one almost feel that it would be possible and pleasant to live so far out in the country.

As we approached the house by an avenue which was almost completely arched by the dense foliage of oak trees, "Oakton" seemed like a fairy palace. Oxyhydrogen lights had been placed in the yard, so that we could see the driveway, and the scene was brilliant. The extensive grounds are like a park, very beautifully laid out by a landscape gardener. Fountains were playing and the lights flashed on the water, as it rose and fell. Occasional fire balloons were sent up, to add to the effect, which was really lovely.

It wasn't a large company—about a hundred, I should say. Many were Evanston people. The supper was as elegant as anything we have had here in Chicago, and I think I never saw a handsomer centerpiece than the one that stood in the middle of the dining table. It represented a tower of flowers, with a base composed of horns of plenty. A feature of the centerpiece was a number of swans, made of white tea roses. I had a nice visit with Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Hatfield, who always do me good. Dr. Hatfield is a fine Methodist minister.

Prof. R. L. Cumnock, whose fame as an elocutionist has spread far and wide, was present and gave some excellent recitations. The Hoges of Evanston, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hamline [Mrs. Hamline so very lovely]; George Murison [incorrigible bachelor, who always jokes about Martha's having pierced his heart and then having left him desolate], lovely Miss Cora Arrick—these were some of the pleasant people we saw, aside from the Kirk family. There were Kirks to the right of us, Kirks to the left of us, for Mr. James S. Kirk has six or seven sons. What fun it must be to be one of such a large family group! A joy Martha has missed, as I did.

I think this is all my news for this time. We shall hope to see you in August, in the east, or out here.

Loving greetings from your Chicago friends, Especially
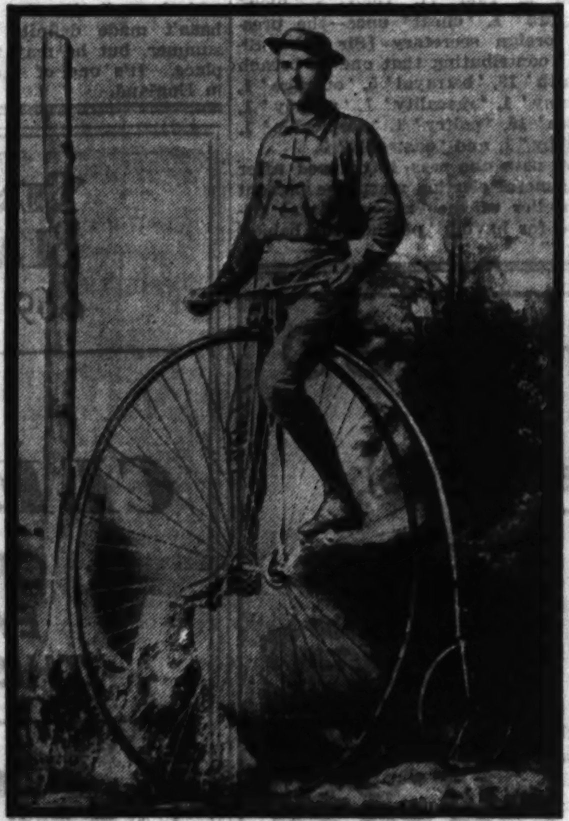
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.



This picture, from a Princeton, Ill., family album, shows a rider of the "high bike" popular in the early eighties, his foot resting on the photographer's "property" tree, giving an illusion of dashing gayly along the highway at a pace of twelve miles an hour. This young man is Carl Kendall, of a well-known Princeton family.

Footnotes.

Wilhelm Bodemann, secretary of the Chicago Veteran Druggists' association, writes: "You ask for recollections of the Garfield convention of 1880. I reported this convention for the Springfield [Mass.] Republican. The heat and the jam, at that convention were so terrible that I could not get out of the meeting till about 2:30 a. m. In my report, I said the Grant followers were so bitterly opposed to Garfield that I predicted Garfield would be assassinated within six months. The Springfield Republican printed this prophecy, and added that the correspondent must have been suffering from the heat and the riot. When Garfield was assassinated, July 2, 1881, the Republican said: 'In reprinting our correspondent's prophecy, we deeply regret that this prophecy came true.'"

Has any reader a memory of riding a high bicycle? Send in stories of your experiences in "burning up the roads," in the eighties.

James S. Kirk, mentioned in Martha's letter, was the progenitor of the Kirk family, so well known in Chicago. One son of this pioneer survives, Edward Kirk, who lives in California. The present day Kirks of this city are grandchildren.

Prof. James T. Hatfield of Evanston is a son of Dr. R. M. Hatfield, a guest at the Kirk reception in 1880.

Miss Emma Lee Walton of Chicago, sends a hymn sung by her mother at Sunday school, more than sixty years ago:

"I'll awake at dawn on the Sabbath day,
For 'tis wrong to doze holy time away;
And, with lessons learned, this shall be my rule,
Never, never, never to be late at school."

Miss Walton also sends a good story about Dr. David Breed, once pastor of the Church of the Covenant [now the Seminary church] on Belden avenue. Dr. Breed, in preaching a Memorial day sermon, said: "The old soldier took down his musty rusket, I mean his musty rusket; that is, he took down his musty rusket, I mean his musty—well, he took down his GUN!"

W. C. McKesson of Chicago writes: "My father, the Rev. J. M. McKesson, was a Methodist circuit rider in Iowa, in the early fifties, and I have often heard him tell how he induced Dr. Hiram W. Thomas to enter the ministry. My father, who coached him during his first efforts at preaching, described him as a raw, awkward, red haired country boy, with much sincerity and frankness. In the latter part of the seventies, my father visited Dr. Thomas, who invited him to preach in his pulpit, introducing him as 'the man who made me.' I have lived in Chicago for thirty years and have often heard Dr. Thomas preach at a loop theater."

Libbie C. Emmons, Sterling, Ill., sends an interesting story, too long to print in full, of a trip her father made to Chicago, in early days, hauling grain to market. With other farmers, he stopped at a country tavern at night. They were much troubled with vermin, which infested the beds. All except one man told a tale of woe. He, apparently, had had no trouble. He explained: "O, about 10 o'clock I sneaked down to the kitchen and got me a big ham rind, and greased me, from head to toe. Then, I slept like a log." With loud laughter, the travelers went down to breakfast, which consisted of ham and eggs, pancakes, pie, and coffee, after which they hitched up their teams and went on their way, down the Rock River valley.

Iowa Baronet Finds Peace in Rural England

BERRYNARBOR, England.—(AP)—Sir Reginald Wolseley, who stepped out of his "lift" into a baronetcy, is finding it a little difficult to forget America and its "wonderful elevators."

But Lady Wolseley, who went out to Iowa, where he was an elevator man, married him and brought him back to England would be glad to. The persistence of American reporters wasn't any fun for her

SIR REGINALD WOLSELEY.
[Acme Photo.]

Since their return they have sedulously avoided all publicity, except the mild spotlight their position in this tiny Devonshire village gives them, and have been living a life of calm and seclusion.

They live in a quaint, old world cottage, perched on a hillside in a tiny winding lane hardly wide enough to admit a baby automobile.

A thick spreading thatch roof overhangs its whitewashed cob walls and the front of the cottage is overgrown with rambler roses and trailing evergreens.

One reaches the cottage by climbing a series of rounded, steep steps, with grass and moss growing in the interstices of their slate colored surfaces.

Quaint, Old World Air.

The hatch door is black oak and a hanging brass bell engraved with a Latin greeting adds to the quaint, old world air of the place.

A ring brought Sir Reginald to the door, and Lady Wolseley soon appeared.

"We only desire to be left in peace," she said. "We are very happy and this is a home of peace. Our only wish is to be left alone, to live quietly just as other people do."

But if the exterior of the cottage is old world, the interior is distinctly new world. It has a lounge, dining room, a study, a new bathroom and bedrooms on the first floor. The walls are paneled in dark oak and solid beams intersect the ceilings.

Cheerful Interior.

Oil paintings, a great deal of brassware, and old fashioned china are prominent features, and in the fireplace cheery logs burn brightly.

Through the leaded casement windows one gets charming views of the rising ground, on either side and of the meadowland in front, where lambs gambol beside their sedate mothers.

From their little garden there is a pleasing view of the entire village, with smoke curling from the chimney tops and the church tower almost at your side.

For the most part their lives are uneventful. They are trying to fit themselves quietly into the picture of English life here.

Lady Wolseley takes a great interest in church work, teaches the infants' class on Sunday and recently opened a bazaar.

Cruise Offers Sightseeing in Romantic Cities

Colorful and Paradoxical Central America Is a Delight to Traveler

DURING these unsettled times it seems to be the near-at-home cruises that are attracting travelers. One trip that is finding particular favor—especially with the sea-goers who are tired of the traveled trails—is the voyage around the coast to the Central Americas and California.

Fortnightly cruises sail from New York through the Panama canal to Costa Rica, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico, and California. These cruises combine pleasant days at sea with sightseeing in romantic cities along the way.

Panama City, standing as it does at the crossroads of the world, is a fascinating place of varied attractions; cafés with a Montmartre atmosphere; magnificent hotels with dining and dancing Spanish style; exciting races; gay bathing beaches; ruins with a history closely linked to the beginning of our own civilization; and shops run by Chinese, Japanese, and even Hindu, where everything from Panama hats to French perfumes can be purchased at bargain prices.

A Paradoxical Country.

Costa Rica, the next foreign country visited, is a paradoxical place where gayly painted oxcarts with mahogany disk wheels still clatter over the cobbles, and modern schools are the boast of every town; where great coffee groves thrive on the sides of once destructive volcanoes; and where an up-to-date bathing casino and a modern flying field share the town with old Spanish plazes.

In Corinto, port of Nicaragua, macaws and parrots chatter in the trees; brilliantly turned out Negroes sell alligator pears as large as one's head; and shops feature panther skins and bright-hued birds. Across Nicaragua almost from ocean to ocean stretches a string of lovely lakes and rivers which engineers dream of making into another great canal.

El Salvador is the smallest and most thickly populated of all the Central Americas, but she is a little evergreen paradise. Lying at the foot of coffee clothed volcanoes that stretch from one end of the country to the other is San Salvador, the capital. It is a radiant sunny city of old Spanish buildings and splendid modern edifices—low buildings constructed of wood and corrugated iron, as a protection from earthquakes. Smart clubs and hotels give the town an air of sophistication and, with their fine food and strange marimba bands, do their bit to make the traveler's stay a pleasant one.

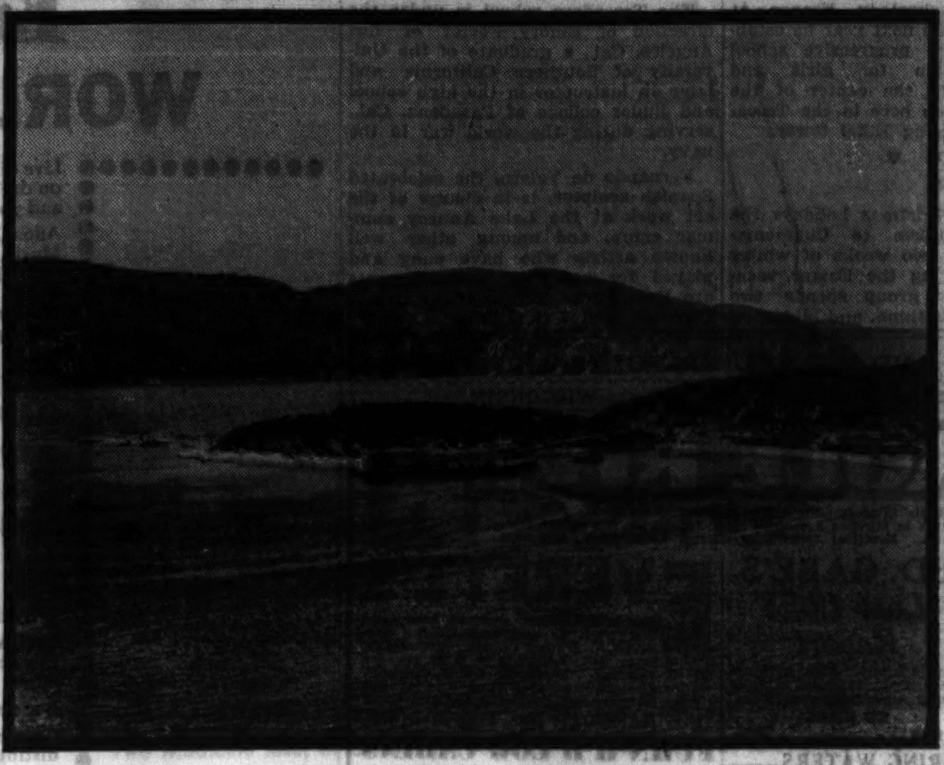
Relics of Indian Civilization.

Handsomest of the Spanish Americas, perhaps, is Guatemala, the "Switzerland of America," a land of majestic mountains and sapphire lakes where fantastically colored monoliths, colossal ruins, and earthen pyramids bear witness to the existence of an Indian civilization long before the Christian era. This country is still 60 per cent pure Indian and offers the most perfect picture of primitive Indian life to be seen anywhere in the world today. An 80 mile trip to Guatemala City and motor rides into the hills reveal Indian villages where housewives still grind the meal for their tortillas and weave the cloth for their quipiles.

In Mexico, the last foreign country visited, are bull rings that remind one of Spain, pyramids as mysterious as the ones in the old world, and canals and floating gardens more romantic than Venice can boast.

Los Angeles, one of the ports of call in California, will attract "front pagers" from all over the world this year, for in this favored city—the first two weeks in August—will be held the famous Olympic games.

A Port of Call on the Saguenay River



A steamer approaching Tadoussac wharf, on the Saguenay river. This quaint French-Canadian village has become a favorite of summer vacations from two countries.

Quaint Village in Canada Becomes Popular Resort

TADOUSSAC, Quebec.—The summer season here will begin on Dominion day, July 1, with the opening of the Hotel Tadoussac.

A few of the summer cottages are already occupied and since the opening of the Montreal-Saguenay river service more cottagers have been arriving every week. With the opening of the hotel and the regular steamer service five times a week the holiday season will be in full swing.

Tadoussac has enjoyed increasing popularity in the last few seasons and has become known as a family holiday resort. Although easily accessible by steamer and car, it remains almost untouched by civilization.

Tadoussac is a port of call on the Saguenay river cruise. The proof of this quaint French-Canadian village's appeal is shown by the number of steamer passengers who, after a passing glimpse of the picturesque surroundings, arrange to stop over.

The Straight and Narrow.

HAVANA—Strangers in Havana, roaming the narrow little streets of the old part of the city, should keep an eye on approaching street cars. The sidewalks and streets are so narrow you may have to lean against a wall to let the trolleys pass.

Bolivia Stabilizes Coin by Tying it to Tin, British Pound

LA PAZ, Bolivia.—(AP)—Bolivia is trying to stabilize its monetary unit, the boliviano, by tying it to the price of tin and the British pound sterling.

Tin is the staff of national life here, the country producing a fourth of the world's supply.

The national control commission has established a sliding scale by which there are 20 bolivianos to the British pound when tin is 90 pounds a ton and 15 bolivianos to the pound when tin goes up to 150 pounds.

In American money this means that when tin is $240 a ton the boliviano is worth 17 cents and if the metal goes to $540 it rises to 25.3 cents.

Lake Excursions to Start Next Sunday

STEAMSHIP picnic days are here again. Instead of starting the last week in June, as they have done in other years, the lake excursion steamers will open their season next Sunday.

Patrons will walk the gangplank before 10 a. m., when the St. Joseph-Benton Harbor daylight excursion gets under way. Sailors will spend this week polishing the last bit of glistening brass and painting the spars gleaming white, grooming the ships for the season's seventy voyages across Lake Michigan to the Michigan Riviera.

By the end of the week following the full fleet will be in operation.

Michigan Fun but Few Hours from Chicago

Joys of Land and Water Vacation Available at Reasonable Prices.

VACATION dollars may be fewer this year, but they are going to buy a lot more. Transportation companies have reduced their rates to nearby points and most of the resorts, hotels, and tourist homes have done likewise . . . the price of gas is down and better roads have been built.

Leaving Chicago for Michigan one can miss much of the congested traffic district after leaving Gary by taking the new Dunes relief highway ,a four lane cement road that meanders through a fine territory, eliminating many of the dangerous grade crossings and joining the coast road at the Michigan state line.

Those who desire a wandering vacation under the shelter of canvas will find municipal tourist camps, state parks, and thousands of private camping places along every highway . . . either along the 8,100 miles of hard surfaced roads or on the 70,000 miles of fine county and township roads . . . and these roads cross hundreds of streams or skirt beautiful lakes whose banks make delightful stopping places. The parks have all the conveniences.

Should one want a water vacation with all its sports, Michigan has over 5,000 lakes and 2,000 streams, besides having a coastline longer than the coast line of the United States from Maine to Florida . . . and this coastline is a bathing beach of clean, white sand for most of its length. Along the coast are harbors and connecting inland lakes offering shelter for all classes of watercraft. In these harbors and connecting lakes throughout the summer are organized programs of water sports . . . starting at Saugatuck late in June.

On nearly all the lakes boats and canoes may be obtained for sailing, rowing, and paddling, and there are rivers such as the St. Joseph, Pere Marquette, Muskegon, Manistee, Boardman, and Jordan which wander from 100 miles to over 350 miles through interesting canoeing territory. These streams offer bass, pike, and trout fishing. Some of the streams have organized boat trips covering various distances, where boats, guides, and equipment are furnished at reasonable rates.

Chicago young people, who have but two weeks for their summer vacation can step on bus, boat, or train Saturday afternoon and in a few hours be pleasantly situated in a vacation land that offers beaches, boating, dancing, fishing, and all other sports and social activities.

They Always Attract

A black bear and her two cubs in Yellowstone. The bears, feeding near the hotels, lodges, and permanent camps, are matters of never failing interest among the visitors to this, the greatest of all the national parks.

Boys and Girls Attend Camp High in Alps

American Youngsters Carry on Their Studies While Parents Tour.

PARIS.—[U. P.]—On the shores of Lake Annecy, high in the French Alps, an American has established a summer camp for boys and girls from 6 to 14 years of age, where parents traveling in Europe can leave them for a two months' vacation with the assurance that they will be taken care of. A staff of trained men and women will look after them and give them instruction in arts and crafts, the French language, and history.

In 1921 Donald R. MacJannet of Washington, D. C., started his first summer camp with only a small handful of boys and girls. The summer of 1931 the enrollment numbered 75 children and a staff of 25 assistants.

Secondary Schools.

It is MacJannet's idea to provide for American boys and girls in France the standard preparation for American secondary schools, combined with daily training in outdoor sports and a thorough instruction in spoken and written French. He was graduated from Tufts college in 1916, and later taught at the National Cathedral School for Boys in Washington, D. C., before enrolling in the air service during the world war.

In 1924 MacJannet opened the first Country Day school in France at St. Cloud, and the next year he established a modern progressive school and kindergarten for girls and younger boys in the center of the residential section here in the Trocadero gardens facing Eiffel tower.

Holiday Sports.

During the Christmas holidays the children are taken to Chamonix-Mont-Blanc for two weeks of winter sports, and during the Easter vacation a younger group spends two weeks boating, bathing, and hiking on the Riviera. Another group of older boys and girls and their parents are taken on a trip to Spain or northern Africa.

The Trocadero school is under the direction of Emory Foster of Los Angeles, Cal., a graduate of the University of Southern California and later an instructor in the high school and junior college of Pasadena, Cal., serving during the world war in the navy.

Fernando de Valero, the celebrated Spanish sculptor, is in charge of the art work at the Lake Annecy summer camp, and among other well known artists who have sung and played for campfire entertainments are Paul Parks, Edwin Ideler, Mario Chamlee, and Anton Billoti.

Gold Mining Days Revived by Colorado

Men and Women Wield Pans as Festivals Relive Scenes of the Seventies.

PARTLY by accident and partly by design, Colorado is staging this summer the greatest spectacle of gold mining days since the seventies; a circumstance that will add immeasurably to the interest of vacation visitors to that state.

The accidental part comes about through the shrinkage of the gold supply and the financial depression, which have resulted in the most extensive placer mining activities in Colorado for more than sixty years. Literally thousands of men and women—for the modern woman would dig gold—are to be found along all mountain streams from the Wyoming to the New Mexican line, wielding the gold pan or operating rockers and sluice boxes. When it became apparent that this movement was inevitable, citizens' unemployment committees in Denver, Pueblo, and Fort Collins organized placer mining schools in order that the greenhorns would have a better chance to make wages during the summer.

The schools have been limited to Colorado residents and designed merely as one method to lessen unemployment. In Denver, the city administration and public schools sponsored the school with the hope that most of those reverting to the gold days would be able to make day wages at least.

Of course, it is a truism that no mining engineer ever discovered a great gold camp; so out of this revived interest in mining may come a new discovery.

Reviving Romance.

Coincident with this rush, the University of Denver is to stage a play festival in July, reviving the beauty and romance of the gold days at Central City, forty miles west of Denver, where the first great mining camp in the state was discovered. The heirs of Peter McFarlane, who built the old stone opera house at Central City, have presented this old building to the university, which plans to hold annual play festivals there, partly to preserve the traditions of the gold days, and partly as a Little theater cultural movement.

Denver society is supporting the event and will dress in the costumes of the seventies, driving to the theater in ancient victories, buggies and whatnot used in the mountains before automobiles were dreamed of. Miss Lillian Gish, moving picture star, who made her first theatrical appearance on any stage at the Central opera house, when she was three years old, will head a professional cast in a revival of Camille, and the festival, lasting from July 16 to 21, will be directed by Robert Edmund Jones.

In addition to these activities tourists will see revival of gold mining at Cripple Creek and near the old ghost town of Buckskin Joe in South park, scene of one of the thrilling gold stampedes of the sixties. At the latter point several large mines have been reopened.

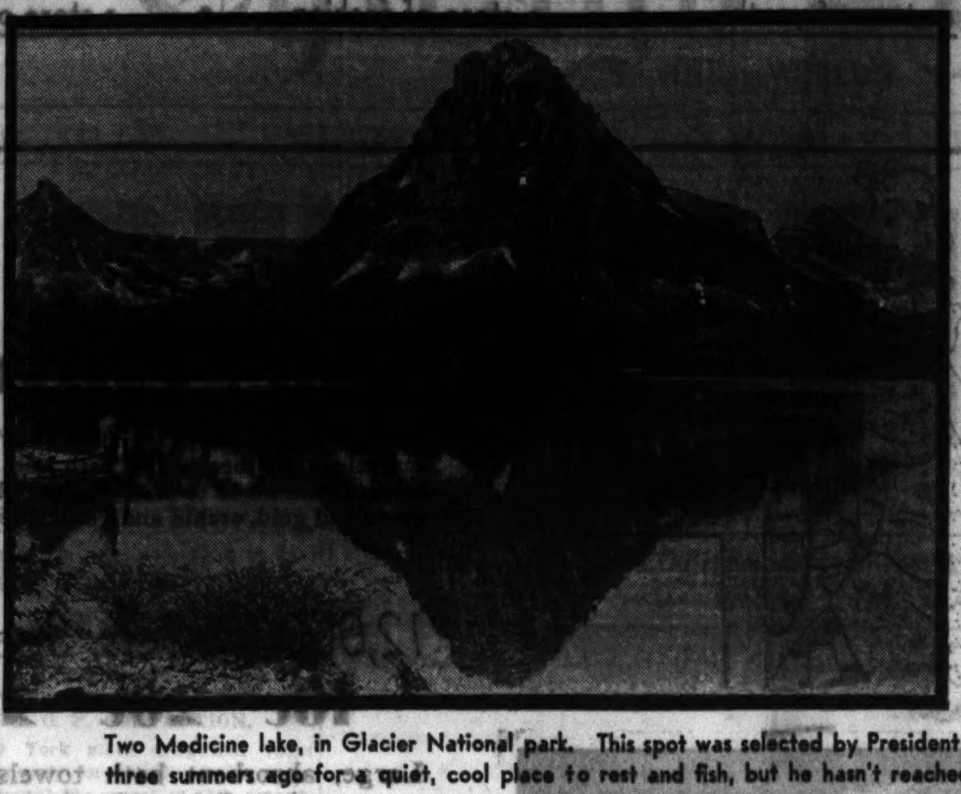
New Roads Opened.

Because of these developments and a tremendous expansion of the trunk motor roads in the last three years, during which time the state highway has averaged an annual expenditure of $10,000,000 on roads, hotel and resort owners in Denver, Colorado Springs and Estes park are anticipating a record tourist year. Several outstanding new roads will be opened this year. Perhaps the most notable is the new Trail Ridge road across the Continental divide in Rocky Mountain National park. It reaches an elevation of 12,185 feet and remains above timberline on the mountain tops for nine miles.

For those who do not wish to spend all their time driving, the old standbys of the Pike's peak region, the Denver mountain parks, the Boulder glacier region and Estes park have their dozens of short drives and well graded mountain trails where the hiker or the horseback rider may spend two weeks to advantage.

A Place for Pause and Reflection



Two Medicine lake, in Glacier National park. This spot was selected by President Hoover three summers ago for a quiet, cool place to rest and fish, but he hasn't reached it yet.

How to Get Those Visas, and How Much They Cost

GLOBE-TROTTERS will find that their foreign journeys will be more smooth-running and enjoyable if they arrange all the details before sailing. The matter of visas, for instance, which most countries require before permitting strangers to enter their borders.

It will be found most convenient to have the consular visas for the countries one intends to visit stamped in one's passport before leaving America. The visa for the country in which one debarks must, of course, be obtained here, but the real convenience lies in obtaining all the visas in the United States and being able to follow a whole foreign itinerary without delays and visits to foreign consuls. The travel company or steamship line through which the traveler has made his arrangements and purchased his steamship ticket will aid him in obtaining the necessary visas.

There have been many reductions in the fees in recent years. The charges are generally based on reciprocal agreements between the various countries. They are:

State Owned Plant in Turkey Will Use Russian Machines

ADANA, Turkey.—(AP)—Rumors that nationalist Turkey is veering toward state capitalism have been reinforced by official information that the government will build and run here a group of cotton goods factories.

The plant will be equipped with part of the $8,000,000 worth of machinery obtained from soviet Russia.

Turkey hopes to produce enough cotton cloth in the new factories to replace the $25,000,00 worth which she has been importing annually, a goodly portion of it made from Turkish grown cotton.

British King's Crown Back in Jewel House After Being Repaired

LONDON.—[U. P.]—Gorgeous gems, worth fabulous amounts, glitter and sparkle in the crown of the king of England, which has just undergone a thorough spring cleaning.

The crown now has been replaced in the jewel house at the Tower of London, where, behind thick iron bars, protected by intricate alarms and watchful attendants, it may be seen by the public.

Experts declare that it is more splendid now than at any other time in its history. It was taken from the tower, inconspicuously wrapped up in brown paper, about three months ago, for delicate repairs to the framework, which time had made too weak to hold the jewels. At the same time each jewel (there are more than 3,000 of them) was cleaned.

When the imperial state crown was made for Queen Victoria in 1838 the first consideration was necessarily lightness. The priceless and historic gems had to stay, and so the framework suffered. In the course of nearly a century it gradually sank, making the crown almost squat and so insecure that it was uncertain whether the jewels would keep their places, or the crown its shape, when worn.

The entire framework had to be taken to pieces and remade piece by piece in its true shape, with the addition of gold and other metals to enable the frame to bear the weight without yielding.

The crown is now actually an inch taller.

Belgrade Night Clubs Wrecked When Serbians Make Whoopee

By Edmund Taylor.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE.—Repeal of the police regulations against destruction of property and disorderly conduct is the way to restore prosperity, Belgrade cabaret proprietors believe, and they are conducting an energetic campaign to this end with the slogan, "Give the barkeep a break."

To understand this curious phase of the Balkan economic situation you must be familiar with a certain old Serbian custom which consists in making the rounds of the town's night clubs and paying the proprietors to let you break up the place. That's Balkan whoopee, or rather Serbian whoopee. All the races down in these parts are a little rough on furniture when they get full of "shlivovitz"—distilled prune brandy—but the Serbs are the only ones who have given this pastime the status of a major sport.

Despite efforts of the police to enforce a relative decorum the custom still prevails, only in a mild form. As long as you stick to glasses and chairs you are all right, but if you start throwing things at the chandeliers or try any serious demolishing, you go to jail.

Natives Think It Unfair.

The natives think this is rather unfair and the night club proprietors are distressed. Not only do they miss the fat reparations which used to enable them to refurnish their dives about twice a month, but they claim business in general has fallen off in consequence of the unwise restrictions. Serbs figure there's just no point to drinking if you can't break things up a bit.

Up until a few years ago—about the same time the Serbs started calling themselves Jugo-Slavs and decided the Balkans only began on the other side of the mountains—bar busting flourished in a big way, and the activities of the male Carrie Nations were one of the main attractions of Belgrade night life.

A wealthy pig rancher or a big pepper and onion man would come into town to blow a year's profits. He would hire a gypsy string orchestra to accompany him on his rounds and then start dropping in on his favorite cabarets, the orchestra trailing him down the street and playing as they went.

Bam! Goes the Chandelier.

The cabaret people could tell right away by the orchestra that a good customer had come in—meaning one who was going to break a lot—so they would clear the decks for him. The other customers would pull back their tables so as not to be hit by flying glass, the girl entertainers would huddle together in one corner, the orchestra would stop, and the owner would get out his pad and pencil.

Then the big shot would sit down at a table with his personal orchestra squatting at his feet and summon the owner.

"What's that chandelier worth?" he might begin. The barkeeper would multiply the current annuity of reparations in kind from Germany by the speed of light traveling through a vacuum, name the figure, and, zowie, a bottle would crash into the chandelier.

On a big night the customer might even ask for a price on the whole bar, send the boy out to the woodshed for an ax, and fall to with both hands. If he had any money left over he would ask what there was to break for around 100 dinar, break it, pay up, and walk out dead broke and happy, with his orchestra tooling behind him.

That's gone now, but there's still plenty of the picturesque about Belgrade's night life.

The Two Lowest Dives.

The two lowest dives in Belgrade are named the Amerika and the Britanica, the Amerika being the lower by several inches. The latter was so low, in fact, that a Serbian newspaper man assigned by the foreign office to shadow the correspondent refused to follow his quarry inside and remained at the door.

Situated in a murderous little alley off the river front, the Amerika looked in keeping with its reputation. Low ceiled like all such places in Belgrade, it was thick with rank tobacco smoke. It was about half filled with a motley collection of drunken, whiskered brigands, that looked like the scourings of an oriental port. There were Bosnians, more Turkish than the Turks in their fez and turned-up slippers; lean, sinister Montenegrins, with their dishlike red and black caps, with the tassel hanging behind; Albanians, Macedonians, Serbs in their gaudy leather jackets and astrakhan hats.

Plenty of women, too; respectable peasant wives in bright colored native costumes, shawled and subdued alongside their hard looking menfolk. All were drinking as fast as they could put it away, alternating glasses of white wine with cups of Turkish coffee and pounding the tables with their fists when the waiter didn't step lively enough. The Serbs are not a gentle race at any time, but these boys were paying good money to show each other how tough they were and they wanted value.

A Noisy Orchestra.

The main attraction, of course, was the dancing. On a low stage at one end was ranged an orchestra, half men, half women, with a number of wierd stringed instruments and something that looked very like Scottish bagpipe. Sitting with the orchestra were half a dozen dancing girls with kohla shadowed eyes, cheeks like the painted desert, flying hair, and all sorts of barbaric spangles and glitters. They had on tight fitting, sleeveless dresses with skirts that seemed quite proper by American standards, but it was evidently hot stuff to the local boys and the peasant wives had a mouthful to say about the hussies.

When the orchestra struck up—it sounded like a pack of coyotes on a moonlight night—half of the beauties sang and the other skipped around. The dance was made up of impromptu skipping like that varied with torturous body writhings reminiscent of the side show hoola-hoola. The theme of all the dances—war or sex, the two Balkan preoccupations—was expressed with disconcerting directness, but on the whole it was pretty tame stuff.

The music was unbelievably sad, a monotonous unending repetition of some barbaric chord now wailing, now screeching. It seemed a sort of racial dirge, expressing the sorrows of a thousand years, massacres and oppressions, famine, rapine, and the backbreaking labor of the peasant. The words to these songs were quite cheerful, though.

Breaks Six Beer Mugs.

Just about midnight I got a chance to see some of the old-fashioned Serbian whoopee. The door flew open with a bang and in lurched two roughly dressed Serbs. They sat down at a table and ordered two mugs of beer. The durnkest of the two drained his beer in one gulp, brought the mug down on the table with a crash that broke it into splinters and yelled for more beer almost before the waiter had turned his back.

In about ten minutes that Serb put down six mugs of beer and broke every one of them. The table was littered with splinters of glass, and both his fists were oozing blood. Then he ordered a plate full of those deadly little Serbian green peppers—they burn like sulphuric acid—and munched them until the sweat broke out on his forehead.

That got him warmed up and he started to work on the chair, kicking it around like a football or standing it on top of the table and knicking it off with his bloody fist. Finally he called for the damage—and when they say "damage" in Serbia they mean it—threw down a big bill and staggered out without waiting for the change.
